The Poor Scholar to his Pound Sterling.

BY EDWIN ARNOLD.

Gold! as I'm a starving sinner!
Saint Cecilia! what a chink!—
Fiftordain a regal dinner,—
Gods! I'll eat and drink.

Counter in the game of living,
Buying douce, knave, queen, and king,
Bartered, borrowed, given, giving,
Potent yellow thing!

New I feel, I see thy story,
Grecian, gold-won Danae!—
If one comes with grace and and glory
What must a shower be?

Oh, Fortuna! and this morning
Thou mightest have spared me my Catullus,
And stilled my landlady's shrill warning
Instead of sweet Tibullus.

Too late! I dined on old Homerus
And Plautus paid my washing bill;
Well! "carus," stranger, "tamen sorus."
Thou'rt most welcome still.

Nay, but stay! it can't be really
All a solid sterling pound,
I've seen so few—I'll ring it fairly;
Mammon! there's a sound!

Yea! by all the sands of Hermus,
By Appollo's golden bow,
See, my soul! these signs confirm us,
'Tis—where shall we go?

Venison's in, and at the Sceptre
Spiyendid! I know they dress it,
Had I two!—sh! sage preceptor,
"Amor nummi crescit."

For the potent charm that binds thee,
Shillings twenty! to my heart,
Is—whoever after finds thee,
Thou and I must part.

Lo! mine no—Hence, cares! in "mare Creticum"—down to Greenwich.
* * * * * * *
Is this after all but fairy
Land,—or lamb and spinnach?

Waiter, ho! "vinum deprome,—"?
Bring an amphora, I say—
Dost thou better seek to know me?
Doubtest thou I'll pay?

Lo! the coin! quick, varlet, quicker!
Napkined knave! mistrustful churl!—
Cleopatra-like, in liquor
Thus I melt my pearl.

The Devil in the Cellar.

In one of the small interior towns of New England, where the superstitions of our ancestors still possess a strong hold on the minds of the people, the facts occurred a few years since on which the following tale is founded:

An honest farmer and his family, preparing to celebrate thanksgiving at his wife's father's in an adjacent town, were hurried and confused exceedingly on the day preceding the festival, by the multiplicity of things which must be done before they could leave home with safety. The house must be banked up, and the gleanings of the harvest, cabbage, turnips, &c., put into the cellar that the external entrances might be closed for the season. Having carried in the vegetables, the boys were dispatched to the barn for straw to fill up the passage way, while the good man himself was busied on the other side of the house. An old ram, the horned patriarch of a large flock of sheep kept on the farm, got a taste of the scattered leaves of cabbage, unobserved, entered the cellar, and silently continued his feast. The avenue through which he had entered was immediately closed up, and all the necessary work and arrangements being completed the larger boys and girls set off in high glee, the dog running and barking before them, apparently as well pleased with the going to Grandpapa's as any of the happy group.

Soon after, the parent pair and their little ones having put out the fire and fastened the door and windows by many curious contrivances, to keep out thieves, and started on the same destination.

In the afternoon of the day following the festival, which had been kept under the paternal roof with many devout and jovial exercises, the family returned home, accompanied by many of their young cousins. Some of their youthful neighbors of both sexes were invited in, and a merry thanksgiving carousal was in full tide of successful operation, when one of the boys, who had been sent to the back shed with a lighted candle, returned with a horrified countenance, and burst blue, and threw so feeble a light on the sacred page, and the book trembled so much in the hand of the reader, that he could not distinguish one word from another. The little children cried and clung to the mother—and the lasses nestled closer to the favorite swains—and the whole house shook with the agitation of half demented inhabitants. One bright thought however occurred—a messenger was sent to the minister of the parish to "slay the devil!"

The parson, a man more celebrated for his good nature, piety and orthodoxy, than for talent and heroism, shook off his small bible into his pocket, put on his band surplice, that he might appear as formidable to his adversary as possible, and hastened to the relief of his distressed parishioners.

On coming to the house the reverend man was hailed as a deliverer, and implored by at least half a dozen voices at once, "to drive away the Devil." But a few moments were lost in making questions no one could answer, before the parson was pushed forward as a leader, lighted by the same penurious candle, into the cellar, the most courageous of the company keeping close behind him. When he reached the foot of the stairs, the eyes of fire and the shadowy outline of enormous horns magnified at least ten fold by the terrors of those who beheld them, removed all doubt if any had previously existed in his mind, as to the infernal nature of the being with whom he had to contend. The divine instantly fell upon his knees, and began to pray in his most fervent manner. The ram not understanding the man's motives, but supposing by the motion of his hands that he was daring him to a butting contest, he made a pass with all his might at his supposed adversary; but deceived by the swelling drapery, missed the slender body of the priest, and drawing hastily back to renew the attack, hooked his horns into the left side of his surplice and pulled the parson with him into the cellar! While thus in the power of his victorious foe, lost to hope as it regarded himself, the natural benevolence of his disposition burst forth in the exclamation—"Brethren; take care of yourselves; the Devil must get out!" This exhortation was better obeyed than any he had ever delivered from the pulpit his friends fled and left him to his fate.

Among the company was a shrewd young farmer, who from the first had supposed the fiend to be nothing more than some domestic animal, played a trick upon the fun, and willin; to see a comedy, he kept his thoughts to himself and pretended to sympathize with the other in their fears. He now thought it time to interfere and snatching a pitch pine knot blazing from the fire expressed his determination to rescue the parson or perish in the attempt. A lovely young damsel laid hold of the skirts of his coat—and the cry "don't" proceeded from every part of the room. Unheeding this kind concern for his safety, he rushed into the cellar, seized the ram by his horns, and dragging the struggling animal up stairs, calling on the astonished parson to follow him. The horned devil was led in triumph followed by the vanquished ecclesiastic into the midst of company. A momentary silence and hanging down of heads ensued. The past scene was too ludicrous to admit of sober reflection, and loud peals of laughter burst from every side, during which the ram was turned out door, the parson absented himself without ceremony, and the sports of the evening were resumed with bitter spirits than before.

A Russian Mistress Jealous of her Slave.

The Allgermine Zeitung of the 21st of July gives the following illustration of serfdom in Russia, as of recent occurrence:

Among the serfs owned by a widow lady was a girl who had been brought up with unusual indulgence, had received a superior education, and acquired manners far more cultivated than belonged to her class, to which advantages was added the natural gift of an attractive person. At an early age she was apprenticed at St. Petersburg to a French dressmaker, and having attained to some skill in the business, she was after a time offered profitable employment.

This her mistress permitted her to accept, on the usual payment of an obrok to herself in lieu of personal service. The girl conducted herself well in her situation, acquired a knowledge of the French language and formed habits of considerable refinement. Here she attracted the notice of an officer of the rank of colonel, who in due time proved his attachment by offering her marriage. The girl accepted the proposal, and nothing remained but to obtain her freedom from her mistress. The purchase money the colonel was willing to pay. This ought to have been regulated by the obrok which the girl had paid, calculated at so many years' purchase. The officer, however, was not disposed to cavil about the price, but on applying to the mistress, to whom he unfortunately explained his purpose, he received for an answer that on no terms whatever would she emancipate her slave.

Every effort was used to shake the resolution, which appeared unaccountable; but argument, entreaty and money were alike unavailing, and the lady remained inexorable, giving in the end the clue to her obstinacy by observing that she would never see her serf take precedence of her, as she would if married to a colonel, while she was herself but the widow of a major. The match was necessarily broken off, and the girl's prospect of happiness destroyed. To complete her misery, her mistress revoked her leave of absence, and ordered her immediately to return to her native village. Arrived in the village the unhappy girl, accustomed to the habits and comforts of civilized life, was clothed in the coarse garments of an ordinary peasant, and was forthwith ordered to marry a rough monjek of the same class, Revolting at this tyranny and refusing to obey, she was flogged, and though she still resisted for a while, a long continuance of cruel and degrading treatment conquered her in the end, and she was forced to submit to the miserable lot entailed upon her by the wretched jealousy of her heartless mistress.

Miscellany.

The Registrar General calculates that the population of London, if it goes on increasing in the same ratio as between 1841 and 1851, will rise to six million souls before the end of the present century. "The Metropolis," says a writer in one of the Reviews, already covers eighty thousand acres; it is bewildering to think of its prospective vastness when thus peopled. And some of these acres, in the heart of the Metropolis, are acquiring a money value probably never equalled in any other time or country. Small patches of ground, in the centre of the city, have lately been let on building-leases, at rentals which calculated at thirty years' purchase would amount to a price of £300,000, £500,000, and £800,000, per acre; nay in one case, the price thus calculated, actually exceeds one million sterling per acre. Gloomy forebodings occupy some minds on the subject of the future of this large Metropolis. History does not record such a stupendous civic population; and having no precedent to serve as its basis, men are at a loss to picture the possible economy of six millions of human beings in one city.—Globe.

Something very strange is reported to have occurred on Pea Ridge, Lincoln county, Tenn., a few weeks ago.—A horse and plough—so goes the story—which a farmer was using in his field, sunk and disappeared in the earth, leaving a hole to which no bottom has yet been found, and in which the farmer himself came near falling. His neighbours were called to the place, who, by means of ropes, let him down in search of the horse and plough, to the depth of forty or fifty feet, but the farther he went the larger the hole appeared, and he called to his friends to pull him up, which they did. Several unsuccessful attempts were afterwards made to fathom the hole.

A recent census of the British possessions in the Punjab, shows a native population of 12,717,321, of whom 5,252,574 are Hindoos, 7,364,947 Mohammedans. The otal number of towns and villages in the unjab is set down at 28,879. The four largest are Amritzur, with a population of 122,184; Lahore, 94,143; Peshawur, 53, 295, and Loodianah, 47,191. The average rate of population is 153.8 persons per square mile.—Globe.

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITIONS OF 1856.—The Vermont State Fair this year will be held at Burlington, Sept. 9—12; the Canada East Provincial Exhibition at Three Rivers, Sept. 16—18; the Canada West Provincial Exhibition at Kingston, September 23—26; the Ohio State Fair at Cleveland, September 23—26; the Illinois State Fair at Alton, Sept. 30—Oct. 3; the Michigan State Fair at Detroit, Sept. 30—Oct. 3; the New York State Fair at Watertown, Sept. 30—Oct. 3, and Wisconsin State Fair at Milwaukee, October 8—10.

POISONING—A dreadful affair took place last Sunday in Blenheim. A person who sometime before had become a widower with six children, had again married, and persuaded his wife last week to take a distant journey. He preached twice on the Sabbath day, and returned home to his family at night. As they were going to bed, he gave to each of the six children a draught of something very bitter, a portion of which the eldest contrived, whilst his father's back was turned, to squirt from his mouth. The old man finished the affair by drinking a deep draught of the same liquid himself. In the morning the whole family, father and children, were found dead or senseless, and it was only by zealous and unflinching perseverance that the oldest was restored to life, and told the above tale. The poison the unhappy man had used, was strychine. It now becomes a public duty to prevent the sale of this murderous drug in any apothecary's shop, for it is of no use but for murder. —Gait Reporter.

IMPORTANT TO TAVERN KEEPERS.—The opinion obtains amongst persons not conversant with the law, that the proprietors of hotels and taverns, are not responsible for the safety of property which may be committed to their care by travellers. A case disposed of at the Police Court on Wednesday is in point and settles the question, as far as the Mayor's opinion on the subject is concerned. A pedler named Morris McCormick left his trunk in charge of a tavern keeper in Richmond street, and requested him to take charge of it. The trunk contained $36.00 in bills and $27,00 in silver. On the subsequent Monday McCormick opened the trunk and discovered that $36, had been taken. The tavern keeper admitted that he had taken the trunk in charge, but stated that McCormick had not told him that it contained money. The defendant was ordered to pay to complainant $36.00 that being the amount abstracted.—Free Press.

The British Government having finally resolved to send another expedition to the Arctic regions to make final search for the remains or official records of Sir John Franklin and his party, the Admiralty have in the fullest and most flattering manner offered Dr. Kane the command. He has heretofore declined it; but (says the Washington Union, the strong inducements held out in connection with lately renewed appeals from Lady Franklin, the officers of the British Geographical Society, and the Ministry, all combine towards inducing him to reconsider his answer, and it may be that he is destined to again venture upon the enterprise of settling forever the geography of the North Pole, while he performs the last offices for the lost navigators.

Horn Tooke ridiculed the practice of sea bathing, and said if any of the seal species were sick it would be as wise for a fish physician to tell them to go on shore—Parsons declared that sea bathing was only reckoned healthy because many persons have been "known to survive it!" but Sheridan's objection to salt water was most quaint—"Pickles," said he, "don't agree with me."

Mr. Jones have you got a match? Yes sir, a match for the devil; there she is mixing dough," Jones pointed at Mrs Jones, and then put for the front yard. The last we saw of him he was putting down the road, closely pursued by a red headed lady with a cistern pole.

A ROYAL QUANDARY.—On the first consignment of Seidlitz Powders to the capitol of Delhi, the monarch was deeply interested in the accounts of the refreshing box. A box was brought to the King in full court, and the interpreter explained to his majesty how it was to be used. Into a goblet he put the twelve blue papers, and having added water, the king drank it off. This was the alkali, and the royal countenance expressed no sign of satisfaction. It was then explained that in the combination of the two powders lay the luxury; and the twelve white powders were quickly dissolved in water and as eagerly swallowed by his majesty; with a shriek that will be remembered, while Delhi is numbered with the kingdoms of the past, the monarch rose, staggered, exploded and, in his full agonies, screamed "Hold me down!" Then rushing from the throne fell prostrate on the floor. There he lay during the long continued effervescence of the compound, spurting like ten thousand pennyweights of imperial pop, and believing himself in the agonies of death; a melancholy and humiliating proof that kings are mortal.

"Mary, you were naughty this morning," said a kind old lady to a little girl whom she had taken under her care," but you must learn your lesson. I will leave you for a short time, and when I come back I hope to find you a good girl." Mary was left in tears and in a very ill humor; but on the old lady's return the tears had given place to smiles, and Mary, running up to her aunt, exclaimed in great glee. "Dear aunt, kiss me! for Mary will never be naughty again; Mary has burned that nasty book which made her so naughty this morning."

PHANTOM TRAIN.—We understand that numbers of our citizens, and persons living in the country on the line of railroad, have been considerably mystified and no little alarmed, by a singular fact, recently noticed on repeated occasions. Between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock at night, the approach of a train of cars has been plainly heard, the shriek of the whistle and the rumbling of the train increasing in distinctness as the cars reached the Staunton depot and stopped. Persons have gone to the depot to find out the cause of an arrival at so unusual an hour, and when they got there found no train. The depot agents say that no train is on the road at the hour of night, yet the approach of a train is unmistakably heralded by the rumbling, and its arrival announced by the whistle.—Staunton (Va.) Spectator.

A Buffalo paper says that a few days ago an officer attached to the police force of that city was conveying a sentenced criminal to the Penitentiary, when he stopped at his own house for a moment, taking his prisoner with him.—In the front part of the house a quantity of tabacco and cigars were lying, and while the officer stepped into the back room for a moment the rascal stole the whole lot. Again the same officer had received six shillings for which he put in his coat pocket, and started with his prisoner for Hume's House. Before they arrived there, the prisoner picked the officer's pocket of the money.

Springing says he always travels with a "suity"—that is, he always goes with his wife, who contrives to be obstinate and out of humor for m the time they leave home till they get where they are going to. In only time she ever smiled, he says, was when he broke his ankle.

CHOKED TO DEATH.—On Sunday a man named John Hillard, a baker on Richmond street, while taking his dinner in a tavern in Talbot street, gave signs that he was choking. He was led from the table by those present, and means used to dislodge the obstruction, but without effect. Meanwhile Dr. Andrews was sent for, but upon coming found the man dead. Upon examination it was found that a piece of meat had become fixed in his throat, thus causing suffocation. It is said that his wife is living in Detroit, and that the rest of his family, who visited him about four years since, reside in Chicago.—London Free Press.

Mr Vankoughnet has determined to run as a candidate for Legislative Council, in the Rideau Division. This decision of Mr Vankoughnet's, in our opinion, puts at rest the surmises as to a dissolution of the House. Was there any probability of an election to the popular branch of the Legislature, this gentleman would not run for the Council. Meantime the country is on the anxious look out for his Excellency's reply to the addresses in favor of a dissolution.

NUMBERED WITH THE PAST.—An old friend has just departed from amongst us and silently descended into "the tomb of all the Capulets." The Hamilton Gazette, which for upwards of twenty years was the soft exponent of High Church Toryism in this city, is now no more. It has vanished from the scene, but not without intimating the probability of a second existence in the world of news-paperdom, in the form of a daily issue. Whether such a hope will ever be realised we are not prophetic enough to divine; at all events we should gladly welcome the resurrection of such a long tried friend and courteous opponent. The Gazette, although scarcely up to the times within the past few years, has done good service in its day, and at one time battled manfully for truth and justice. When that great and good man Sir Charles Metcalfe, was assailed by the most unscrupulous opposition that ever public man had to encounter, the Gazette stood true to him, and did excellent service in defending him against the machinations of his enemies. Nor was it wanting in energy on other important and trying occasions, when truth and justice demanded its aid. Its influence gradually deteriorated, and now that it has gone, Toryism has received a blow in this quarter from which, in all probability, it will never recover. Without wishing to speak disrespectfully of the dead, we think we may safely say, that the last remnant of fossilism has been removed from amongst us. Peace to its manes!—Spectator.

SALE OF INDIAN LANDS AT OWEN SOUND.—The great Sale of lands at Owen Sound commenced on Tuesday morning, as advertised. Between 300 and 400 lots were offered for sale, at upset prices, principally in the township of Keppel. None of the whole range is a mere ridge of rock, with a thin coating of soil, covered with a luxuriant growth of hardwood, which, when cleared off, will leave the land of little value. The sale was expected to last three or four days. The lots were sold at prices varying from 6s 3d to 30s per acre; the whole of the adjoining Owen Sound produced from $30 to $75 per acre. The township of Amabel contains a small quantity of good land.—[Colonist ARRIVAL OF ENGLISH BREEDING STOCK.—The steamer Black Prince, from London, has arrived this morning, with the following stock on board, which have been received and shipped by Messrs. Thos. Betts & Co., 14 Canning Place, Liverpool, and 18 Maiden Lane, New York. Most of them were purchased for R. H. Dulany, Esq., London, Co, Virginia; they consist of one South Down Yearling Buck, hired for one year at Mr. Jones Webb's annual sale for one hundred guineas; twenty South Down Ewes, from Mr. Webb's fifteen guineas each; six South Down Ewes, from Lord Walsingham, which obtained the first prize at the Royal Agricultural Show at Chelmsford, twenty guineas each; one Cleveland Stallion, which obtained the first prize at the Royal Agricultural Show, two hundred and twenty five pounds; two mares afterards offered four hundred guineas for him to send to Australia; some Short-Horned Cattle, Calves, Berkshire Pigs, &c. Also some Shropshire sheep, for Mr. Meek, New York. Mr. Betts has also imported five superior South Down Bucks, from Mr. Jones Webb's; twelve Yearling South Down Ewes, from Mr. Webb's; one Yearling South Down Buck, and five Hampshire Ewes, which obtained the first prize at Overton Sheep Fair; a Berkshire Bull and Cow, from Lord Derby's, and some Cotswold Sheep, &c. The Stock will remain at Montreal, and can be seen at Mr. Dyer's Stables for a few days, when they will be forwarded to New York.—Montreal Herald.

A MINIATURE STEAM ENGINE.—The Detroit Advertiser says, we exam ed yesterday a steam engine, all complete, upon a ten cent piece, in perfect working order, which was the neatest s ecimen of handicraft of the kind we ever saw. It was made by Mr. Henry Shaw, a watch maker and silver smith of Toledo, who was on his way to Lake Superior. The Cylinder is one eighth of an inch in diameter, and stroke one quarter of an inch. The balance wheel is the ordinary wheel of a watch. It could all be contained in a common size thimble.

BRIGHT HOURS AND GLOOMY.—Ah, this beautiful world! I know not what to think of it. Sometimes it is all sunshine and gladness, and heaven itself lies not far off, and then it suddenly changes, and is dark and sorrowful, and the clouds shut out the day. In the lives of the saddest of us there are bright days like this, when we feel as if we could take the great world in our arms. Then come gloomy hours, when the fire will not burn on our hearths, and all without and within is disord, cold and dark. Believe me, every heart has its secret sorrows, which the world knows not, and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.—Longfellow.

DIRECTIONS FOR A SHORT LIFE.—We copy the following directions for a short life from an old almanac;—

1st. Eat but one meal at every meal.
2nd. Eat fast.
3rd Lie in bed every morning until the sun is two hours high.
If the case should prove stubborn,
4th Add the morning dram.

SANDWICH, SEPTEMBER 18, 1856.

THE RANKIN MEETING AT WINDSOR.

Precisely in the same way, with the same total disregard of truth, age, and of even common decency, and with the same vile calumnies with which Arthur Rankin attempted to vilify and malign the character of Col. Prince at the Morpeth meeting (vide Mr. Rankin's speech in the Chatham Planet,) so did he attempt to vilify and traduce the character of the gallant old Colonel at the meeting convened by him (Rankin,) at the village of Windsor on Thursday last, and with precise ly the same result, viz: that of producing in the minds of those present the most sovereign contempt and unmitigated disgust for the man, who, in order to gratify his own selfish ends and purposes, did not scruple to give utterance to as vile and malicious calumnies as ever emanated from the mouth of man—calumnies which had been refuted as often as they had been repeated, and which Mr. Rankin well knew, at the time he was giving them utterance, to be atissue of falsehoods from beginning to end. But what mattered that to Mr. R? With no other means but falsehoods and calumnies at his command, he was not the man to be deterred by any conscientious scruples, from making use of them. By falsehood and calumny did he attempt to impose upon the Electors of Kent, and by falsehood and calumny does he now seek to impose upon the Electors of Essex.—Yes, these are the means which he avails himself of to blast the reputation of a political opponent and to build up his own, and these are the means by which he hopes in a few days to accomplish his ends and to ride himself into a seat in the House of Lords. But how immeasurably mistaken was he in the estimation which he had formed of the Electors of this County, let the result of his own meeting answer. Let the cheer after cheer which rent the air, as each falsehood, and calumny after calumny, were laid bare to the meeting by an indignant son, and hurled back into the teeth of the foul and unprincipled aspersor of his Father's fair fame, answer, and let the groans and hisses—(the only means which an indignant and insulted body of men, had then at their command of expressing their disapprobation at the disgraceful manner in which Col. Prince had been assailed, and in which men of all shades of political opinion heartily joined,) which greeted Mr. Rankin when he again ventured to address the meeting, answer. Indeed so exasperated were the crowd at hearing the character of their old friend and member belied and traduced in the manner that it was shown to have been belied and traduced, that it was not until after repeated attempts on the part of Mr. S. S. Macdonald, the chairman, Mr. Scoble, Mr, Albert Prince, and others, that they succeeded in obtaining for Mr. Rankin a hearing at all, and when they did so, what course did that Honorable Gentleman pursue? Did he attempt to vindicate the charges he had preferred by producing one scintilla of evidence beyond his own mere ipse dixit, in support of those charges? No, he attempted nothing of the kind, for as we before stated, he well knew them to be wholly and totally false, and incapable of being supported or substantiated in any way whatever. For if he was not so aware, why did he not, when it was shown as clearly as it was possible to show it, that the statements which he had made relative to Col. Prince were false why did he not, we say, as any honest man would have done, upon ascertaining that he had preferred charges, believing them to be true, but which he afterwards discovered to be false, frankly come forward and make the amende honorable, and express his regret at ever having preferred those charges? This, as we think would have been the more manly, honest and straightforward course to have pursued under the circumstances, and this, we venture to say, is the course which Arthur Rankin would have pursued, had he possessed one ninety-ninth part of that honor and manliness about which he is so eternally harping, and which he would induce some people to believe he possesses to such a very eminent degree. But to have done so would have been to defeat the whole object of the meeting, and that would never do. No, no, Mr. Rankin was too much of a tactician to do anything half so silly; so he got up and very coolly informed the meeting that he had another charge to prefer against Col Prince, and what think you, reader, it was? why that he (Col. Prince) was fond of strutting about the street with a sword dangling by his side; yes, these are the exact words made use of by Mr. Rankin, and as will be readily imagined; were received by the crowd with shouts of laughter; and well indeed might they laugh, first at the absurdity of the idea itself, and secondly at the man who was ass enough to promulgate it· Only fancy plain old John Prince—one who detests and abhors anything like ceremony or formality—one who can scarcely be induced even upon state occasions, to don a plain suit of black, and who any day in the week may be found upon his farm dressed in his plain simple garb of homespun—only fancy we say the old Colonel's delighting to strut about the streets with a sword by his side; why the whole thing is so rediculously absured that it is a matter of no small surprise to us how any person in his sober senses should have given utterance to it. For even supposing it to be true, what then? we never took them for a saint before old Colonel John, but if their old bones are not canonized the moment thou shalt have then do we most emphatically assert that there is no such ingredient as gratitude in composition of the hoi poloi, since after nearly twenty years of public service, the only charge which thine most inveterate enemy could take up against thee, was that thou delightest to parade about the streets with an old rusty sword dangling to thy nether end. For this was all Mr. Rankin, in his reply to Mr. Albert Prince, could urge against the Colonel; this was the only new idea which suggested itself to him, and having divested himself of it, he slunk back to the half dozen of hirlings by whom he was surounded, people with rage, and fairly writhing under the withering flagellation which he had just received at the hand of the son of the man whose character he had so basely assailed, and revealed to the world in all the naked deformity of a wicked and malicious slander. Such was the lot of Mr. Rankin on Thursday last, and may such be the lot of him, be he whom he may, who shall endeavor to blast the private or public character of another, in order to advance his own personal ends and purposes.

We as doubtless did the other Electors who were present, attended the meeting, expecting from Mr. Rankin, an exposition of his views and principles, upon the important questions, which are now agitating the political world in Canada. We expected to find him prepared to discuss the merits of those measures which if elected, he intended to support, or oppose, as the case might be. We expected to find him prepared to point to some act obtained by him during his Parliamentary career, whereby the intsrests of the community in which he resides will in anywise be benefitted or promotad; In a word, we expected to find him prepared to say something—to advance some argument upon which to base his claim for the high honor to which he now aspires. But instead of attempting to do this—instead of advancing some good and sufficient reasons why the Electors of this county should extend to him their sufferages in preference to either of the two candidates in the field.

This is what we had a right to expect at the hands of one who aspires to the office of Legislative Councillor, but Mr. Rankin contended himself with expatiating upon topics of a very different nature to either of those to which we have above alluded, and which appeared far more congenial to his taste, and it may be, better suited to his capacity. He began by favoring us with a brief disquisition on the virtues and qualifications which, in his opinion, any man who aspired to the position of a Legislative Councillor ought to possess. We were told that we ought not to elect to that position any but a strictly, honest, honorable, talented, energetic, high-minded man; and were left to infer that that man was Arthur Rankin. He then for two mortal hours continued to launch forth against Col. Prince about as vile and vindictive a trade of falsehood and abuse as it was ever our misfortune to be obliged to listen to. We were told that; to elect Col. Prince to a seat in the Upper House, would be to reflect indelible disgrace upon the County, and that it was only because he (Col. Prince) had never met with anything like a vigorous opposition that he had ever occupied a seat in the Lower House, and that the only reason which had induced him (Rankin) to offer himself as a candidate, was to endeavor ts rescue the county from that disgrace (O, tempora! O, mores!!) and wound up by informing the meeting, that the Lake Superior Country is a very great Country, and that he Arthur Rankin, is a very great man, and that if he was only elected to a seat in the Legislative Council, we then might expect to get land for a shilling an acre, coal for the asking, and to cross the ocean in four days; and we think he might have added, to get to Heaven in a hand-basket. But as there does not appear to be a ghost of a chance of that gentleman's ever occupying a seat in the Legislative Council Hall, we suppose we shall have to be content to let the world wag on in the good old usual way. Such was the sum and substance of Mr. Rankin's speech, and most assuredly a very remarkable speech it was; But remarkable only for its shallowness and as displaying an amount of arrogance, presumption and downright impudence, on the part the person who delivered it, which we will venture to say, has never been excelled, if indeed equaled. Arthur Rankin, desiring to rescue the County from the disgrace which the return of Col. Prince would put upon it!! Could arrogance and impudence go further? Here that, ye free and independent Electors of Essex; you are now told that your old member—the man whom you, of your own free will and choice chose as your representative for eighteen consecutive years, and who never once during that period betrayed the confidence you reposed in him, but who on the contrary served you faithfully, honestly, zealously and disinterestedly—you are now told that that man is a disgrace to the County, and by whom? who is the man that thus dares to insult you, for insult it most assuredly is? Why, Arthur Rankin, the "land speculator" the "stock Jobber"—the man of yesterday, and lost indeed is that County which under any circumstances must needs require an Arthur Rankin to rescue it from disgrace.

God knows, it delights us not, it is anything but congeniel to our taste or feelings to write in this strain. It cannot, as will be easily imagined, be other than a principal duty for a member of a community in which he many reside to animadvert upon the character and conduct of any portion of his fellow men, nor can the duty at all times irksome, be rendered more agreeable from the overwhelming necessity of reprobating the character of men placed in an exalted position in society, and if we have said anything which may wound the feelings of Mr. Rankin or his friends, it has not been without pain on our own part that we have done so, and we beg, that they will not impute to us any wilful desire to injure that gentleman's private or public character, but to the true cause—his own silly conduct in forcing from us the remarks we have made. When we saw Mr. Rankin get up in a large public assembly and tell that assembly, that our old Representative—he whom we have hitherto looked upon with feelings of the greatest respect, was a disgrace to the county, the question necessarily forced itself upon us, "who is this man that thus dares to vilify and insult him," and if the answer is not as satisfactory to Mr. Rankin and his friends as they could wish or desire, we again repeat that he (Mr Rankin) has only himself to think for it.

That Col. Prince will be returned, triumphantly returned, there is not the slightest shadow of a doubt, and if any one thing, more than another, has contributed to secure that return it is the wicked and malicious slanders which have been circulated against him, and the vile torrent of abuse which has been heaped upon him by Mr. Rankin and his paid emissaries. But this we suppose is what Mr. Rankin understands by a "vigorious opposition."

There is a class of Journals, which, having been brought into existence, merely as a speculation, or perhaps to forward the interests of some political aspirant, having no fixed principle to direct them, and possessing little or no influence, and generally conducted by men having little interest in the community and no interest whatever in the public welfare, whose only aim is to realize a miserable existence therefrom; it is little wonder, then, that such journals abound in the most low and vulgar abuse, for to become popular and to force a subscription, list, it becomes necessary in their estimation, to abuse either the govermentof the Province, Municipal government, or in short everything that comes within their minds's eye. In looking over many of our country papers, one is struck with the amount of abuse contained in them, and to a stranger this beautiful Province would have the appearance of being one of the most corruptly governed in the world; and would it not be natural for him to halt, ere he settled in a Country where the papers contain such violent articles against its government? for if there were a band of robbers at the head of affairs in this Province, they could not receive a worse character than they do, at the hands of a number of these contemptible little sheets which, instead of trying to improve the morals and tone of society, are more fitted to represent the lowest dregs of the community. There can be little doubt that many and many a respectable and wealthy farmer intending to settle in the Province, having read of imaginary corruption, and misgovernment in these papers, have decided upon leaving a country governed by a pack of thieves and scoundrels, as they might naturally suppose from what they have read.—Such journals instead of being the means of imparting knowledge and truth, are in reality a source of the filthy outpourings of vicious minds.

Though a journal may oppose a government, it does not of necessity follow, that every imaginable dishonesty and abuse must be heaped on their heads—let journals give a fair and impartial opposition without using the violent and insulting language that many are in the habit of doing. If editors do not respect their own reputations—let them, in the name of heaven, respect the Country in which they live, and, not blazon to the world, that our resources are becoming bankrupt, that our officials are thieves and robbers, that in fact everything connected with the government of Canada is vicious and dishonest. Now what will parties at a distance think of us, when they read such false statements, for they are false, and false in the extreme, for few countries in the world can boast of the well regulated systems which have been adopted in Canada, whose institutions are unequalled, whose laws, under the new Procedure Act, cannot be surpassed — whose public Departments are conducted in a manner which the most scrupulous, with few exceptions, could find fault, reforms have been introduced and are being introduced, in accordance with the requirements of the times.

This system of abuse, if not stopped, will result in consequences of a most hurtful nature to the Country, and we trust that the respectable portion of the press, will decry all such journals as make a trade of running down everything in the country whether good or bad.

Is Mr. Rankin eligible for a seat in the Legislative Council? This question has been asked over and over again: it therefore becomes our duty to lay before the Electors, the true position in which Mr. Rankin stands in relation to his being elected to the Council, being at the same time a Member of the Legislative Assembly, under the several statutes which have been passed, regulating the qualification of persons, who may be elected. By the Act 19 and 20 vic. chapter 140, entitled "An Act to change the constitution of the Legislative Council by rendering the same Elective," and in the sixth section it is enacted thus "no member of one house shall be elected a member of the other," this clearly settles the question, as to whether Mr. Rankin, being a member of the Legislative Assembly, can take his seat if elected to the Council; but it may be imagined by some, that by merely resigning a few days before the election, that he will then be in a position to be elected and qualified to take his seat; but that is not the case, for by an Act passed in 1843 which has not been repealed, it is declared, that any member who may wish to resign his seat in the Legislature, cannot vacate it until his successor is elected. The following is the enactment, in the 8th section of the 7th vic., chapter 65. "Provided always that the member so tendering his resignation shall be and be held and considered as being to all intents and purposes the representative for the place for which he was elected, until the return of a member to serve in his room, shall have been duly made." Now it will be impossible for Mr. Rankin even if he were to receive a majority of votes, (which, however we consider very improbable,) to take his seat and keep it with the Law so clearly against him, for no Law could be clearer than the above; the enactments are simyle and plain, and can admit of no construction, which by any possibility could give a representative in the Lower House, the right to be elected to a seat in the Upper. If Mr. Rankin supposes as he states in his reply to the printed requisition, "that if he polls a majority of honest votes, no power nor ang law of the land, can prevent him from taking his seat," he will find that his ideas of the effect of the Law are very different, from what it realy is. But this an exceedingly rich fancy, to come from a statesman, of Mr. Rankin's standing, to assert and publish to the world, that because he may receive a majority of votes in a constituancy, he must therefore be qualified to take his seat, irrespective of all other considerations. We would like to know, then, if that rule were to be carried out, where, the necessity of Mr. Rankin, or Mr. Any body else, going to Parliament to make Laws for governing the people, if they are not to be respected—if the very men who assist in framing these Laws, are to be the first to advise the breaking of them.

It will be necessary for electors to weigh well, in their minds, this question, for if they incourage Mr. Rankin in his ambitious disires, they are only encourageing one who knows well that he is ineligible, and who would seek their support only for the sake of gratifying a hatred which he appears to entertain against Col. Prince, for that appears to have brought him into the field, to contest the Election. But will the Electors allow themselves to be used as the mere play things oi Mr. Rankin? We think not.

The Clear Grits, a set of ultra radicals, whose inclinations border on republicanism, but who have neither a leader of ability or numbers sufficient to form an independent party, have of late been attempting to force themselves into notice, by attempting to get up demonstrations against the government, and passing resolutions to the Governor to dissolve Parliament. These meetings, as a general rule, are attended by a couple of dozen persons, and resolutions are adopted as a matter of course, stating that a majority of the electors are in favor of a dissolution, and are heralded forth to the Public, though the great Clear Grit organ the Globe, and the cry is then taken up by the lesser lights of the party, and one would imagine, by reading their comments, that the whole country were in favor of this line of proceeding, whereas none but this restless set of men, and in most instance without possessing a vote, and representing no principles, whose whole aim appears to be opposition to everything that exists, are to be found who will countenance, that which is known to be contrary to the principles of our government The Governor General, were he to listen to the petitions which are sent to him, and were he to grant their requests, would by so doing only gratify a few, and of those few of the class which we have described above. But many of these attempts which have of late been made, to agitate the Country, have met with signal defeat, and will no doubt cool the ardour of these busy agitators, when they find that the more respectable portion of the community are determined to check their impudence.—From a report of one of these meetings held at Brantford, the grits were not a little discomfitted when they found that they had aroused the indignation of the electors, and who had collected to prevent the passing of resolutions which would not represent the honest feelings of the country, and we trust that whenever attempts are made to get up similar excitements the same summary means will be used to prevent a few Clear Grits from gaining notoriety at the expense of the communities in which they may happen to be sprinkled.

The following are the resolutions adopted at Brantford; instead of the printed ones which run down the present Parliament, and are furnished by the Globe office and are lavishly scattered through the country.

Moved by Allen Good, Esq., Reeve Brant, seconded by Charles Whats, Esx., That in the present, peaceful and highly prosperous condition of this Province, this meeting view, with apprehension and regret the attempt now made to excile and agitate the people of this Country, by ambitious politicians in Toronto and their tools throubhout the country, for the furtherance of their own selfish ends.

Moved by Wm. Mathews, Esq., Mayor of Brantford, seconded by Wm. M. Gilberi Esq., That this Meeting have the fullest confidence in the justice, integrity, and intelliience of Her Majesty's Representative in this Province, and the Advisers of the Crown and consider them the most competent to decide when Parliament shall or shall not be dissolved.

Moved by Jas. Weyms, Esq., seconded by Alexander Girvin, Esq., That the conduct of the agitators who by calling public meetings in various parts of the Country under the ostensible garb of "securing and perpetuating the peace and prosperity of the Country," whilst their real aim is to dictate unconstitutionally to Her Majesty's representative and his advisers in the hope hope of getting themselves into office power and emolument, is viewed by this meeting as extremely reprehensible, unpatriotic and calculated to disturb the country's peace, mar its prosperity and deeply injure its charac ter abroad.

Allen Good, Esq., was then called to the chair, and a unanimous vote of thanks given to Colonel Perley, for his conduct in the chair.

Three cheers were then given for the Queen and three cheers for Her Representa tive in this Province and his Constitutional advisers.

MARRIED.—On the 14th instant, at Trinity Church, Toronto, by the Rev. A Stewart, Alexander, C. Chewett, Esq., of Kingston, to Maria, second daughter of the late Wm Parker Ranney, Esq.

The Man-Demon

The Paris Correspondent of the London Court Journal writes as follows:—

"The wonders of Sigor Ragazzoni, whose approaching departure for London fills us with dismay, have been exhibited at the Tuilleries. This wonderous magnetizer called the "man demon" in Italy, has produced more surprising effects in magnetism than have ever been witnessed before. The experiment of striking senseless was repeated the other night at St Cloud, and filled beholders with astonishment. Signor Ragazzoni placed himself at one end of the gallery of the palace, and upon receiving the indication in writing of the person chosen from among the company to serve as an example of his power, outstretched his hand towards his victim, who instantly fell, struck as with the lightning's blast, stiff and senseless on the floor. So long as Ragazzoni willed it did the patient remain stretched out before him. to appearance dead—for it seems that this is the first magnetizer whose power has been strong enough to stop the pulsation of the heart. Another gesture, and the patient rises—wondering what has happened, and why he is lying thus irreverently before Imperial greatness on the ground. After the exhibition of these and other curious experiments, an Italian singer, just arrived from Florence, was introduced under the auspices of the Princess Mathildé, and sang with great eclat the andante of Vaccati's bravura, "La Romeo." The allegro followed, and the cantatrice was rushing from the top to the bottom of the clavier, sending out rockets and blazes of harmony to the great delight of the company, when the Emperor, who was seated at the further end of the room, made a sign to Ragazzoni, who was standing at a distance behind the singer; the man demon stretched out his hand towards her,—when, suddenly as if some infernal power had seized her in its grasp, the singer paused, with staring eyes and mouth wide open—the note unfinished died; and after two or three gulping efforts' she gazed around terrified—then falling forward on the piano burst into tears. The audience believing the effect to be produced by timidity, applauded to the uttermost, encouraging her by every means in their power; but to all the kind enquiries of the ladies she could return no answer. Her voice was paralysed and all she could do was to point to her throat with a piteous expression of countenance and shake her head in despair.

SACRILEGE.—IMPORTANT ARREST.—This morning, the appearance of a man at the silversmith's shop of Messers Sasseville & Lesperance, Palace street, offering a quantity of broken silver known by them as church property, led to the arrest of a notorious thief named Charboneau, having on his person silver and other articles robbed partly from the Church of St. John's Suburb, on the night it was set fire to, and the rest stolen last night from the Church of Point Levi, where a complete clearance had been made of the altar decorations, the valuable metals being carried away and the vestments torn to tatters! The case is undergoing investigation.—Quebec Mercury.

THE PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION.—The Board of Agriculture terminated its inspection of the buildings and grounds for the provincial Exhibition, on Thursday. The Board have pronounced the arrangements to be the most extensive and complete of any that have ever been made in Canada, and it is anticipated that the Show, in all its departments, will be the best that has ever taken place To mark its sense of the liberality, and the exertions of all concerned the Board have directed that free admission during the Exhibition shall be given to the members of the City Council and their families; the same to the members of the United Counties' Council; to the Local Committee and to subscribers of $10 and upwards to the permanent Crystal Exhibition. The Board also decided that our gallant soldiers from the Crimea and the troops generally in garrison should be admitted free to the exhibition at such time as may be sanctioned by the Colonel commanding, and in such numbers as may be arranged with the President of the Association.—Herald.

ASCENT OF MONT BLANC BY A LADY.—A letter from Chamounix, of the 1st instant, in the Savoy Gazette says:—"The great event of the day here is an ascent to Mont Blanc, commenced yesterday morning, at eight o'clock, by a Mr, Forman, an English man, and his daughter. They arrived safely at the Grand-Mulets at three in the afternoon, and by the light of lanterns left this morning as two to ascend the giant of the Alps. At ten o'clock the small party arrived on the crest of the highest mountain in Europe, and after a half of an hour left on their return, and reached this place at seven in the evening. This ascent will be talked of as one of the wonders of the valley, both on account of the little time employed (fifteen hours to ascend and seven to descend) and of the intrepidity shown by Miss Forman, of whom the guides speak in raptures. This young lady is the fourth female who has performed the feat. The progress of the tourists was eagerly watched during the whole day, and every window that commanded a view of the path was bristling with telescopes, like muskets from a loophole. The arrival at Chamounix was a perfect triumph; all the inhabitants, and the resident foreigners went out to meet them, and the whole re-entered the place, headed by the band of the guides in full costume, and amidst a salute of cannon and the hearty shouts of the people. A serenade and a display of fireworks finished the fete."

Highly Important!

We copy the following from the Montreal Gazette of the 3rd inst. By it, it will be seen that we must look for some other Candidate than Mr. Murney for this Division:—

DISQUALIFICATION OF FOUR CANDIDATES FOR THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—It is a somewhat strange thing that no one should have made public the fact that Messrs. Rankin, Murney, De Witt and Sanborn, cannot become candidates for the Legislative Council without compliance with a formality which they can hardly manage to go through now. Every one knew, of course, and remembered that the 6th clause of the Elective Legislative Council Act, declares that "No member of one House shall be, elected a member of another." This we understood, was to be obviated by resignation before the election for the Upper house came on. But the Statute 7 Vict. cap, 65 sect. 7 still unrepealed, has the following proviso:—"That the member so tendering his resignation shall be, and be held to be and considered as being to all intents and purposes the representative for the place for which he was elected, until the return of the election of a member to serve in his room shall have been duly made." So that until new elections have taken place for Essex, North Hastings, Chateauguay, and Sompton, the gentlemen above named are not eligible for election for the several division which they aspire to represent in the Council. Rouges will require to start new candidates for Salaberry and Wellington, we fear.

HALIFAX, Sept 13.

The Steamer Arabia arrived this morning, with Liverpool dates of Sept. 4th, being three days later.

BREADSTUFFS—The weather continued favourable.

The prices for breadstuffs were a shade easier than at the sailing of the Cambria. but without any decided change in the quotations.

Provisions were without change.

Consuls had declined to 94 3–4 a 94 7–8.

The Arabia brings 114 passengers. She left Liverpool on Thursday the 4th, at 11 30 A. M. and has thus made the run in little over eight days and 18 hours' notwithstanding a detention of several hours, off this port on account of fog.

The Collins Steamer Atlantic left Liverpool at 11 o,clock A. M. on Wednesday the 3rd inst, with 123 passengers from New York.

The steamship Kangaroo, from Philidelphia, arrived at Liverpool on the 3rd inst.

The Atlantic took out a full despatch, but the news was not of much importance.

The London Star says it need no longer be concealed that the governments of France and England—that is to say Louis Napolean and Lord Palmerston— are not on good terms with respect to Spanish affairs, and communications are understood to have passed between them of anything but a complimentary character.

We may at well state that an opinion has found its way to the other side of the Atlantic that England is ready to make every concession in order to obtain the friendship of the United States, and that this determination has been come to in contemplation of the event of a possible ruptnre with France.

The improved tone of the London Journals is interpreted in this sense, and the N. Y. Herald makes much of the topic.

We have hesitated to say so because these are matters of great importance, and should not be paraded merely for the sake of raising public excitement; but as the Paris correspondents of our own papers now begin to talk so much about the matter, reserve must be put aside, and the public should be instructed that while there may be in reality no danger, it is always a serious thing to have our foreign policy under the direction of a premier like Palmerston.

The star further says a cotempory announces that the Central American difficulty is solved satisfactorily by a convention between Honduras and Great Britain. Good news may bear repetition, bnt then it ought to be news. The satisfactory settlement alluded to of this, at one time, threatening question, was announced five weeks since.

The present health of the Emperor of the French undergoes much discussion.—That the Emperor has some malady of a dangerous character, may be inferred from the fact that its exact nature is concealed from the public.

The Spanish Government has not yet published its decrees dissolving the Cortes and fixing a new election: and an exposition of its policy is to be looked for therein. It still remains a subject of discussion.

At the latest dates Lisbon was tranquil, but circumstances have occurred to show that the late riots were essentially political in their sources.

ITALY.—In Italy discontent is spreading Alarm is manifested in Naples in consequence of the now ascertained movement of the Murat party. This party has been circulating a programme or proclamation at Naples, with secrecy and activity.

NOTICE.

To the Electors of the Counties of Essex and Kent in Canada West.

GENTLEMEN:

You are aware that Arthur Rankin, Esq., (who is a member of the House of Assembly in this Province) aspires to represent you in the Legislative Council, and has proclaimed himself a Candidate for that distinguished honor. By the statute Law of the land, (namely, the Legislative Council Act, under which the election is about to take place,) it is enacted that no member of one house shall be elected a member of the other." It is therefore perfectly clear that by appearing at the day of election, and receiving a vote, he is guilty of a violation of the law, and that (no matter how many votes he has) he cannot take his seat in the Legislative Council, and the votes you give him will, therefore be adsolutely thrown away! I have given him notice as to the consequences of the illegality of his proceedings, and, I now beg leave to respectfully warn you against casting your votes in favor of a man who places law at defiance, and whose aim appears to be, the shrine of his own personal vanity and ambition.

The Park Farm, 15th Sept. 1856.

JOHN PRINCE.

TO THE

INDEPENDENT ELECTORS

OF THE

Counties of Essex and Kent.

GENTLEMEN,

THE time has now arrived when it becomes me to address you briefly upon the great change made in the Constitution of this Country by our Sovereign's gracious permission for us to Elect our Legislative Councillors, whereby she has been pleased to wave Her Royal Prerogative to create them as heretofore. For that boon we should be grateful; and I doubt not that, if properly treated and carried out, it will add to the increased prosperity of Canada as exemplified in those Elective Institutions which have so much contributed to our internal advancement and prosperity. It, however, behoves us to consider well and to reflect calmly upon what the qualifications of a Legislative Councillor ought to be, and what the duties of that Council are. It is or ought to be an honourable Body, in every sense of the word. It should consist of men not famed for being Party men, of violent political feelings, or prone to aid in factious opposition to the Government of the day; but men who are well known to the community as men of character and experience in the world, men who can be relied on as much for their honour and independence of demeanour in the Senate as for their ability, and of men too who, by their experience in Legislation, can bring their learning to bear upon those Enactments which come up to them from the popular branch of the Legislature for their deep and solemn consideration. To such men you may safely entrust your interests, and, in my opinion, at least, it would be dangerous to confide in any others. Moreover, the duties of the Council are most important. They are a check upon the vague, hasty, imperfect, and exuberant legislation which sometimes emanates from the Lower House; and their deliberations should be conducted with that dignity and cool reflection which in a popular assembly it is next to impossible to maintain. I do not address you as a stranger or as a new man soliciting your suffrages for the distinguished honour to which, by your favour, I aspire. But I address you as an old friend and neighbour, who has lived amongst you continuously for nearly twenty-four years, through good report and evil report, and who was your chosen representative in Parliament for more than eighteen years! And you have, by your requisitions, told me that I and I alone am your choice to represent you in the new Council, that is to be. You know my abilities, humble though they are; you know my experience in Parliament, and you know my character; and upon that knowledge you have been pleased to base your proposition that I become your Representative in that Council. I do not profess to be a Politician —a blind Partizan with any set of men— but I do profess to have and ever will maintain the principles of an honest and independent public character, wherever I am placed; and I will yield to no man in liberality of sentiment or action; and I point to my conduct for the last ten or fifteen years as a Member of the Legislature as evidence of the truth of these assertions. In fine, I shall ever consider it my duty to contend for the freedom and rights of all the inhabitants of this noble country, whatsoever may be their nation, creed, or colour. These are my Principles. To my antecedents you are no strangers; and it is most gratifying to receive your assurance that he who has been your friend and neighbour for so long a time, and your representative in Parliament for a longer period than any other man in Canada (save one) ever represented the same constituency, still enjoys your favour and your confidence, and that, "with all his imperfections on his head," you will confer upon him the greatest honour you can bestow—a seat in the first Elective Legislative Council of this Province.

That I shall, through your favour, be triumphantly placed in that high and honourable position I do not for a moment doubt. My visits through the Counties have entirely satisfied my friends as well as myself on that important point; and I pledge myself to serve you honestly, faithfully, independently, and diligently, and according to the best of my abilities and powers. And you shall find in me a strenuous advocate for an enlarged representation based on population at the proper time—for the promotion of Education upon the most extensive and liberal plan—and for the support and progress of all measures I deem little for country, which I may conceive will tend to the happiness and good government of Canada and the prosperity of the noble and enterprising races who inhabit it.

I remain, Gentlemen, as ever,
Your faithful Friend,
JOHN PRINCE.

The Park Farm, }
27th August, 1856. }

TO THE ELECTORS
OF
The Western Division.

GENTLEMEN:

THE Legislative Council of Canada is ginally intended to be an imitation of the British House of Peers, but from various reasons, unnecessary here to mention, the mere nomination of its members by the Crown has failed to secure for it the respect and weight which a branch of the Legislature ought to possess.

It has therefore been deemed expedient to render it elective, so as to secure for it a portion of the popular favor, hitherto accorded to the Legislative Assembly.

This change, when fully carried out, will invest the Council with an importance in some degree similar to that which attaches to the Senate of the neighboring Union, a seat in which is a position of greater importance than the Governorship of a State.

The Elective Council of Canada will however vary in one important feature that of the Senate of the United States, that its members, instead of being appointed by local Legislative bodies, often by corrupt combinations and intrigues, will be elected directly by them; they will also represent nearly equal constituencies, instead of the gross inequality in this respect, which is found in the American States. Senators from N. York represent a population ten times as great as the same number of Senators from Delaware or California.

When it is considered that a Councillor will represent twice the number of Constituents of a Member of the Assembly, and for twice the length of time, it must be obvious that the selection of a proper person to fill so high an office is of the utmost importance to your interests, and to those of the country at large.

The weak point of all representative institutions is the disposition of the Executive to gain majorities by bribing the representatives of the people, and the facility with which the latter have too often sold themselves for considerations of private advantage.

It is by appeals to private interests, by places and jobs, that party hacks are manufactured, and I can conceive no greater political calamity for a Country than to have a majority of its representatives composed of such venal and selfish politicians. It is under this evil that Canada has long groaned, and is now groaning, and against which every possible precaution should be taken by Constituencies, when called upon to exercise their invaluable privilege of electing representatives to Parliament.

To secure an object so desirable every thing depends on the personal character of the men chosen, and the two leading elements to be sought for in a Candidate are integrity and ability; without the first an able man may exert his abilities against you, and for his own selfish ends, and without the latter, an honest man may become the mere tool of a Ministry, hoodwinked by their plausible sophistries.

Having lived amongst you for twenty-seven years, you can judge from my antecedents, better than I can, whether or not I possess these essential requisites for your representatives; stand, evening, any more pretension without the guarantee of previous character, should go for nothing.

My political convictions are entirely in favor of liberal measures, and should I be elected, I will give my most strenuous aid in carrying out the measures of so much importance to the prosperity of the country, such as

Representation by Population, so as to give Upper Canada its proper position in the Legislature.

Common School Education free from Sectarian influence, and the repeal of such acts as grant support to Sectarian Schools now existing.

Opposition to all grants of public monies for Sectarian purposes, and also to all acts giving religious corporations power to hold real estate for the purpose of revenue, irrespective of creed or denomination, and the Retaining the seat of Government in Upper Canada.

If my views on these subjects meet with your approbation, and I should be honored with you confidence and support, I will endeavor, if elected, to serve you faithfully, to the best of my ability, with honesty of purpose, and a single eye to the good of this great Province, and to the special interests of the Division with which I am connected.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient
and Faithful Servant,
JAS. DOUGALL.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. H. BARKER, Commander.
Will leave Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Leaves Buffalo, Wednesdays and Saturdays
" " Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each, commanded and officered throughout by men of large experience and capability, and fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the most desirable steamers that float upon the waters of the United States.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandize with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

Shippers of merchandize from the East should mark packages to the care of C. L. SEYMOUR, Buffalo: merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

Effects of Colors upon Health.

From several years' observations in rooms of various sizes, used as manufacturing rooms, and occupied by females for twelve hours per day, I found that the workers who occupied those rooms which had large windows with large panes of glass in the four sides of the room so that the sun's rays penetrated through the room during the whole day, were much more healthy than the workmen who occupied rooms lighted from one side only, or rooms lighted through very small panes of glass. I observed another very singular fact, viz; that the workers who occupied one room were very cheerful and healthy while the occupiers of another similar room, who were employed on the same kind of work were all inclined to melancholy, and complained of pains in the forehead and were often ill and unable to work. Upon examining the rooms in question, I found they were both equally well ventilated and lighted. I could not discover anything about the drainage of the premises that could effect the one room any more than the other; but I observed that the room occupied by the healthy workers was wholly whitewashed, and the room occupied by the melancholy workers was colored with yellow ochre.

I had the yellow ochre all washed off, and the walls and ceilings whitewashed.—The workers ever after felt more cheerful and healthy. After making this discovery I extended my observations to a number of smaller rooms and garrets, and found without exception, that the occupiers of the white rooms were much more healthy than the occupiers of the yellow or buff colored rooms; and I succeeded in inducing occupiers of the yellow rooms to change the color for whitewash. I always found a corresponding improvement in the health and spirits of the occupiers. From these observations I would respectfully drop a hint to the authorities of schools, asylums, and hospitals, to eschew yellow, buff, or any thing approaching to yellow, as the grand color of the interior of their buildings.!

The following are some of the things not generally appreciated about a house.—1. The benefit of thorough drainage and water supply. 2. The benefit of good heating and ventilation. 3. The benefit of pride of proper color.—Cor. of the Builder.

Hints to Farmers.

Tomatoes make very wholesome and excellent preserves.

Toads are the very best protection to cabbages against flee.

Plants when drooping, are revived by a few grains camphor.

Pears are generally improved by grafting on the mountain ash.

Sulphur is valuable in preserving grapes, &c., from insects.

Land never spoils in warm weather, providing it is cooked enough in frying out.

In feeding with corn, peas, &c., 60 pounds ground go as far as 100 pounds in the kernel.

Corn meal should never be ground very fine, it injures the richness of it.

Turnips of small size have double the nutritious matter of large ones.

Rutta Baga is the only root that increases in nutritious qualities, after a moderate growth, as it increase in size.

Rats and other vermin are kept away from grain by sprinkling of garlic, when packing the sheaves.

Money skilfully expended in drying land, by draining or otherwise, will be returned with interest.

To cure scratches on a horse, wash the legs with warm soap suds, and then with beef brine. Two applications will cure in the worst case.

Timber cut in the spring, and exposed to the weather with the bark on, decays much sooner than if cut in the fall.

Experience shows sweet apples to be equal to potatoes in improving hogs, and decidedly preferable in fattening cattle.

Ripe Tomato Pickles.—Select handsome sized tomatoes, wash them and prick them with a fork; lay them in dry salt twenty-four hours; then soak in equal quantities of vinegar and water for 24 hours; then take them out and lay them down in a crock, with sliced onions, with cinnamon, cloves and brown sugar, and then cover the whole with good cider vinegar.

To Make Tomato Wine.—Take small ripe tomatoes, pick off the stems, put them into a tub nearly or full, wash clean, then mash well, and strain through a linen rag, (a bushel will make five gallons pure,) then add two and a half to three pounds of good brown sugar to each gallon; then put into a cask, and ferment and fine as for raspberry wine. If two gallons of water be added to each bushel of tomatoes, the wine will be as good.

To Keep Foxes from Killing Lambs. —A number of years since a neighbor told me that I if would put sulphur on the fence around a lot, foxes would not enter it. I thought perhaps that putting it on to the lambs as soon as found might be better, which I have practiced since, and have not lost a lamb by them, to my knowledge. Yet an old female might not fear sulphur any more than an old sinner does brimstone.

Advice to Young Farmers.—Allow me to say to young farmers especially, let us be studious and inquisitive, as well as laborious; let us be simple and frugal in our habits; and avoid useless expenditures; leave off fine dress, and fast horses, showy dwellings to those who need such things to recommend them. Let us ever remember that for health and substantial wealth, for rare opportunities, self-improvement, for long life and real independence, farming is the best business in the world—Goldmint.

Salt.—Mr. John Ellis, an intelligent practical farmer in England made the following experiment with salt, as manure for wheat:—

"On one-fourth of an acre of a wheat field he sowed in March 50 lbs. of salt; and on an adjoining one-fourth of an acre of the same kind of land, and similar treatment, he obtained less wheat than that grown on the salted portion by 1½ bushels, consequently showing an increase per acre by salting, by about six bushels per acre." He now uses salt regularly, from 24 to 4 cwt. per acre.—He considers it, however, least beneficial on heavy clay lands.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. Knight, James Snowden and D. W. Ray.

Terms: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the Illustrated Horticulturist for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE

AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE

Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, Designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The assistance of the most eminent improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose lectures and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

Thoughts at Twilight.

BY ALBERT BRUCE.

There is an hour to me more dear,
Than all of brighter ray,
'Tis when the ev'ning shades appear,
To vail the parting day.

When calm pale twilight tints the west,
And soft, cool zephyrs blow,
Sweet, mem'ry speaks within my breast
Of long—long years ago.

I muse on fond departed days,
'Ere I had learned to roam,
When childhood passed in simple plays
Round my dear native home.

Oh! while I thus retrace the flight
Of happier, earlier days,
What visions rise, as if to sight,
Before my inward gaze.

The bright fireside—the household band,
The pleasant field I see;
Once more I wander, hand in hand,
With loved ones dear to me.

Sweet faces once again I view,
Once more sweet voices hear,
Whose smiles my soul to rapture woo,
Whose music charms my ear.

And friends perchance that I shall see,
On earth again no more,
Seem made by time more dear to me,
More lovely than before.

Let fancy thus fly over play
With mem'ries of the past;
My dearest wish while here I stay
Is that such dreams may last.

Oh! still when twilight tints the west,
And soft, cool zephyrs blow,
Let fond remembrance thrill my breast
With scenes of long ago.

Serenading a Young Lady.

In my young days I was passionately fond of attending parties, and somewhat celebrated for playing on the flute. Hence it was generally expected that when an invitation was extended, my flute would accompany me.

I visited a splendid party one evening and was called upon to favor the company with a tune on my flute. I of course immediately complied with the request. The company appeared delighted, but more particularly so, was a young lady, who raised her hands and exclaimed it was beautiful, delightful, &c.

I, of course was was highly delighted, and immediately formed a resolution to serenade the young lady the following night.

I started the next night in company with several young friends, and soon arrive as I supposed, at the lady's residence but made a glorious mistake by getting under the window of an old Quaker.

"Now boys," said I, "behold the sentimentality of this young lady, the moment I strike up 'The last Rose of Summer.' I struck it up, but the window remained closed, and the boys began to smile."

"Oh," said I, "that's nothing; it would not be in good taste to raise the window on the first air!"

I next struck up Old Robin Gray. still the window was closed. The boys snickered, and I felt somewhat flat.

"Once more boys," said, I "and she must come." I struck up again "My love is like the red, red Rose." And still there was no demonstration.

"Boys," said I, "she's a humbug. Let us sing 'Home, Sweet Home,' if that don't bring her, I'll give her up."

We struck up, and as we finished the last line, the window was raised.

"That's the ticket, boys, I knew we could fetch her."

But instead of a beautiful young lady, it turned out to be the old Quaker, in his night cap and dressing gown.

"Friends," said he "those was singing of thy home—and if I recollect aright, thee said there was no place like home; and if that is true, why don't thee go to thy home. Thee is not wanted here—thee, nor none of thy company. Farewell." We, and our hats went home.

A Persian Princess.

I went to see the Shah's half sister, a beautiful girl of 12, who lived with her mother in an obscure part of the ante room, neglected by the Shah and consequently by everybody else. She was really lovely, fair and indescribable eyes, and figure only equalled by some of the chefs d'œuvre of Italian arts. This is so rare among Persian women, that she was one of the few persons I saw in the country with an approach to a good figure. She was dressed in the usual fashion of trousers and trowsers the last pair being of such stiff brocade that if put standing upright in the middle of the room there they would remain. Her hair was curled, not plaited, and she was literally covered with diamonds. She was quiet in her manners and seemed dejected. She was most anxious to hear about European customs.

What seemed to surprise her most was that we took the trouble to undress every night on going to bed: and she asked was it true that we had to put on a long white dress to pass the night in? As Persian women are astonished at this custom, and are quite unable to account for it. They never undress at night: they unite their thin mattress from its silken cover, draw it out from its place against the wall, and roll themselves up in the wadded quilt which forms their blanket. The only time they change their clothes is when they go to bathe. If they go out to visit, they, of course, put on their best garments, and take them off at night; but generally they lie down just as they are, and even in cold weather they wear their "chadour," or out of door veil at night.

The Unscrupulous Lawyer.

About ninety years ago, the celebrated "Counsellor Costello" was in his zenith in the Irish bar, where he was unrivalled for wit, acuteness, and propensity to brogue.—His practice lay considerably in the criminal courts, where, by his ingenuity, he enabled the most deserving culprits to evade the well earned punishment of the law. He was one day summoned to Newgate in a hurry, and in a case of great emergency. The safe or strong box of Glendour & Co. had been plundered to an immense amount.—Suspicion had fallen upon the deputy cashier, who was in consequence arrested and sent to prison, inside of the walls of which he was advised by his fellow prisoner (whom on his entrance he had conciliated by "coming down" handsomely) to send for Counsellor Costello, who would, if any man could, save his life. It was in obedience to this summons that the Counsellor repaired to Newgate—a practice not very general in London, perhaps, but not at all unusual in Dublin.

"I am told you are committed for purloining 10,000 guineas, my dear sir," said the Counsellor, as he entered the cell."

"I am."

"Are you guilty?"

"Sir?"

"Have you arogaum chese?"

"I don't understand you."

"Did you do the thing?"

"Sir, you insult me by your suspicion."

"Then, by the powers, you'll be hanged"—and the Counsellor took his hat.

"Hold, sir, said the prisoner—who, after a little hesitation, confessed that he was able to pay the Counsellor a thousand guineas if he procured his acquittal—the bargain was struck, and the Counsellor took his leave.

Costello immediately repaired to the Crown Office, as it was then called in Dublin, from which his client had been committed. The sitting Magistrate was still on the bench.

"Good morrow, Mr. Alderman," said the Counsellor as he entered—"Is there any thing new to day—anything stirring in my way?"

"Yes, a most extraordinary case has occurred. One of the Glendours' clerks has abstracted from the strong box of the bank ten bags, each containing 1,000 guineas in gold. He was arrested this morning; some of the property was found on him, and has been sworn to. I sent him to Newgate half an hour since, and he'll certainly swing after the next Commission." [Old Bailey Sessions.]

"The property sworn to! why, zounds, how can that be? One guinea is precisely like another, and——"

"True, but with the guineas the fellow stole some foreign gold coins, one of which, a broad Dutch, was found on him when arrested; it has been identified by the chief cashier, so you will admit that he has no chance of escape. Here it is," and he handed the coin to the Counsellor.

Costello took the money into his hand, looked at it most attentively, turned it in his hand, and after considering it with the air of a virtuoso, returned it to the Alderman, with—"Upon my, conscience, as clear a case as I ever met."

After some unimportant conversation, he withdrew to his home, by the packet which sailed that night, he despatched a messenger to Amsterdam, with certain instructions, and a strict injunction to be back in Dublin within three weeks, the end of which the Commissioner of Oyer and Terminer was to commence. The man succeeded in the object of his mission, and returned to Dublin on the very morning of the day appointed for the trial of his master's client.

The prisoner was put upon trial. The principal cashier of Glendour & Co. proved the circumstances of the robbery, as narrated by the Alderman to Costello, adding that the robber who came to receive out the prisoner, had substituted ten bags of half-pence for those of the gold which he had stolen.—The Dutch piece was then handed to the witness by the counsel for the prosecution; he unhesitatingly identified it as the property of his employers. This evidence was conclusive—the prisoner's countenance changed—the jury bilicated by their gestures that they were satisfied; the witness was descending from the stand, when Costello exclaimed—

"Stop, young man a word with you. I will thank you for that gold piece, Mr.——" (addressing the counsel for the prosecution, who handed it to him.) He looked at it, rubbed it on the sleeve of his well worn coat, and turning to the witness, said, holding the piece of money in his fingers—"and you positively swear this is the identical piece of gold which was in the strong box of Glendour & Co?"

"I do."

"Have a care, young man, look at it again," said Costello, offering it to the witness, but letting it fall into his hat, which lay before him on the table. I beg your pardon," said he, taking up and handing the coin to the witness. "You are sure that this is the identical piece of money."

"I am."

"You are positive? look at it again."

"I do; and swear it is the very identical piece."

"And this," said the Counsellor, taking another and a similar piece from his hat.

The witness was petrified.

Costello had had at the Crown Office impressed upon his mind the date and effigies of the gold piece shown him, and it was to procure similar coins that he had thus sent to Holland.

"And this!" continued he—"and this—and this—and this!" taking a fresh piece from his hat at each question. The witness was struck dumb. The prisoner was immediately acquitted.

Miscellany.

AN ILLUSTRATION OF MODERN INTELLIGENCE.—We have received from a private source, an account of some very curious incidents that were recently made manifest about twelve miles from Newburgh, on the Hudson River. It appears that ten years ago, a wealthy farmer named Simonds, had a presentiment that he would die on the 20th day of August, 1856. So strongly was he impressed with this strange idea, that he regarded his decease, at the time mentioned, as a matter of certainty. He selected a spot for his grave, bought an iron railing to surround it, and had a fine tombstone, and an elegant coffin prepared, and brought to his house. On Thursday last, the day indicated by the "presentiment," he had a clergyman and an undertaker at hand. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, after having partaken, with his friends, of a hearty dinner, he went to bed for the purpose of yielding up the ghost. He cried his best to die, but couldn't, and was at last obliged to confess that he had been the slave of ridiculous hallucination. It is said that hundreds of people flocked to his house to see him expire. We trust that both they and Mr. Simonds are now convinced that "no man knoweth when the last summons shall come." Superstition is as rife now as it was two centuries ago, but the people of this fast age do not like to acknowledge it. —N. Y. Sunday Times.

An Irish carriage driver made a very happy and characteristic reply the other day. A gentleman had replied to Pat's "Want a carriage, sir?" by saying "No, I am able to walk;" when Pat rejoined, "May your honor long be able, but seldom willing."

During a steam voyage, on a sudden stoppage of the machinery, a considerable alarm took place, especially among the female passengers. "What is the matter? what is the matter? For heaven's sake, tell me the worst?" exclaimed one more anxious than the rest. After a short pause, a hoarse voice from the deck replied, "Nothing, madam, nothing; only the bottom of the vessel and the top of the earth are stuck together."

An inquisitive lawyer, famous for examining witnesses, had a nice old gentleman, and witty withal, upon the stand, questioning him upon his ability to loan money and give credit, resorting to all sorts of interrogatories, to draw from him a statement of the amount of his property and in what it consisted—in fact how much he was worth. The old gentleman considering the question rather impudent, for he was quite wealthy, answered that he had a wife he always called dear—a boy and a girl that he would not sell for any money—a mortgage on a two-story house and lot—a span of pigs and the mother of the same—a barrel of cider that never saw daylight, and a puppy that knows more than you do, for which I have been offered twenty-five dollars."

Lord Palmerston, in his speech in the House of Commons on the motion of thanks to the army and navy, mentioned the following facts which briefly illustrate the vast resources of the British Empire:—"We commenced the war with a small army and a comparatively small fleet, but we ended with an army of 110,000 men, and a naval force, the like of which no country had ever seen before. We began the war with a total of 242 ships, and ended with 590. He next referred to the services of the militia, and mentioned that 37 regiments had volunteered for foreign service, while in the course of the war, they had supplied 30,000 to the regiments of the line."

Lord Howe, when a captain, was once hastily awakened in the middle of the night by the lieutenant of the watch, who informed him, with great agitation that the ship was on fire near the magazine.

"If that be the case," said he, leisurely putting on his clothes, "we shall soon know it."

The lieutenant flew back to the scene of danger and again returned, exclaiming—

"You need not be afraid; the fire is extinguished.

"Afraid," replied Howe, "what do you mean by that, sir? I never was afraid in my life;" and, looking at the lieutenant full in the face, he added, "Pray, how does a man feel when he is afraid? I need not ask how he looks."

"O, my friend," said a doctor to an Irish patient, "be composed; we must all die once."

"An it's that what vexes me," replied Pat. "If I could die a half a dozen times, I'd not care a half penny about it this time."

The following toast was drank at a social gathering in Baltimore. It is hard to beat.

"In ascending the hill of prosperity, may we never meet a friend.

"Look out up dare, how you trow bricks—guess you want to kill dis nigger," said a lusty black hod carrier, the other day, when a large brick fell from a two story scaffold upon his head and broke in two, without any further damage.

NOVEL EXHIBITION.—There will be exhibited at Three Rivers, during the Provincial Agricultural Show next week, a girl only three years old, weighing 112 lbs, and with a bust as fully developed as if she was of mature years. She is a native of Machiche.—Montreal Pilot.

HER MAJESTY'S MILITARY COSTUME—Her Majesty, at several of the reveiws, has, observes the Globe, with her usual gracious consideration, exhibited the most anxious desire to pay compliments to the pride of her brave soldiers by appearing in a most splendid military uniform, the particulars of which will no doubt please our lady readers. The habit is of the finest scarlet cloth, the ornaments on the collar of which is beautifully embroidered in gold and silver, with the device of a field marshal. A brilliant star upon the left breast, across the left shoulder the blue ribbon of the garter, and a very gorgeous crimson and gold net sash, terminated with gold bullion tassels. The hat is of a remarkably light black felt, with a round crown and a most graceful design, having a very elegant general officer's plume of white and red feathers, and a rich cord of crimson and gold three times round the crown, ending with two handsome gold and crimson bullion tassels. Nothing can exceed the beauty of this costume and its accessories.

The Montreal Pilot, in a recent article shows conclusively that a member of Assembly cannot hold his seat, and at the same time be legally a candidate for the Legislative Council. That a member cannot resign his seat without the concurrence of his constituents, a bit more than the latter can force him to resign without his own consent; the contract is mutually binding for four years. He says:—

The sixth section of the Legislative Council Elective Act declares, "that no member of one House shall be member of the other." And the practice in England, and which we in Canada adopt as our parliamentary rule, effectively and absolutely prolibits any who are now members of the House of Assembly from becoming members of the Legislative Council. Even should both parties the elected and the electors agree to annul their contract, the Speaker of the House of Assembly, could not, during the recess, issue his warrant, except the vacancy occurs from death or the acceptance of a peerage—the latter in Canada is rather a remote contingency.

A child of four months old, of respectable French Canadian parents met with a singular death on Monday night. It fell from its mother's arms during her sleep, and the string of its cap catching upon the post of a cot at the side of the bed, it was suspended and strangled. When the mother woke in the morning, she missed the child, and looking for it found it hanging dead.—Commercial Advertiser Montreal.

THE NEW CRIMINAL LUNATIC ASYLUM.—The Solicitor General West has just completed on the part of the Provincial Government, the purchase of the Cartwright Property (known as Crookshank's) for the location of the new Lunatic Asylum. It is one of the handsomest properties and locations in Canada, more fit for the residence of the Governor General than the location of Criminal Lunatics.—Kingston Whig.

CURIOUS EXPERIMENT.—In September last, an experiment was made at Ellengrove, near Maryport, to test the truth of the marvellous stories occasionally current of toads liberated alive from solid and air-tight blocks of stone. A toad was covered in a small flowerpot, which was then placed inverted on a slate, and the whole buried 18 inches in the soil and a large stone being placed on the pot to prevent its being disturbed. After nine months' deprivation of air and food, it was found to be in existence.

HOW TO MAKE ONE FARM EQUAL TO TWENTY.—In a recent address by G. T. Stewart, Esq., before the Ohio Agricultural Society, he thus speaks on the subject:—"Many farmers are destroying the productiveness of their farms by shallow work.—As they find that their crops are diminishing they think only of extending their acres of surface, as they supposed their title deeds only gave them a right to six inches of earth. If they will take those deeds, study their meaning and apply it as lesson to their fields they will soon realize in three fold crops, the fact the law has given three farms where they supposed they had only one; in other words that the subsoil, brought up and combined with the topsoil, and enriched with the atmospheric influences, and those elements which agricultural science teaches them to apply to their ground, will increase three fold the measure of its productiveness."

DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.—The Colonist of Saturday says—We were shown yesterday a counterfeit dollar bill, on the City Bank of Montreal, passed by a respectable female in one of the principal dry good houses on King Street. The bill is said to be issued from the Three Rivers agency. It can be detected by noticing that the word "Parliament" on the left side is spelled "Parliment."

The same journal says, a forged ten dollar bill on the Commercial Bank was taken by a shrewd citizen, it being hardly ably well executed.

ROLLING IRON.—The common method of rolling iron is to pass it between heavy metallic rollers, the latter revolving in fixed bearings. A machine has now been invented by which to roll iron into sheets that are of a tapering thickness;—that is thicker at one edge than at the other. The long wrought iron hinges used upon heavy doors are cut from iron of this description. The iron to be rolled is placed, when properly heated upon a flat bed, and a roller is made to traverse over the iron until it is suitably rolled out. The frame in which the roller is carried is subject to certain adjustable guides, by means of which the roller is readily made to press harder and harder as it advances, and thus taper down the iron beneath—a simple and effective process, and of great practical value.

"If you ever think of marrying a widow," said an anxious parent to his son, "select one whose first husband was hung: that is the only way to prevent her throwing his memory in your face, and making annoying comparisons." "Even that wont prevent it" exclaimed a crusty old bachelor, "she'll not only praise him but say hanging would be too good for you."

A telegraphic despatch from Washington represents the Secretary of War as busily engaged in seeking for authority to put down the San Francisco Vigilance Committee. Should he ascertain that he is clothed with the necessary power, he will it is stated, transmit orders to General Wool, by the next Steamer, to concentrate his whole available force upon San Francisco. Doubtless a portion of the naval force in the Pacific will be ordered to co-operate with the army, and we may possibly have another demonstration a la Greytown, in this attempt of the administration to crush out the vigilants.—Globe

It is said when the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which lately met at Albany, decided to hold its next meeting in this city, one of the savans rose and impromptu delivered the following:

John Bull an I Brother Jonathan
Will form a new alliance,
And both shake hands upon the broad
And neutral ground of Science
Philosophers shall talk away
On matters they delight in,
Upon the soil of Canada;
That's better far than fighting.

A terrible riot occurred at Baltimore on Friday afternoon between a Fillmore Club and a party of men at the Seventeenth ward Democratic Republican Club. Two men were shot dead and some twenty others wounded, several, it is believed, fatally. The fight lasted only a few minutes, but the firing was heavy and severe. Neither of the men killed were engaged in the fight, and most of those wounded were residents in the vicinity, attracted to the spot by the disturbance.

THE "PERSIA" OUTDONE.—The Cunard Company have made arrangements for the construction of another iron steamship, on the Clyde, to be called the Scotia. It is to be larger than the Persia, and Capt. Judkins is confident it will exceed the Persia in speed as much as that fine vessel exceeds ordinary ocean steamers. He thinks the British naval architects have learnt much since the Persia was built, and will improve both in model and construction of the engine. The Scotia will be finished in about a year.—Leader.

FLY POISON.—"It is a curious fact," says the Courrier de Lyons," that although the butcher's shops at Geneva are all open, and an immense number of flies may be seen on the outside walls, not one comes inside. This is caused by the inner walls being rubbed over with laurel oil, which is an effective preventitive against the intrusion of these troublesome insects. The same oil is used with success in preventing the flies from spoiling the gilt frames of looking glasses, pictures, &c. The Courrier du Havre states that no fly will enter a room in which a wreath of walnut leaves has been hung up.

A PRACTICAL LESSON.—"Shon, mine son" said a worthy German father to his hopeful heir of ten years, whom he had overheard using prof ane language—"Shon, mine shon, come here," said I will tell you a liddle story" Now mine son, shall it be drue stories, or a makesbelieve?" On a true story, of course, answered John." Ferry fell dan. Tere vas vonce a goot, nicesold shentleman (shoots like me), sands he had a naughty liddle boy (shoots like you). Anoder day he heard him shwearing, like young Dillon as he vas. So he vent to the winkle (corner), and doofe out a cowhides, shoost as I toing now, and I took ter liddle blackguard by de collar (dis way, you see), and volloped him shoost so! And den, mine tear son, he hull his ears dis way, and smack his face dat vay, and smack his face dis vay, and dell him to mitout his supper, shoost as you vill do dis efening."

WHITEWASH FOR FENCES.—One ounce white vitriol, (sulphate of zinc,) and three ounces of common salt, to every three or four pounds of good fresh lime, it is said will render it very durable when exposed to the weather.

A JOURNAL with which we have generally agreed in politics—the Brantford Herald—gives it as a reason for the failure of the Dissolution Meeting in that town, that a self-nominated clique undertook to get up the demonstration. Knowing the antecedents of our contemporary, we are disposed to interpret his reference to be to the Clear Grit party; and it is with the sincerest pleasure that we find a journal which has held so high a position in the country, denouncing, in spite of its anti ministerial tendencies, the impudence of this ignorant section of Reformers. The Herald can hardly participate in the Ministerial triumph; but it is sincerely thankful that Clear Gritism has been defeated. And our contemporary's position forces upon our notice the incompatibility of the attempted alliance between the Reformers who acknowledged the leadship of Mr BALDWIN and Mr. HINCKS, and the new fashioned Reformers who follow the religious Crusaders, and seek republican alliances. We will avow that the difficulties of the last session of Parliament—the weaknesses induced by an effete and imbecile leadership—and the train of indiscretions which marked the conduct of the Coalition party,—forced us, unwillingly, to attempt what had before been deemed impossible, viz., the revival of the Reform party on its original basis. When, Mr Ross resigned his seat in a government which he found to be incapable, from the causes already adverted to, to carry on the public administration, we did suppose it not improbable that some means might be found—if the other Liberal members of the Cabinet were determined to stick to Sir ALLAN MCNAB—to revive the old Reform party. How far this expectation was justified, is now matter of history. Mr. Ross, instead of being assailed as it might have been expected he would be, chiefly by the Ministerial supporters, was denounced almost solely by the Clear Grit Press; and the first nomination of a Parliamentary candidate by that party, was marked by a degree of opposition to Mr. Ross, which showed how unnatural must be any attempted alliance between the old Reformers and the fanatics who seceded from Mr. BALDWIN'S leadership. When Mr. WILLIAM NOTMAN was chosen to represent the Reform sentiment of Wentworth, it soon became manifest that a Reform coalition was likely to prove an impossiblity. And in this place, we may record an incident only known to a few public men which will show that it is the object of the Clear Grit leaders to prevent any candidate of respectability and of moderate views from coming into the field. A party of the electors of Wentworth visited Toronto during the Session, with the view of considering what steps should be taken to bring forward a candidate. The feeling against Mr SPENCE, at the moment, was not confined to those who had always been opposed to him. His separation from Mr. Ross rendered it for the time doubtful whether he was to meet the decided opposition of the most influential moderate men with whom he had acted.—And in the emergency, a leading Reformer from the Gore district attempted to impress upon the Wentworth delegation the propriety of appealing to Mr. BALDWIN to allow his name to be brought forward. It is impossible for us to say what would have been the issue of any such application to the old Reform leader: and we happen to be aware that he had not been consulted in the matter. The delegation, however seemed at first to enter cordially into the proposition to apply to him. But as there was some hesitancy on the part of one of the members of the party, the decision was postponed for a night in order that the doubtful elector might consult a leader of the opposition.—The consultation we presume was had, and the cosequence was a split among the delegation, and a decision not to have anything to say to so uncertain a Reformer as Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. NOTMAN was subsequently chosen in his stead, and the first step was taken towards a Clear Grit triumph in Wentworth. As against Mr. SPENCE we predict it will not succeed.

Our policy, until we can see some more feasible means than at present for organizing a strong government, is to prevent the reins of power from falling into the hands of the ignorant, unscrupulous and cowardly crew who form the centre of the Clear Grit opposition in this city. To prevent such a result, we counsel our friends to make any sacrifice, and submit to any calumny. Better for them a thousand times to be defeated in company of men of honor, than to triumph with those with whom ignorance and insolence are virtues.—Leader.

The American Government on Privateering.

The London papers publish at full length the despatch in which Mr. Marcy communicates the views of the American Government on the propositions as to maritime law adopted by the Conference at Paris.

The proposition adopted at the Paris Conference were four in number. They are as follows:—

1. Privateering is and remains abolished;
2. The neutral flag covers enemy's goods, with the exception of contraband of war,
3. Neutral goods, with the exception of contraband of war, are not liable to capture under enemy's flag;
4. Blockade, in order to be binding, must be effective, that is to say, maintained by a force sufficient really to prevent access to the coast of the enemy.

The American government accepts the three latter propositions, but objects to that of privateering. Mr. Marcy says:—"It certainly ought not to excite the least surprise that strong naval Powers should be willing to forego the practice, comparatively useless to them of employing privateers upon condition that weaker Power agree to part with their most effective mean of defending their maritime rights. It is, in the opinion of this government, to be seriously apprehended that if the use of privateers be abandoned, the dominion over the seas will be surrendered to those powers which adopt the policy and have the means of keeping up large navies. The one which has a decided naval superiority would be potentially the mistress of the ocean, and by the abolition of privateering, that domination would be more firmly secured. Such a power engaged in a war with a nation inferior in naval strength, would have nothing to do for the security and protection of its commerce but look after the ships of the regular navy of its enemy. These might be held in check by one half, or less, of its naval force, and the other might sweep the commerce of its enemy from the ocean. Nor would the injurious effects of a vast naval superiority to weaker states be much diminished if that superiority was shared among three or four great powers. It is unquestionably the interest of such weaker states to discountenance and resist a measure which fosters the growth of regular naval establishments.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, SEPTEMBER 25, 1856.

AS we doubt not the friends of Col. Prince will be glad to hear of the progress which he is making in his canvass of this County, we give below a brief sketch of the different meetings held by him during the past week, and at all of which, as will be seen, he came off most triumphant. Indeed, the Col's success throughout has been most complete, exceeding by far either his own or his friends most sanguine expectations; so much so, that we have now not the slightest hesitation in saying that Essex will give Col. Prince, at the approaching election, a larger majority than it has ever yet done.

THE MEETING AT THE RIVER CANARD.

This meeting was held on Thursday last at the Tavern of Mr. William Brooker, which is situate about midway between Sandwich and Amherstburgh, and was composed principally of French Canadians, and who assembled to the number of about two hundred, for the purpose, as they said, of hearing what their old friend and Representative had to say to them. Thos. Woodbridge, Esq., was called to the chair, and who briefly addressed the meeting as to the object for which they had assembled together. Col. Prince then came forward, and was received with three times three and one cheer more. After order was restored, the Col. addressed the meeting at considerable length, in his usual clear, able, and eloquent manner, explaining to them the great change which had been effected in our constitution by the passing of the Legislative Council Bill and pointed out the importance of electing to the position of Legislative Councillors only men of known honesty, ability and integrity. He then briefly adverted to the qualifications possessed by Messrs. Rankin and Dougall, the other two candidates in the field for their suffrages, and asked those present whether, in their opinion, they were men of such talent and experience to justify them in electing them (Rankin and Dougall) to the high and important position to which they aspired. Neither did he come there to trumpet his own praise and to tell them that he (Col. Prince) was better qualified for the position of a Legislative Councillor than either of the other two gentlemen who opposed him. All he asked of them was, to take into their calm and deliberate consideration, the respective merits and qualification of each Candidate, and to vote for that man whom they honestly and conscientiously believed to be most worthy of their support and capable of doing the most good. He then discussed at considerable length the merits of the Separate School Question, as also the question of Representation according to population, and concluded by saying, that he should be most happy to answer any question which might be put to him upon either of the above mentioned subjects or any other. But as no questions were put, we take it for granted that the exposition given by the Colonel of his views and principles relative to those questions was perfectly satisfactory to the meeting.

Col. Prince was listened to throughout with the most marked attention, and at the conclusion of his speech was vociferously applauded.

Francis Carron, Esq., being called for, came forward, and delivered a most eloquent and telling address in the French language, explanatory of his reasons for withdrawing that support from Mr. Rankin, which he extended him at the last election, the principal one of which was, that Mr. Rankin had given a pledge, at the last election, to five or six of the leading members of the Roman Catholic Church, that he would, if elected, give his influence in favor of Separate Schools; but that he had basely violated that pledge upon the very first opportunity which presented itself; and consequently, that he (Carron) no longer considered him worthy of his confidence or that of the Electors of Essex. Mr. Carron concluded by advising all of his Roman Catholic friends to vote, as he intended to do, for Col. Prince, the man who, in his place in Parliament, had invariably supported them and their institutions. Mr. Carron was repeatedly applauded during his speech, and sat down amidst loud cheers.

Prince Bondy, Esq., the Deputy Reeve of the Township, next addressed the meeting, and stated that he also had been a supporter of Mr. Rankin at the last election; but that for the same reasons which had been given by Mr. Carron, he had withdrawn his confidence from that gentleman. He advised his friends to vote for their old and faithful friend, Colonel Prince. (Cheers.)

It was then moved that Mr Woodbridge leave the chair, and that Mr. Prince Bondy do take the same, which was carried unanimously. Three cheers were then given for the Queen, three for Col. Prince, three for Mr. Carron, three for Mr. Bondy, and three for Mr. Woodbridge, the chairman, and the meeting adjourned.

THE MEETING AT MAISONVILLE'S.

This meeting, like the one above referred to, was composed wholly, or nearly so, of French Canadians, of whom there were about 120 present, and nine-tenths of whom, as at Brooker's were in favor of Col Prince. Laurent Reaume, Esq., was, by a unanimous vote, chosen chairman, and most ably did he perform his duty as such, as one and all who were present will testify. The Colonel met with the same enthusiastic reception here which he did at the River Canard; and proud and delighted indeed must he have been at seeing so many of his old French Canadian friends, some of whom were sixty years of age and upwards, assembled around him. We say, it must have been gratifying, highly gratifying, to the old Colonel, to see so many of his old friends flock round his standard upon his again presenting himself for their suffrages, and proffer him the same confidence and support which they extended him nearly twenty long years ago, when he first made his appearance among them.

John O Connor, Esq., Mr. Marantette, and Mr. Riggs, the Editor of the British Canadian, severally addressed the meeting on behalf of Mr. Rankin, but with apparently very little effect. To the credit of those gentlemen, however, be it said, that at all events, upon this occasion, the Ray, Bull-Frog, Whiskey, &c., fabrications were dispensed with.

THE MEETING AT AMHERSTBURG

Came off on Saturday evening last, in the Town Hall, and was, we believe, with one exception, the largest meeting ever held in that town; and we regret much that want of space precludes our giving more than a passing notice of it. Suffice it to say, that at the close of the meeting, a resolution, expressive of the confidence of the meeting in the honesty and integrity of Col. Prince, and pledging themselves to use all lawful exertions to secure his return, was carried by a majority of at least four to one. Thos. Paxton, Esq, of Amherstburg, officiated as chairman. The speakers upon the occasion were, Col. Prince, (who delivered one of the most powerful and eloquent addresses we have heard for many a long day,) Francis Carron, Esq., John O'Connor, Esq., and Mr. William Bartlett.

THE MEETING AT PARTRIDGE'S,

(which is about three miles above Windsor,) and which came off on Tuesday evening last, was a most glorious triumph, as will be readily understood, when we inform our readers that the following resolution was read to the meeting, (at which about one hundred and fifty of the electors of the Township were present, and three-fourths of whom were French Canadians,) and carried with only three dissenting voices. Two of the dissentients were from Sandwich, and the other from Windsor.

It is moved by Mr. Charles Labadie Sen., and seconded by Mr. Francis Janisse, that this meeting having full confidence in the honesty and integrity of their late Representative, Col. Prince, and believing him to be the most fit and proper person in the County, to represent them in the Legislative Council, do hereby pledge themselves to use all lawful exertions to secure his return.

THE "PLANET" AGAIN.

In last week's Leaf, we were unable to reply to the article in the Planet of the 15th instant, from a press of matter of greater importance.

As the subject of the magisterial dismissal has already occupied more of our space than we intended it should, we will be as brief as possible in our present remarks. The Planet appears to be particularly dull of comprehension in this matter; and we would refer him to Mr. Rankin's speech, delivered in Chatham, on the 1st of this month, and reported in the Planet, in its issue of the 3rd. Mr. Rankin says:

'Soon after the commencement of the Session of Parliament, a black and friendless man called upon him. A deputy Sheriff from the other side had gone before the magistrate of Sandwich, with the charge against another black man of stealing a horse. Those magistrates granted a warrant, and the man was brought to Sandwich, accompanied by the aforesaid deputy Sheriff, and two American officers. They took him to a tavern, from thence the Americans took him out and crossed the river with him—neither he nor the sleigh in which they took him ever coming back, or any account being rendered of them. When the constables returned to the tavern the bird was flown—the man was carried out of the country. The magistrates never brought up the constables, never made any investigation into the charge. The magistrates, to be sure knew nothing of this, it was merely a matter of public report—it was only a nigger carried out of the country."

And where the magistrates could be to blame, we are quite unable to conceive: for they surely could not be responsible for the actions of a deputy sheriff from the United States. And as to the investigation so much spoken of, the magistrates did use every exertion, and proposed to have the constable brought up for examination, if Garrett or any person would lay a complaint upon oath that he (the constable) had any thing to do whatever with "spiriting the negro out of the country." This he, (Garrett,) would not do, nor could he get any one to do it; therefore the magistrates of necessity, could have no investigation of the matter. The same proposal was made to Mr. Rankin, if we mistake not.

We may as well state, for the information of the "Planet," that the constable was taken before the Grand Jury, during the Assizes held a short time after the occurrence, where every opportunity was afforded to investigate the charge, but they could not find that the constable had aided in any way the removal of the prisoner to the States, and acquitted him.

The prisoner was not a fugitive from slavery, as the horse for which he was arrested was stolen in the State of Ohio.

THE ELECTION.

The time is now approaching when the Electors will be called upon to choose a Candidate for representing them in the Council; and by advertisement it appears that John Mercer, Esq., Sheriff of Kent, has been appointed Returning Officer. The nomination will take place at Chatham, on Saturday the 4th of October next: and the polling day has been fixed for Monday the 13th following.

Electors must now decide upon which one of the three candidates in the field is the most eligible, and which one has the most claims upon their consideration. Whether Mr. Rankin, whom we have already shown, unqualified to take a seat in the Council [if he should receive a majority of votes,] or Mr. Dougall, who is altogether a new man, having never before been in public life and therefore untried, and whose occupations heretofore have been of a nature to unfit him for the responsibilities which will devolve upon a Legislative Councillor; or the old and tried representative, Colonel Prince, whom we may depend upon as faithful and true to our interests, who, in his former career as a representative in the Lower Chamber, was always noted for his exertions in forwarding the advancement of his constituents; and may we not expect the same from him if elected to the Council? may we not with more certainty choose him as our representative on this occasion? We answer, as a majority of you Electors will answer, that he is the fittest, and the only one of the three who is competent to receive your support

The following we clip from the Globe of the 22nd inst. Mr. Murney is a Member of the Legislative Assembly, and finding that the Law disqualifies him as such to take a seat in the Council Chamber, has retired from the field. Mr. Murney has no doubt investigated the matter thoroughly before taking this step, as he could have been elected for the Trent Division without opposition.

"TRENT DIVISION.—We are informed that, after full consideration, Mr. Murney has determined that he is not eligible as a member of the Legislative Council, and that he has, in consequence, left the field in Trent to others. Although not unwilling to see Mr. Murney receive any honors to which the people think him entitled, we are glad that he retains his seat for Hastings, at which the Ministerialist, Benjamin, has been casting a longing eye."

☞ On Monday last, the barns and stables of Mr. Partridge, were set on fire by some ruffian, and we regret to hear were completely consumed, thus destroying the fruits of a whole season's labour. Mr. Patridge farms upon a large scale. and must have lost a large amount, as the whole of his grain and hay were destroyed.

A person named Peter O'Brien, has been arrested on suspicion of having perpetrated the deed.

The British Canadian is the title of a paper established upon the ruins of the late Essex Expositor which flourished only for a few weeks. The Canadian has been started with the object of forwarding the Election of Mr. Rankin to the Council, and as that Gentleman is the proprieter, we may expect that every energy will be exerted to accomplish that end. We are not disposed to deal harshly with our infant brother, but would nevertheless advise him to be more guarded in his assertions in future, than he was in his first issue. We wish him every success and long to live for the enlightenment of the Sandwichites.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.—The General Annual Meeting will be held at Secretary Treasurer's Office, at half past three o'clock, P. M on Monday, 6th of October next, for the purpose of Electing Directors, and for other business.

£150, for sale, on Wednesday, first day of October, at half past three P. M. at the same place.

We have to apologise for a number of misprints in the last week's paper, particularly in the article upon "Rankin's Meeting in Windsor." We must trust to the kindness of our readers to overlook these inaccuracies.

The sale on account of the Essex Building Society, is further postponed, till Monday 6th October 3½ o'clock P.M.

DIED.—At Sandwich, on Sunday Morning last the 21st inst. Barbara Erskine, infant daughter of H. C. Guillot, aged 11 months and 21 days.

Responsible Government.

The people appear to have a true knowledge of responsible Government, which is more than can be said for some of their would-be-teachers. The people understand that when they accepted the Imperial Act for the re-union of the Provinces of Canada and for the Government of Canada, they entered into a contract binding alike on both parties, and that until the Act or a part of it is repealed, its obligations remain in full force. A "prorogation" may voluntarily be conceded, but so long as it remains a "prerogative" no violence or unanimity of petition can or ought to influence its exercise.

In our system of Responsible Government, the people do not affect to be the source of all political power; they acknowledge above them. The people have not made the Queen nor bestowed her prerogatives, but if they had, it would be the same thing. Majorities make contracts and are ever subject to the Imperial Act, but when so made, the Constitution, or the Imperial Act is the protection of the minority.

One single voice of a minority is as potent to uphold the constitution, as fifty thousand of a majority are to destroy it, in any other way than the way provided by itself. Any other doctrine than this, if carried out is practically a revolution by physical force. The right of petition is inherent, but it too is subject to the fundamental rules, by which majorities agree to govern.

When the majority agreed that its parliament should continue four years and no longer, it gave up its right of petition in that particular, for that length of time, and now to petition that that parliament be dissolved, is to usurp a power, which for the time does not belong to it.. The Governor, during the session of parliament, did not see cause to dissolve that body, and for him to do so now, before he calls parliament to meet again, will be to usurp a power which does not belong to his office. Majorities have power to bind, but not to loose before the time. It is a misnomer to call that a "prerogative" whose exercise is influenced by petitions.—Oakville Sentinel.

The prospect of Canada was never better or more encouraging than at the present moment. The elements of material wealth are rapidly increasing. Capital is finding its way into the country, showing the confidence entertained in the various undertakings now in the course of completion. Our resources are being rapidly developed.—New avenues for trade and commerce are coming into play. The long season of apathy that once marked our course has dissappeared, giving place to one of action and progress. A spirit of self reliance has taken hold of the people, which enables them to grapple with and overcome difficulties once considerered insurmountable. Intelligence and and an indomitable spirit of perseverance are striking characteristics now of our business men. Every thing connected with the name of Canada is on a magnificent scale. Our Lakes, rivers, canals, railways and other undertakings may be identified with the word "magnificent." The Grand Trunk Railway now rapidly approaching to completion is one that any country may be justly proud of. When fairly in operation, with a weekly line, of mail steamers from Quebec to Liverpool, we anticipate a new era for our noble country. The much abused government of the day deserves great credit for the bold efforts they have made to divert the travel and commerce of the country through our own waters. After the great success that has attended the Canadian line this year, competing successfully in speed, comfort and safety, with Cunard's, we trust that arrangements will be made next session to assure a steamer weekly to carry all our mailable matter beteween the two countries, thus saving a large amount that now goes into the hands of a foreign government. Animated by such a spirit, we should establish Factories and Manufactories for making those articles that can be made to advantage at home. The adoption of such a policy would add matarially to our advancement. The present government are opening up the back country in a judicious manner by giving free grants to actual settlers, thus encouraging immigration from the old world, and settling the wilderness with a thriving population

QUEBEC, SEPT. 23.

The screw steamship Indian arrived at this port this morning. Her dates from Liverpool are to the 10 inst, four days later than by the Asia.

The steamer Canada arrived at Liverpool on Saturday, the 6th inst.

the screw steamer Etna from New York arrived at Liverpool on the 8th inst., and the Anglo Saxon from Quebec arrived at 6 o'clock in the evening of the 8th.

The weather continued favorable for the harvest, and the accounts from the agricultural districts were generally of a satisfactory character, causing a decline in breadstuffs, and restricting all speculative enquiry. Flour is quoted at 1s@2s per bbl. lower; Baltimore and Philidelphia, 19s@21s.;Ohio 31s@33s Wheat 3d 4d. per bushel lower; old red, 6s.@8s 6d, new red, 9s.@9s. 3d.; old white, 8s.@8s. 9d.; new, 10s.@10s. 3d. Corn, very dull, at a decline of 1s, yellow and mixed quoted at 31s.@31s. 6d.: white 32s. @34s.

Provisions are generally without essential change. Beef dull. Pork quiet. Bacon steady at former rates. Lard in moderate demand; a small lot on spot sold as high as 82s. and parcels to arrive brougt 77s a 79s.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—There has been no change in the tone of the market since the sailing of the Asia. Consols for money closed at 93c a94.

Politically there is no news of special importance.

The prevalence of a severe storm along the Canadian lines has interrupted the telegraph and we have not received our usual synopsis of news.

MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept., 22, 1856.

With the exception of WHEAT, there was but very little produce offering on the market to day, and an unusually small business was done. The price of wheat remains unchanged, the ruling figure being from 6s 6d to 6s 10, the latter being only paid in a few instances, if anything the market is more depressed, outside figures being paid less freely. Buyers appear determined not to make an advance in price, and unless the news from Europe is favourable to higher prices, our market here will probably further decline.

FLOUR continues scarce, and the market is consequently unaffected by the unfavourable news of the two last steamers. Several sales of choice Superfine have been made at $6 50 per barrel.

BARLEY in demand at 6s 10d.

PEAS enquired for at 3s 3d@3s 9d.

OATS sell slowly at 2s 6d for lots of 100 bushels, and 2s 9d by retail.

POTATOES in better supply at 4s@5s 6d per bushel.

APPLES plenty at $2 per barrel; by wholesale, something less.

PEACHES selling freely at $2 per basket.

BUTTER scarce, and all on the market speedily bought up at 1s 6d per lb. Tub sold at 1s 3d.

CHICKENS 2s 6d@3s per pair.

EGGS 10d@1s per dozen.

HAY $12 @$18 per ton.

BEEF in good supply at $5¾@6½ for common—$6⅛@$7 for prime.

WOOL 1s 3d per lb, and is coming in freely.

DETROIT SEPT. 22

FLOUR— With no demand, and increased receipts, the flour market to day is dull, and the tendency is downward. The only sale reported is 119 bbls at $6 12½.

WHEAT— In wheat there is nothing doing, buyers being unwilling to meet sellers' views.

CORN—Dull and nominal at 52@53c

OATS—New sell in small lots, to retailers, at 30@32c; old command 35@36, and are in demand.

PORK— Sells to the trade at $21@21 50 for mess.

SALT—Is in lively request at $1 75 ℔ bbl.

SANDWICH, Sept. 25th, 1856.

Flour, New warranted, $7 Flour, old, $5 25 to $6 00; Buckwheat Flour, $2 00; Rye Flour, $2 00 to $2 50; Timothy Seed, $4 00; Clover, $10 00 Corn Meal, ℔ 100, $1 50 to $2, Corn ℔ bushel, 56 lb, 50c; Oats do 34 lb, 25c, Potatoes do new, 60c; Wheat, new 60 lb, $1 25, Barley do 48 lb, 95c to $1; Hay ℔ Ton $10; Straw ℔ load, $1 50 to $2; Pork ℔ 100 lb, $7; Beef, $7.

Special Notices.

Important to all.

Health is undoubtedly the greatest temporal blessing. Without it, the wealth of the Indies would be insufficient to afford an hour's fleeting enjoyment, while the possession of it makes the most humble cottage the abode of contentment and comfort. Yet while all are ready to admit this great truth, how many too often disregard its possession till no longer theirs to enjoy. All who are suffering from indisposition, should at once try Sir Astley Cooper's Mild Aperient Anti-Bilious Pills, warranted free from Mercurial, Antimonial or other Mineral Substances, which have for nearly half a century been admitted the best family medicine, renovating and invigorating the system, a fine stomachic, and a mild yet efficient aperient, purifying the blood, and striking at the root of disease.

They have been amply tested in the most distressing of nervous affections, and thousands who have been afflicted in every possible way are daily bearing their grateful testimony to the great benefits they have received from their use, and are now rejoicing in a renewed state of health, after having long despaired of ever possessing it again.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—It frequently occurs, that Druggists impose on their customers, a spurious compound called Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, generally put up in red or pink wrapper, and labelled, prepared, or, as prepared at Apothecaries' Hall, London, when the fact is, they are prepared by themselves. Beware of such spurious compounds as you would of poison. The Genuine Pills have the likeness of Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box; also the fac-simile of the signature of the Proprietors, McPhail & Co., on the directions.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited	$40
Same Course for Ladies	25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply	5

For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT,

embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING.

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTEND COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

N. B.—For particulars send for Catalogues and Circulars by mail.

NOTICE.

To the Electors of the Counties of Essex and Kent in Canada West.

GENTLEMEN:

You are aware that Arthur Rankin, Esq., (who is a member of the House of Assembly in this Province) aspires to represent you in the Legislative Council, and has proclaimed himself a Candidate for that distinguished honor. By the statute Law of the land, (namely, the Legislative Council Act, under which the election is about to take place,) it is enacted that no member of one house shall be elected a member of the other." It is therefore perfectly clear that by appearing at the day of election, and receiving a vote, he is guilty of a violation of the law, and that (no matter how many votes he has) he cannot take his seat in the Legislative Council, and the votes you give him will, therefore be adsolutely thrown away! I have given him notice as to the consequences of the illegality of his proceedings, and, I now beg leave to respectfully warn you against casting your votes in favor of a man who places law at defiance, and whose aim appears to be, the sacrifice of your valuable suffrages at the shrine of his own personal vanity and ambition.

The Park Farm, 15th Sept. 1856.

JOHN PRINCE.

TO THE

INDEPENDENT ELECTORS

OF THE

Counties of Essex and Kent.

GENTLEMEN,

THE time has now arrived when it becomes me to address you briefly upon the great change made in the Constitution of this Country by our Sovereign's gracious permission for us to Elect our Legislative Councillors, whereby she has been pleased to wave Her Royal Prerogative to create them as heretofore. For that boon we should be grateful; and I doubt not that, if properly treated and carried out, it will add to the increased prosperity of Canada as exemplified in those Elective Institutions which have so much contributed to our internal advancement and prosperity. It, however, behoves us to consider well and to reflect calmly upon what the qualifications of a Legislative Councillor ought to be, and what the duties of that Council are. It is or ought to be an honourable Body, in every sense of the word. It should consist of men not famed for being Party men, of violent political feelings, or prone to aid in factious opposition to the Government of the day; but men who are well known to the community as men of character and experience in the world, men who can be relied on as much for their honour and independence of demeanour in the Senate as for their ability, and of men too who, by their experience in Legislation, can bring their learning to bear upon those Enactments which come up to them from the popular branch of the Legislature for their deep and solemn consideration. To such men you may safely entrust your interests, and, in my opinion, at least, it would be dangerous to confide in any others. More over, the duties of the Council are most important. They are a check upon the vague, hasty, imperfect, and exuberant legislation which sometimes emanates from the Lower House; and their deliberations should be conducted with that dignity and cool reflection which in a popular assembly it is next to impossible to maintain. I do not address you as a stranger or as a new man soliciting your suffrages for the distinguished honour to which, by your favour, I aspire. But I

TO THE ELECTORS OF The Western Division.

GENTLEMEN:

THE Legislative Council of Canada originally intended to be an imitation of the British House of Peers, but from various reasons, unnecessary here to mention, the mere nomination of its members by the Crown has failed to secure for it the respect and weight which a branch of the Legislature ought to possess.

It has therefore been deemed expedient to render it elective, so as to secure for it a portion of the popular favor, hitherto accorded to the Legislative Assembly.

This change, when fully carried out, will invest the Council with an importance in some degree similar to that which attaches to the Senate of the neighboring Union, a seat in which is a position of greater importance than the Governorship of a State.

The Elective Council of Canada will however have this superiority over that of the Senate of the United States; that its members, instead of being appointed by local Legislative bodies, often by corrupt combinations and intrigues, will be elected directly by them; they will also represent nearly equal constituencies, instead of the gross inequality in this respect, which is found in the American Senate. Senators from N. York represent a population ten times as great as the same number of Senators from Delaware or California.

When it is considered that a Councillor will represent twice the number of Constituents of a Member of the Assembly, and for twice the length of time, it must be obvious that the selection of a proper person to fill so high an office is of the utmost importance to your interests, and to those of the country at large.

The weak point of all representative institutions is the disposition of the Executive to gain majorities by bribing the representatives of the people, and the facility with which the latter have too often sold themselves for considerations of private advantage.

It is by appeals to private interests, by places and jobs, that party lines are made and fixed, and I can conceive no greater political calamity for a Country than to have a majority of its representatives composed of such venal and selfish politicians. I consider this evil that Canada has long groaned, and is now greater, and against which every possible precaution should be taken by Constituencies, when called upon to exercise their invaluable privilege of electing representatives to Parliament.

To secure an object so desirable every thing depends on the personal character of the men chosen, and the two leading elements to be sought for in a Candidate are integrity and ability; without the first an able man may become the mere tool of a Ministry, bloodwinked by their plausible sophistries.

Having lived amongst you for twenty-seven years, you can judge from my antecedents, better than I can, whether or not I possess those essential requisites for your representatives; at all events, at no more favorable occasion will, out the guarantee of previous character, should go for nothing.

My political convictions are entirely in favor of liberal measures, and should I be elected, I will give my most strenuous aid in carrying out the measures of so much importance to the prosperity of the country, such as

Representation by Population, so as to give Upper Canada its proper position in the Legislature.

Common School Education free from Sectarian influence, and the repeal of such acts as grant support to Sectarian Schools now existing.

Retaining the seat of Government in Upper Canada.

The Vitality of Seeds.

THE WHITE DAISY, CANADA THISTLE, ET ID OMNE GENUS.

An intelligent correspondent of Rural New Yorker makes the following observation on the above subject:—

Mr. D. Daniels, under the head of "How to kill the White Daisy," in the Rural of August 9, gives doubtless an effectual remedy for the time being. But there are some facts in regard to the vitality of seeds,—of which, perhaps, he is not aware. The white ox eye daisy, the common May weed, the little daisy, the sorrel, and many other plants usually bear an immense quantity of perfect seed, and as nothing that I know of eats them, and they have no egret or wings to carry them off, they drop on the ground where they grow, but frequently not a vestige of the plant will be seen there the next year.

The fact is getting to be pretty well understood that many of the smaller seeds which are encased in a hard shell, remain in the ground many, probably, of hundreds of years, without losing vitality. Many instances have been cited in your paper, proving this, but I will cite one more. A neighbor of mine plowed a lowish piece of grass ground, and put in a spring crop. He was surprised to find one part of it covered with mustard and the other with turnips, having never seen either there before. On inquiry, he found that twenty years before one part was sown with spring wheat in which there was mustard seed and the other with turnips; very few of the latter of which came up.

Many seed, in order to vegetate, require some peculiar condition of the soil. For example, the button-wood tree requires its seed to be planted in deep subsoil, and will never vegetate in a common ploughed field. Consequently we see it mostly along the banks of streams, where trees have been torn up, and particularly along common highways, railroads, and canals. The common May-weed requires that the surface of the ground shall be stirred as soon as it is thawed in the spring, and while it is frozen under. Thus we see it along the sides of our roads, where teams have turned aside to keep on the snow, and in the corners of fields where pigs or sheep have trod, at that particular season, and seldom any where else. Were it not for this fact the weed would be a great nuisance. The fireweed, as we most know, requires that the surface should be recently burnt over. The wood sorrel has doubtless spread its seeds over most of our cultivated lands. It requires more acid in its food than any of our field crops. Consequently you will see it flourish were plaster has been too frequently sown, and thus an excess of acid left in the soil, and particularly where swamp muck has been piled on dry ground to decompose and disengage its acid. This plant disappears before lime-ashes and other alkalies that neutralize the acid.

Most of our cultivated crops, including many noxious weeds, require a condition more or less general, but there are more plants than those above cited, that have their idiosyncracies. The ox-eye daisy is peculiar in worn out grass lands, and always soon disappears before high cultivation, and if the seeds have once been allowed to ripen fall. I assure Mr. Daniels that he will never live long enough to see them exterminated from the soil, if he allows his land to run down and lie to grass. I do not make these remarks to discredit his recipe; it will doubtless kill all the roots, and, especially if he manures the ground, prevent for the present the vegetation of the weeds in the ground.

The difficulty in eradicating most of our noxious weeds is that they require for their full development the same conditions of the soil as our cultivated plants. This is peculiarly true of the Canada thistle, while at the same time it has all the means known to plants for its propagation and extension: being perenial, produced by cuttings of the roots, the seeds have wings, live in the ground forever, and are eaten and spread by birds. It is a very hardy and tenacious plant, is a pugnacious enemy to human flesh, and on the whole, notwithstanding the apathy produced by its omnipresence, decidedly worse than all other noxious weeds we have, and cannot, during the present century, be exterminated generally, unless by the help of an unknown enemy to the plant, or by disease. It is only by a constant warfare that we can keep it under subjection, while we subdue it in one place it is springing up in another.

To Braise Chickens.—Bone the chickens, stuff them with forcemeat, place in the stewpan the and trimmings, lay the chickens upon them with a brine of fine herbs, onions, mace whole, some thin slices of bacon, bacon about three parts of a pint of stock, or if that is not handy, water, and two glasses of a sorry; the bacon, should be added last.—Cover close, and stew for two hours. Then take out the chickens, strain the braise, remove the fat, and boil the liquor rapidly to glaze; paint it over the chickens with a brush while the braise is being boiled; brown the chickens before the fire, it adds to their appearance. When glazed, fowls may be braised in the same manner.

Buckskins and Gloves.—A good recipe for cleaning leathers and buckskins gloves. Take half a pound of prepared chalk, half a pound of prepared alum, three cakes of pipeclay, half an ounce of caustic soda, half an ounce of isinglass, one ounce of pumicestone powdered, one tablespoonful of starch, six tablespoonfuls of sweet oil, two ounces of white soap. To be mixed in boiling water; the oxalic acid and prepared alum to be added last.

Lemon Butter.—Twelve eggs, 6 lemons, 2 pounds white sugar, 2 oz. butter. Rub the butter and sugar to a cream, beat the whites and yolks separate, grate the rinds of the lemons; mix the whites with the butter and sugar over a slow fire, then stir in the whites, and it is ready for use. Set away until cold. It makes a very nice sauce.

Holes in Pies.—Persons who are in the habit of making pies during the fruit season should not make a hole in top of their pies. By leaving the crust whole the juice is made to boil quicker, and thus the fruit is well done without the crust being burnt. The same result applies to meat pies.

Implements which are no longer wanted for the season, should be carefully laid aside and protected from the weather.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,
AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. Knight, James Scowden and D. W. Ray.

Terms: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the Illustrated Horticulturist for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also Portraits and Memoirs of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the position of Agriculture upon this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

The Queen of Oude.

(SOT)

BY MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, ESQ.

The Queen of Oude,
Which is so proud,
She never will get boozy,
Has crossed the seas,
And, if you please,
Will serve out Lord Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude,
She cries so loud
For justice, like a Q. C.
And claims her right,
And wants to fight
The Marquis of Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude
Has been and vowed
She'll spare no treasures, you see,
To get our Queen
To stand between Herself and Lord Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude
Has brought a crowd
That shares her strange hallucination that she Shall shortly be Avenged on Lord Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude
May spend her Rowdy, careless and sans souci,
But she'll be done,
Likewise her son,
Dethroned by Lord Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude
(Like Mr. Frowde, Newman of Doctor Pusey)
Is "not too wise,"
When she defies
His Lordship of Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude
She is dark-browed.
With eyes like my own Lucy:
Her eyes may flash.
But will not smash
The stubborn Lord Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude
Is disendowed
Of regious rich and juicy—
Their milk and honey
(I mean their money)
Squeezed out by Lord Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude
Shall save her gowd
And this she'd do me duce,
She'd give a bunch
To me and Punch,
And ask my Lord Dalhousie.

The Queen of Oude,
Which is so proud,
Would find her lot adonci
To hear the wit
That we'd emit,
Me, Punch and Lord Dalhousie.

The Sailor in Court.

The following scene occurred on the examination of the mate of the brig Prince of Wales, in a case of damage, in consequence of being run into by the Lady Elizabeth, while at anchor in the Downs:

"You have already stated, that the wind shifted in the evening. What time did the wind turn?"

"The later part of the dog-watch," replied the mate.

"I ask not which part of the dog's watch it was—my question refers to time. What hour was it when the wind turned?"

"About three bells."

"Three o'clock, eh?"

"I never said three o'clock," returned the witness, marking the lawyer's mistake. "I said three bells—half-past five, in the four to six watch."

"Three bells—half past five—four to six," reiterated Waddy. What a precise specification of time. Well, then, sir, at three bells, how was the weather?"

"Greasy, wind to the sou-west. Sun, too, looking wild and watery. Any one, with half an eye, could see a breeze was brewing."

"When the Lady Elizabeth cast anchor, did she take up a position properly apart from the Prince of Wales?"

"She did, but—"

"Come, no buts, sir—answer the question direct."

"Well, then, I says, when one takes into account the circumstances, as might deceive the best man in taking up a distance, I must say as how the barque might have taken up a worse berth."

"In what way could that deception arise?"

"Why, from our buoy not watching at the time."

"The boy not watching at the time—lazy dog! 'He murder's coming out,' said Waddy, exultingly, and then desiring the witness to reply direct to the next question which he was about to put to him, and above all, to be cautious of prevarication, he thus proceeded:

"I ask you, sir, as a seaman, on your oath would mooters have gone the wrong way with the Prince of Wales, had there been a proper watch upon deck?"

The absurdity of this question, added to the pompous declamatory tone in which it was delivered, excited so much of noise and mirth amongst the nautical portion of the auditory, that it became necessary to eject from court a couple of Sunderland "skippers." Upon the restoration of order, and the repetition of the question, the witness replied—

"There was a watch upon deck."

"My Lud," said Mr. Waddy, turning to the bench, "this is positively the grossest case of prevarication I ever met with. Do you persist in swearing," he continued, interrogating the witness, "that a proper watch had been on deck when the wind shifted?"

"I do," replied the mate, in firm and emphatic tones.

"Come you here, sir, to insult common sense? Is it possible you possess effrontery sufficient to tell those intelligent gentlemen," (pointing to the jury,) "that in a vessel situated as the Prince of Wales was—bad weather coming on withal—the watch should have devolved on a dumb animal?"

The witness looked blank.

"Do you hear, sir?" vociferated the bully

"I doesn't understand you," replied the deponent with perfect composure.

The question was shaped anew.

"I ask you, sir, whether it was fitting to entrust a vessel, exposed to the elements, as well as the privateers of the enemy, to the vigilance of a dumb animal, to the watch of a dog?"

"There was ne'er a dog on board," said the witness bluntly.

"And yet, gentlemen of the jury, the witness has had the audacity to assert upon oath that the wind shifted during the latter part of the dog's watch."

"Bill, let's bolt," said an auditor address sing a brother tar, in the rear of the court.

"By the Lord Harry, there's no standing that squinting beggar's lubberly lip."

The judge had already decided that the witness was bound to state distinctly the description of watch which had been left upon the brig's deck.

The witness said—"James Thompson, my lord, had charge of the deck during the whole of the four to six watch. A better seaman never puddened an anchor, hauled out a weather ear ring, or took lead or helm in hand."

"Then how comes it," asked the lawyer of the witness, "that this super-excellent seaman was not as competent to prevent the Lady Elizabeth running aboard the Prince, as the boy of whom you boast so much?"

The witness not appearing to comprehend the question, the judge directed Waddy to repeat it.

"I ask the witness, my lud, if the boy, whose dexterity in taking up a distance he so much extols, could have prevented the dangerous proximity of the Lady Elizabeth to the Prince of Wales—why, then, I ask, as a mere matter of precaution, was not this matchless, quick-sighted lad put upon the watch?"

The mate remained mute."

"Put it more directly, Mr. Waddy," said the judge. Waddy bowed to the bench.

"Why was not the boy put upon the watch?"

"Because the buoy wanted bleeding," was the acute reply.

"Had you a surgeon in the ship?"

At this question, the assumed gravity of the witness was put to the test. It was with difficulty he could refrain from laughing aloud—he, however, answered in the negative.

"No surgeon in the ship?"

"Sartinly no."

"Then how, sir, can you take upon yourself to give an opinion upon a medical point? Pray, sir, have you made physic, as well as seamanship a study?"

"I can't abide physic—never took a dose in my life."

"Then upon what grounds do you assert that the buoy wanted bleeding?"

"Cause 'twas full o' water."

"Gracious heaven!" exclaimed Waddy, with extended arms—was ever greater ignorance betrayed! My Lud, the jury can never receive such testimony. Who ever heard of resorting to depletion in a dropsical case?"

"I say it again," rejoined the witness, looking at Waddy full in the face, "the buoy wanted tapping."

"Never, never, was there an instance of grosser prevarication! Note this, gentlemen of the jury, he first swears that the boy wanted bleeding, and now that he finds himself in error, he turns from the operation of bleeding to that of tapping."

"Well, I says as still—bleeding's just as propers tarm as tapping—take the turns out of that if you can!" said the mate, in a tone of defiance.

"I can't suffer you, my man, to be insolent to counsel," said the judge, addressing the witness, in a reproving tone.

"I'm not insolent, my lord; but where's the man, my lord, as can bear to be bullied and badgered by a lubberly lawyer as doesn't know the main-brace from the cap tain's breeches."

This burst of offended feeling excited in the Court a sensation not to be described. The sons of the sea were seen rubbing their huge hands with glee and delight, whilst expressions of surprise, and scowls of indignation betrayed themselves in the tell-tale features of the members of the bar.

A Singuiar Death-Struggle.

A singular circumstance was related to me by one of the house surgeons of the charity hospital of Paris. In one of the men's wards of the immense hospital a man was dying at twelve o'clock at night. At this hour in the surgical wards there is no movement except in cases of necessity, the lamps burn dimly, and the guardians are ordinarily sleeping in their chairs. But there are always some of the patients more or less wakeful by cause of their sufferings. The man who was dying had in the pockets of his pantaloons a tolerably well-filled purse—not at all a rare circumstance in a Paris hospital. He was a miser. He had kept his pantaloons carefully stowed away under his pillow, but his frequent attentions to the safety of his pocket-book aroused the attention and cupidity of the man who occupied the next bed to him. This man watched with wakeful eyes for the proper moment to seize the dead man's treasure. When the man no longer breathed audibly, and the other believed him dead, he stole quietly out of bed, and thrusting his hand under the pillow, seized the pantaloons.—But he was mistaken; there was still breath and life in the miser, and the attempt to wrest from him his treasure seemed to give him new life and breath. He seized the pantaloons, and a horrible struggle took place between the dying man and the thief for the possession of the coveted money. But the miser's grasp was soon relaxed by death, and he fell back on his bed gurgling words in his throat that ought to have frozen the blood of the blackest pirate on earth.

More than one patient was aroused by this singular and horrid scene, and when the thief shall be sufficiently cured to leave the hospital he will be handed over to justice.

Miscellany.

A beautiful superstition prevails among the Seneca tribe of Indians. When an Indian maiden dies, they imprison a young bird until it first begins to try its powers of song, and then loading it with kisses and caresses, they lose its bonds over the grave, in the belief that it will not fold its wings nor close its eyes until it has flown to the spirit land and delivered its precious burden of affection to the loved and lost. It is not unfrequent to see twenty or thirty birds let loose over one grave.

BROTHERHOOD.—The race of mankind would perish did they cease to aid each other. From the time that the mother binds the child's head, till the moment that some kind assistant wipes the death damp from the brow of the dying, we cannot exist without mutual help. Am, therefore, that need aid have a right to ask it from their fellow mortals; no one who holds the power of granting can refuse it without guilt.—Sir W. Scott.

Miss Burdett Coutts (the wealthiest heiress in the world)has been chosen a " Fellow of the Zoological Society of London." She is, probably, the only lady to whom a respectful letter could be addressed, commencing " My dear Fellow.

A Lady who had on her upper lip something approaching a moustache, lately called on an officer and his wife, whose merry boy happened to be present at the time. In the course of conversation this little fellow inquired what he must do to get hair on his lip. "Why, rub it against papa's," was the reply. "Oh, 'mama,' said he, "is that the way Miss——has got hers?"

RULES FOR REGULATING DRESS.—Attention to a few general rules would prevent a great many anomalous appearances; for instance, "a woman should never be dressed too little, nor a girl too much—nor should a woman of small stature attempt huge puffings, nor a short throat carry feathers, nor high shoulders a shawl. From the largest to the lowest there is not a single style of beauty with which the plain straw hat is not upon the best understanding. It refines the homeliest, and composes the wildest. It gives the coquettish young lady a little dash of demureness, and the demure one a slight touch of coquetry— it makes the blooming beauty look more fresh, and the pale one more interesting—it makes the plain woman look, at all events, a lady, and the lady more lady-like still.

"Morning relief train," soliloquised Mrs. Partington, as she sat in one of the railroad cars, and gazed upon the ticket which she had a short time previously purchased at the depot. "Morning relief train," I s'pose that must be the train that starts every morning at 8 o'clock to pick up the poor creters on the track that have been masticated the night previous. Dear me, when will people learn to use circumcision and care!" and the old lady sighed in bitterness of spirit.

THE QUEEN IN EDINBURGH.—Her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the royal family (excepting the Prince of Wales, and the Princes Arthur and Leopold, who remain at Osborne) arrived at Edinburgh at 6 35 on Thursday evening, 28th August. The train anticipated its prescribed time by five minutes. The royal party were received at St. Margaret's station by the Duke of Buccleuch, Lord Melville, the Sheriff of the county, several officers of the staff engineers, &c. A salute from batteries of the Castle announced her Majesty's arrival. Having entered a procession of carriages, the illustrious travellers were conducted to Holyrood amidst the loyal cheering of a large assemblage. The weather had happily cleared just before the Queen's arrival, after a day of rain. An escort of the 5th Dragoon Guards accompanied the carriages, and the line was kept by a body of that regiment, as also by the 94th, and a battery of the royal Artillery. Nearly all the men wore Crimean medals. The royal party reached the palace a quarter before seven, where they were saluted by a guard of honor of the 94th. At the entrance they were received by the Lord Provost, Sir Benjamin Hall, M.P., Mr. Black, M.P., &c. The royal dinner party was held in the throne room, which has of late been fitted up and decorated in a superb manner. The party included, in addition to the members of her Majesty's suite, the Duke of Buccleuch, Lord Melville, and Sir Benjamin Hall.

A NEW DISEASE.—A friend observed a little boy at a door with what he considered a very dangerous plaything, viz, a chisel; and accordingly stepped in to inform the parent. "Madam," said he, "are you aware your child has got the chisel?" — "Why, the mercy on me!" exclaimed the mother.— "Well, I knew something was the matter, for the child has been ailing a long time."

The London Free Press gives the particulars of a daring robbery committed at Princeton on Monday night. Two men entered the station House, and while the night porter named Upton was taking his supper, requested him to drink out of a bottle, which he declined. They then asked him where the mails were, he told them it was none of their business. Upton was then knocked down, and whilst held in that position by one of them with a pistol presented at his head, the other rifled his pocket of a watch and the key of the safe. They then dragged him into the office, opened the safe, smashed a small cash box, took out $100 and cut open two of the mail bags, abstracting their contents. Upton attempted to resist when they beat him in so ferocious a manner that his life is despaired of. He did not recover until 6 o'clock in the morning. One of the robbers was a tall man with black whiskers, and dressed in black or dark clothes and wearing a brown felt hat, the other was a small man with fair hair, wearing a shining cap. They had a black leather travelling bag with them. They have not yet been arrested.

TRY OUR TOBACCO!—This invitation at tracted the other day a gentleman's attention as he was passing a tobacconist's shop. On looking up to ascertain who the firm might be, he could discover only one name. Now, thought he, I'll have a joke with this tobacconist; so, on entering the shop, he exclaimed, "Well, sir, and where is your partner pray? for I presume you have one, as you say, "try our tobacco!"—" Oh yes," replied the tobacconist, "I have a partner, and no mistake; my partner is my wife, and a very excellent one she is.—" That will do," said the gentleman, who marched off very well satisfied, not with his own joke, but with the answer he received.

The New York Herald says: We mentioned yesterday that a report prevailed in London that the Hon. C. P. Villiers had been appointed to succeed Mr. Crampton as British Minister at Washington. We now learn that there is no doubt of the fact of that gentleman's appointment in this country. Mr. Villiers is a member of parliament, was President of the Crimean Commission, and is a member of the Board of Trade. He has accepted the appointment, and was preparing to leave England with as little delay as possible.

The Montreal Transcript says: We learn that a public meeting has been called in Portland, to consider the expediency of taking measures to participate in the festivities about to take place, in celebration of the completion of the Grand Trunk Railway from Montreal to Toronto. Our merchants have set the ball a rolling, and must not therefore be idle. They have quite enough to do, however early in the field, to keep up with the efforts of their more vigorous friends across the lines.

QUEBEC FORTIFICATIONS.—There is hardly a point at which the fortifications are not being repaired or improved. A new and very strong blockhouse is making below the flag-staff, and very extensive works of by no means ancient construction, above that point, have been condemned, and are now rebuilding in a more formidable manner, near where a new battery and draw-bridge outlet from the citadel, have lately been constructed, communicating with the city over the north eastern glacis.—Mercury.

The Hamilton directors of the Great Western, if we may judge by their annual report, have abandoned all idea of interfering with the Southern line. They speak of the money raised to build a double track as consecrated to that purpose; and declare that they do not intend to take up any other line until the proprietary shall first have given their express consent. Of course, they were obliged to take this position, for the proprietary had expressly prescribed to them this line of conduct. There is therefore no merit in it.—Leader

COMMUTATION OF SENTENCE OF DEATH.—We are glad to hear that Colin Connell who has been confined in the jail of St. Thomas, for some months, under sentence of death recorded, will shortly be removed to the Provincial Penitentiary. Dr. Southwick, M. P. P., has received a letter from the Provincial Secretary, intimating that His Excellency the Governor-General has been graciously pleased to commute the sentence of the unfortunate prisoner to imprisonment in the Penitentiary with hard labour for seven years. Our readers will perhaps remember that Connell was found guilty of shooting with intent to kill a man named House. The prisoner at the time was laboring under the effects of insanity, and has not yet recovered his reason. The mitigation of his sentence was a very desirable exercise of the royal clemency.—Dispatch.

"Ike," said a rusty old heathen of the desk, "how do astronomers measure the distance to the sun?" "Why replied the young hopeful, "they guesses at one-fourth the distance, and then multiplies by four."

OUTRAGE ON THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY.—Last Friday afternoon, some scoundrels unified a four inch plank across the railway track, a little north of Cobourgh. The ballast train, consisting of four cars and a locomotive, was backed upon it. The result was that the carswere completely smashed to pieces, and the fireman and engineer badly injured. He is however, we are glad to find, out of danger. It is believed that the perpetrators of this dastardly outrage will be caught.—Leader

GREAT RAILWAY CELEBRATION.—We are pleased to see that steps are being taken to get up in Montreal a celebration worthy of the event of the Grand Trunk opening hence to Toronto. The occurrence cannot but be regarded as of the very highest importance to the city, and if the cause of this importance is investigated the fitness of such a mode of honoring it must be evident. We are all confident that in the position of our city, the construction of this railroad must largely increase our commerce and population. We must let other people then know the facts on which to depend. To do so we must invite them to come here; to see what the city is; and to spread abroad in all directions, and impress on men's minds, what the railway will do, now it is built.—Montreal Gazette.

ISLE BY ST JOSEPH.—The auction sale of the Island of St. Joseph came off in the Crown Land Office, on Tuesday. The bidding was marked by a very keen competition—many of the lots going as high as $5 or $6 an acre. The upset price was 2s 6d, an acre—the average figure obtained being about 12s. 6d. an acre. A good deal of the land, however went at 8s. 9s & 10s an acre. At these rates all the lots on the Island, with the exception of a few which were withdrawn, found eager purchasers. The number of acres thus disposed of, may be set down, in round numbers, at fifteen hundred; by far the largest portion of the purchasers being farmers.

We understand that a second portion of the Island of St Joseph will be offered for sale in about a month's time. The quantity will probably be 25,000 acres.—Leader.

FEARFUL SIGHT.—On Saturday evening about 9 o'clock, says the Boston Courrier the inhabitants of Lincoln street were startled by the shrieks of a woman which proceeded from a house near the corner of Essex street, and which were occasioned by the clothes of a young woman, a Miss Norton, taking fire in consequence of the explosion or breaking of a camphene lamp. The young lady in question was at the time—her bewildered mother after her—all three crying in the most piteous manner for help. The blaze formed a complete circle and ascended from her waist to her head.—Her immediate destruction seemed certain; but a man named Farley who happened to be passing, ran to her relief, and with an energy equal to the emergency, succeeded in tearing her clothes from her body The neighbors were terror stricken at the fearful sight and for the moment were lost in amazement. Miss Norton was not very seriously burned.

THE POTATO DISEASE IN IRELAND.—In consequence probably of the damp, we have to record a considerable extension of the disease, which has already appeared in the direction of Kinsale, Cloyne and localities surrounding the city. It appears to have been sufficient to excite considerable apprehension among farmers, as potatoes were yesterday pushed into the market in such large quantities that the price fell to 6d a weight. We doubt very much, however, if there is any serious ground for these apprehensions, as the weather has taken up dry, and all our experience of the present year shows that dry, warm weather checks the progress of disease. Besides, its spread has been partial; and confined to the places where the heavy rains fell.—Cork Examiner.

PROMOTIONS — We understand that among the Queen's Council, shortly to be Gazetted, are Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Beecher of London. This is as it should be. These appointments are simply professional, and should always be made without reference to politics and on the grounds only for profes ional seniority and status.—London Herald.

A man while harvesting kept his gun near him to shoot squirrels. Seeing a squirrel, he reached out and took the gun by the muzzle, and drew it towards him, when by some means unknown, the gun was discharged, and the contents passed near his head without injuring him. As soon as he had sufficiently recovered from the fright, he hastened to the house and informed his wife of his narrow escape, at which the good woman—who is noted for her economy— raised both hands, and exclaimed:—"What! did you lose the charge?"

Finn, the witty comedian, was carving a goose at supper, when John Everett called out to the carver at the other end of the table, "what sort of a fowl is that breast of yours, Finn?" "It is almost as great a goose," responded the wit, "as I Everett!"

A BACKSLIDER.—Married, on Thursday, the 23 ult, by Rev. Clay Boulder, Mr Andrew Horn to Miss Julia Parkes, President of the Young Ladies' Temperance Society.
Fair Julia lived a temp'rate maid,
Preached temperance night and morn;

SANDWICH, OCTOBER 2, 1856.

THE ELEVENTH PROVINCIAL FAIR AT KINGSTON.

As few in the County of Essex have attended the Provincial Exhibition at Kingston, which opened on Tuesday, the 23rd, we propose giving a short discription of it. No subject can be more interesting to the Canadian, than that of its advancement in Agriculture and Manufactures, and the Exhibition which has just closed, has tended greatly to mark the advancement which this Province has made in those, as well as in many other departments, and we must not except the Fine Arts, in which a most decided improvement can be observed, and the number of exhibitors this year were greater than on any former occasion.

The Fair grounds lie at some distance from the city, but the number of conveyances which were kept continually running from and to the City, no inconvience was felt.—The grounds are large and well laid off for the convenience of Exhibitors, there being upwards of twenty acres within the enclosure. The first thing that attracts the attention of the visitor on his entering the fair, is the magnificent structure which has been erected, and is called the Crystal Palace, upon a knoll in the centre of the ground, and reflects the greatest credit upon the zeal and taste of the Local Committee, through whose exertions it was constructed. It is in the form of a cross, the two transepts cutting each other in the centre, each transept measures nearly two hundred feet in length by fifty six in width. The columns are surmounted by the coats of arms of all nations, and the roof on the outside is ornamented in a very tasty and appropriate manner, with a number of banners belonging to different nations, and over them all, the flag that's braved a thousand years, might be seen spreading its ample folds to the breeze.

A portion of the roof is of wood, and filled in with glass, the sides are all of glass, and ornamented very tastefully. The glass used in the Crystal Palace was, we believe, furnished by Chance & Sons, who were the furnisher for the great London one. The building is intended to be permanent, and will be used hereafter as a hot or green house, while the ground within the enclosure will be used as an experimental garden, the County Society having obtained a lease of the lot for twenty years, and a considerable sum will be expended in making it complete. The place has already cost $12,000 and is not completed. When the structure and ground will have been finished they will be subjects of curiosity, which the Kingstonians may justly feel proud.

The interior is beautifully decorated, and from its height, which is fifty feet, has a fine appearance upon entering. In the centre of the Palace is a fountain of considerable size, sending forth a continual stream of water. The western wing was set aside for fine Arts; the Eastern for Manufactures; the Southern for the Horticultural Department, and the Northern for Plans, Models' Drawings, Maps, and a number of models of Agricultural implements purchased by Dr. Ryerson at Paris, complete sets of Electrical implements, and many philosophical apparatus, and a very handsome set of Maps, showing the different Countries of Europe, also a very large one of Sebastopol. The articles exhibited are all conveniently arranged against the wall and upon an elevation running through the centre, giving ample room for spectators, and from their position, show to great advantage.—Among the articles of note, we may mention among the cutlery a collection exhibited by the Messrs Date, of Galt, who furnished the set sent to the Paris Exhibition; they are very superior, and display skilful workmanship, and the collection is very large. Also a case of superior Cutlery, by Willim & Co. In the heavier articles of Hardware was a collection of useful articles by Jones & Co., Gaunaoque.

Some handsome Pianos from Montreal, possessing improvements which are said to make them more durable; one exhibited by Mr. Lloud has a hopper of peculiar construction, and by adjusting a screw, the wearing is compensated for, and he states that after eight or ten years' use, will be as good as when first used. Messrs. Scadold and Mackby of Montreal show an exceedingly handsome one upon a new principal, which is said to be an improvement. The Furniture exhibited is very superior and in great quantities. The carving upon some appeared to be excellent. The sideboard manufactured by McKeand, Thomson and Co., Toronto and purchased by Mr. Parry, to be forwarded to the Sydenham Palace for exhibition, is worthy of note, it is made of a beautiful piece of Black Walnut, the carving upon it would reflect credit upon any establishment. There are also with it a number of articles, such as tables, chairs, screens, &c., all of black walnut and of superior workmanship; these will make a creditable show in the Canadian Department at Sydenham. Two tables made of different kinds of Canadian wood, also attracted no little attention.

A great quantity of Cast iron furniture, of very useful and substantial construction, was exhibited; many of the articles were highly finished and appeared light, and no doubt, will be adopted by many from the cheapness at which they can be purchased. In the Horticultural Department, there are great varieties of articles shown which it would be impossible to enumerate, but as a whole was very creditable.

The show of stoves was also very large, every description of Cooking and Parlor Stoves were ranged side by side. A patent Baking oven, shown by Mr. Blodget of Brockville, attracted a good deal of attention. A large Cast Iron water wheel is conspicuous, as being a novelty.

Bricks and tiles, of various patterns occupy considerable space, draing tiles in particular attracted the attention of agriculturists; there were a great many, and appeared to be of excellent shape and quality.

Whitney's Elliptical Rotary Pump was a good deal praised as possessing qualities superior to any other in use.

Mr. Sheriff Ruttan, whose exertions upon the subject of ventilation deserve the greatest praise, for the many and useful improvements introduced by him, shows an improved ventilating stove which attracts considerable notice.

Upon leaving the Crystal Palace and entering the agricultural tent, a splendid display of the productions of the soil meets the eye. The show of wheat is excellent, there being 100 odd entries of this grain alone and of the finest qualities; one sample in particular of the blue stem variety was much admired, and weighs sixty-seven and three quarter pounds to the bushel." Potatoes were also exhibited in great quantities; 170 odd samples were shown. Garden vegetables occupied a prominent place, the entries were 220 including every variety.

The Grain and Seeds here collected, could not be surpassed, the entries in this Department numbered over 120.

The Produce of the dairy were not behindhand. Some fine samples of Cheese and Butter were shown; entries 195.

The poultry sheds were well filled. The large breeds of fowl, such as Cochin China and Shanghai, appear to occupy considerable space.

A goodly show of implements and machinery are scattered over the ground, and the number of useful labor saving machines adopted to farm use, shows that our farmers are not behind their neighbors, in the excellency and variety of farming implements.

The various breeds of cattle exhibited are worthy of a more minute notice than our space will permit. There were quite a number of pens of Sheep, the prevailing breeds are, Southdown and Leicesters which were particularly fine.

Durham Stock appeared to be the favorite, and there were more entries of this than any other. There were three or four very fine animals of this breed entries 90.

Devons and Ayershires next in order and though there were less of these breeds than the Durhams, still they were well bred, and showed great care and attention in their breeding.

The show of Pigs was excellent.

Upon the whole the exhibition was very creditable. We regret, however, that this County contributed nothing to the fair, and was not even represented by a delegate, another year for our our credit alone exertions should be made by the County Society to have it so, or carried in some way, and we are certain that many things could be sent from here, that would compare favourably with articles exhibited this year.

For the past week, canvassing has been carried on with unusual activity between Mr. Rankin and Col. Prince in the lower townships, and we may also add, with decided success to the latter candidate. Mr Rankin appointed a number of meetings at which he would address the electors. Mr. Albert Prince, on behalf of his Father, also attended and addressed them. The first was held at Girty's Corners, there were about one hundred persons present; Mr. Rankin addressed them in his usual style of abuse, of Col. Prince, which did not altogether agree with those present, as by various demonstrations, the fact was made clearly perceptible to that gentleman, who as soon as he had made his speech started off, knowing right well that he could not receive at the hands of Mr. A. Prince a severe handling, and did not wish most likely to witness upon a division, a large majority for Col. Prince, which afterwards turned out to be the case. At the division there appeared to be about 80 for Prince and 20 for Rankin—pretty good at a Rankin meeting.

We will next speak of the great meeting at KINGSVILLE, where Mr. Rankin thought himself certain of an overwhelming majority, but alas such is the uncertainty of political friends, that there also, was this gentleman doomed to be again disappointed, for after a two hours' speech, such was the impression made by it, that upon a resolution favourable to the election of Col. Prince, being put, five to one voted for it, leaving Mr. Rankin in the very munenviable position of being out voted, at a meeting called by himself but so few are his supporters in the lower Townships, that it would be impossible for him to collect a meeting of his own supporters of any size.

The next was the COLCHESTER meeting, where Messrs. Rankin and Prince were again face to face; on this occasion, Mr. Prince, in an eloquent and telling speech, proved to the meeting the unfitness of Mr. Rankin for the honours which he wishes to have bestowed upon him, at the hands of the electors; and so forcibly did he place the claims of the Colonel before those of Mr. Rankin, and Mr. Rankin being unable to bring anything but abuse to his aid, which is a subject so completely worn out by constant use, that he could not fail to be disgusted even his own supporters, at his mode of canvassing and as the consequences clearly proved, he los. what few supporters he had left.

Amherstburg, being the last yet not the least in importance, there, as at the other meetings, Rankin's supporters might have been mistaken, when he attempted to have the meeting after addressing them, without waiting to hear what his opponent had to say, for the small end of nothing when compared to the crowd of the Prince men who had again attended to swamp the other party, which was done most effectually, as Rankin left with his supporters, a couple of dozen perhaps; a pitiable sight indeed was it when compared to the large and respectable gathering of Prince's supporters, and what Rankin's feeling's must have been, subjected as he had been, to a defeat at every one of his Meetings, can be better imagined than expressed.

In last week's paper, we gave the retirement of Mr. Murney from the contest as a Candidate for the Legislative Council on account of his ineligibility to take his seat if elected, because of his being a member of the Assembly; this week we were put in possession of the fact that two others of precisely the same position have also retired; namely, Messrs. Sanbora and DeWitt, who, from their chances of success, would have kept the field had there been any possibility of their retaining their seats after election, but in the face of the having no opposition they would not deceive the Electors of their respective Divisions by inducing them to throw away their votes, when, they knew that they could not take their places in the Council, even with a majority of votes in their favor. The following is the report of their retirement.

A LEGAL DIFFICULTY.

"A legal objection, which appears to be conclusive, has been raised against the candidature of several gentlemen who had proceeded some way in their canvass for seats in the Legislative Council. The Act of last session declares that, "No member of one House shall be elected a member of the other." It was supposed by some members of the Legislative Assembly, who wished to become cand dates for election to the second branch, that this difficulty could be obviated by resignation. But, on reference to previous Acts, it was discovered that a member tendering his resignation shall be, and be held to be, and considered as being, to all intents and purposes, the representative for the place for which he was elected, until the return of the election of a member to serve in his room shall have been duly made." As it would have been impossible to "return" members in the place of the resigning men ber before the time for holding the Legislative Council elections, the gentlemen proposing to resign would clearly have continued to be "members," and within the express words of the Act. We see it stated in a Western paper, that Mr. Rankin has obtained an opinion from Mr. Vankougl et that, notwithstanding these positive prohibitions, he (Mr. Rankin) would still be eligible. We think it will require some special quibbling to reconcile such an opinion with the plain letter of the law.—Mr. DeWitt and Mr. Sanborn, in Lower Canada, have both retired on discovering this objection, although their success, if they had stood, was beyond a doubt."—Globe

If anything were wanting, to convince the electors of this Division, that Mr. Rankin is ineligible to a seat in the Council, the following, we think, should be sufficient, as it shows clearly that the Attorney-General takes a different view altogether of the Law to that taken by Mr. Rankin, and proves also that our statement in regard to the ineligibility of that gentleman for election to the Upper House was correct. Mr. Murney, finding that he could not take his seat until he had resigned and his successor had been elected, did, as Mr Rankin should have done.

"The arrangements made for the elections in Trent and North Hastings appear to be of the most extraordinary character. We have received copies of two proclamations. One, signed by Mr. Moodie, sheriff of Hastings, calls together the electors of North Hastings on the 8th October, to choose a member of Assembly, in place of Mr. Murney, resigned; the other is signed by Mr. Wm. H. Ponton, and calls on the electors of Trent to make a choice of Legislative Councillor on the 24th of October. Now, be it remarked that it is only a few days since Mr. Murney announced that he did not intend to resign his seat, and still fewer since he changed his mind and gave it up; yet the electors of Hastings are called upon to choose another person in his room on the 8th of Oct ber. Surely this is a short time to allow the electors of a large county to choose candidates in whom they can place confidence. The excuse for the brief notice is that, to qualify Mr. Murney to be chosen a member of the Legislative Council, it is necessary that his successor should be elected in the Assembly." —Globe.

MR. RANKIN'S INELIGIBILITY FOR ELECTION.

We have been amused with the contents of a printed slip which the above candidate's supporters have sent forth, entitled "Mr. Rankin's Eligibility proved by Statute."

The whole statement is a very, very lame expounding of the old Law; respecting the Legislative Council, because the grant of an honour (therein stated a "call,") by the executive, is wholly and entirely different to an election of the people. But this precious morceaux of law concludes thus; "The "people have a perfect and undoubted right "to call any one they please, whether in or "out of the Assembly, to represent them in "the Upper House." We should like to be further enlightened on this subject, seeing that the very Act, upon which this election is based, positively enacts that, no member of one house shall be elected a member of the other.

☞ Complaints have been made to us, that the Maple Leaf has not reached some of our Subscribers, during the last two or three weeks, in the Township of Colchester. We have to request that if there be any more of our subscribers, that have not received their papers they will notify us of the fact, (in other Townships as well as Colchester) as we wish to ascertain the cause, of their not receiving them, as the papers are regularly mailed and forwarded from the Sandwich Post Office. We intend to bring the matter before the Department, to be thoroughly investigated, and knowing as we do that the fault does not lie with us, we are determined to find out if there is any possibility, the reason of this mysterious disappearance

RANKIN'S ELIGIBILITY.

This question is governed by the Statutes 7 Vic., chap. 65, and 19 and 20 Vic., chap. 140.

The former Act provides that no person shall cease to be a member of the Assembly until his successor is appointed.

The latter Act declares that no member of the Assembly shall be elected a member of the Council.

But a man is always a member of the Assembly until his successor is appointed. Therefore until Rankin's successor is appointed, he is a member of the Assembly and cannot be elected to the Council.

This is logic, as well as law and common sense. The handbill produced by Rankin's supporters is (equally common) nonsense, for it assumes that Rankin's seat in the Assembly would be vacated by his election, forgetting that the last Act declares that he shall not be elected. If Rankin honestly expected a seat in the Council, he would use the only means of obtaining such, i. e., he would try to obtain some office which would vacate his seat in the Assembly. As it is, he evidently desires, for the gratification of his malice, to split up Col. Prince's support so as to get Mr. Dougall elected.

QUALIFICATION FOR VOTERS.

The only persons entitled to vote in Essex and Kent at the Legislative Council Election, are as follows, under 18 Vic, chap 16, section 2:

1. Owners of real property worth £50, or worth yearly £5, who have their deeds six months before voting.

2. Lessees of real property of some value, whose leases [verbal or written] were originally for at least a year, and who have held their leases for six months before voting.

3. Occupants of real property of some value, who occupy, with the consent of the Crown or of the owner, and who have occupied for six months before voting, and with the intent that they shall become the owners, that is, under some agreement to purchase or acquire the prope.ty.

Several persons may vote on one property, if their shares be sufficient, except members of a corporate body, who cannot—sec. 3.

Purchasers of Crown lands, any of whose payments are overdue and unpaid, cannot vote.—section 5.

Voters must be 21 years old, and British subjects, either by birth or naturalized.

The following persons may be naturalized on taking the oath of allegiance, which (by 12 Vic., chap. 27, section 43,] may be taken before the returning officer.

1. Aliens resident in the Province before 10th February, 1841, and their children.—12 Vic., chap. 197, section 2.

2. Aliens who have been for five years resident in the Province.—12 Vic., chap. 197, section 4; amended by 18 Vic, chap. 6.

Of course, all qualifications must be bonâ fide, and not obtained for the purpose of voting alone.

On Wednesday next, the County Fair will be held at Mr. Leonard Wigle's Tavern, in the Township of Mersea. We trust that the attendance will be large, and that the people will not be backward in taking articles for exhibition, but will come forward and make it an attractive show.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.—The General Annual Meeting will be held at Secretary Treasurer's Office, at half past three o'clock, P. M on Monday, 6th of October next, for the purpose of Electing Directors, and for other business.

News from Australia.

By way of England, advices have been received from Sydney to the 24th of May, being three days later than those by the Royal Charter. In the interval the great event had taken place of the opening of the Colonial Parliament, under the new constitution, establishing the system of responsible government. The ceremony passed off favorably, and suitable replies to the address of the Governor General were voted unanimously in the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. The Ministerial programme being generally approved. In the Assembly Mr. Daniel Cooper had been chosen Speaker by a vote of 24 against 23 for his opponent, Mr. Parker. Mr. Cooper is a wealthy native of the colony, and will be remembered as having headed the New South Wales subscription for the Patriotic Fund with a donation of one thousand pounds. Some sensation had been created by an arrival from New York with the news of the intended dismissal of Mr. Crampton. There was no alteration of importance in any of the markets, but the tendency was still towards improvement; and there was also much firmness in the prices of Colonial securities. The rate of exchange for bank drafts was still 10d. The navigation of the River Murray had been regularly organized and a service of boats called Cadell's steam line, was advertised to run monthly from Goolwa, near Adelaide in South Australia, to Albury, in New South Wales—the charge for freight being £10 per ton, and for passengers £15 15s and £6 10s each, according to class. The latest papers from Tasmania, (Van Dieman's Land) contain revived accounts of the gold fields at Fingal, and state that numerous parties were flocking thither. Gold is also alleged to have been discovered in Western Australia, about fifteen miles from Fremantle, but apparently not in quantities to deserve much attention.

The number of vessels arrived in Quebec from sea to this date is 762. Last year up to the same period 468 only had entered the port. The increase is therefore 294 vessels, and 155,646 tons. We learn that from 175 to 200 vessels are expected to arrive before the close of the navigation.

Steamer Niagara Burned.

ONE HUNDRED LIVES LOST.

The community was painfully startled at an early hour yesterday morning by the distressing intelligence of the burning of the Collingwood steamer Niagara Wednesday afternoon about four o'clock, between Ozaukee and Sheboygan, on the west shore o Lake Michigan. The first announcement was received by telegraph from Milwaukee, and soon after the steamer Traveler came in bringing a number of the rescued of the crew and passengers.

The steamer Traveller was about ten miles distant when the fire broke out on the Niagara.—The Captain ordered all possible steam was made to reach the scene of disster. Every one accords to the Captain and Officers of tho Traveller credit for making every possible exertion to save life.—We are indebted to C. C. Wheeler, Esq., Clerk of the Traveller for the following list of those saved and brought in by that boat.

The Niagara was coming to this port, and had on board, to the best of our information, about two hundred persons, about eighty of whom were cabin passengers, forty officers and crew, and the remainder steerage passengers. From this list we can gather in regard to the number lost, it is probable that it cannot be less than one hundred. The water was very cold and a cold wind blowing, so that many sank from numbness, who would otherwise have been able to cling to floats until assistance came.

PASSENGERS.—Harvey Ainsworth, Ingatta, Vt; J. B. Curtis, Steuben Co, N. Y.; H. Lock, Washington 'Co, Vt; Wm. Hosg, Buffalo, N. Y.; John Hull, Collingwood, C. W.; H. Chalmers and Lady, Gloucester, N. B.; Sales Lock, Waterford, Vt; Lovell Hunt, N. Y.; P. Kennedy, Minnesota Territory; Hugh Kennedy, St, Lawrence Co., N. Y.; Miss Julia Kennedy, do; C. D. Westbrook, Green Bay, Wis.; Dr. J. H. Allen, Concord, N. H.; James Robinson, Knox. County, Ill.

CREW.—Capt. F. S. Miller, "Master;" W. J. Thoubou, waiter; N. McKennan. 3rd engineer; Daniel Osborn, waiter; A. Snider, fireman; Carney, fireman; John Gordan, do; Amos dell, do; Robt. Gillespie, do. The mate was saved, but we did not learn his name.

The propeller Illinois picked up about thirty passengers and landed them at port Washington.

Several sail vessels came promptly to the assistance of the Niagara, and did good service in saving life. The life boat from Port Washington was promptly on hand and rendered timely aid.

When first discovered by the Officers of the Traveller, she was completely enveloped in a cloud of smoke. The fire appeared to burst out forward of the wheel on the starboard side, but the 1st Engineer was not on board. From all the facts that could be learned most of the crew were saved.

Attempts were made to use the hose, but it was found to be useless Several of the passengers after recovering their presence of mind somewhat, began to break down the doors and other wooden work and to throw it overboard. The two boats upon the hurricane deck, were immediately capsized, and were rendered useless.

The stern and quarter boats were lowered and all capsized but one, into which about 20 passengers got in and were saved. Large numbers of passengers, paralyzed with fear at the first announcement of the fire, jumped overboard and were drowned instantly. Mothers threw their children overboard and wildly jumped themselves. Every one seemed perfectly insane with fear, and threw themselves overboard without the slightest attempts to save themselves.

In regard to the origin of the fire, nothing definite is known, but all of the crew that we have seen agree in the statement that the flames first came from the furnaces or engine room. From that it would seem that the fire proceeded from something combustible among the freight or was set in that hold by design, SAVED PASSENGERS ON THE NIAGARA.—Chicago Sept. 26.—Additional passengers of the Niagara saved: Geo. W. Biles, W. H. Hamilton, Oxford, N. Y.; E. S. Ensign, C. D. Adams, Chenango county, N. Y.; Jno. C. Thomas, Cato, N. Y. Frederick Driscoll, Fulton N. Y.; Daniel Lee, Waukesha, Wis., F. R. Hurlbut, Macinac; C. H. Peters, Chicago; H. Bailey, Buffalo; Francis Willard, brother, and two sons, Plattsburgh, N. Y.

Arrival of the Baltic.

New York Sept. 29.

The Baltic arrived at her dock at 8 o'clock.—Liverpool dates to the 17th.

The Africa arrived out on the morning of 11th. European news dull.

The only subject that affords interest is the state of affairs in Naples and the United States.

The chartists were being revived in England.

Favourable weather for harvest operationsextended throughout the kingdom,

Nothing of interest from France or Spain.

—Gen. Brown, the son of as the new Spanish minister at Washington.

Switzerland and Prussia are settleing the Neufchatel affair.

Rain ons of further notes from Naples are rife but are not credited,

Baring Brothers, Rumore & Co., of Canton, is confirmed. Liabilities upwards of three hundred thousand dollars.

The London morning Star warns the Southern States of the United States not to dream of annexation to England. The Paris correspondent of the London Times says there is no doubt but that a congress will be held at Paris the coming winter to settle the question arising out of the treaty of Paris. The Emperor was to leave Biaritz the 28th for St. Cloud. The official account of the affair in Algeria with the Kabyles, shows it to have been very severe; six hundred Kabyles being opposed by only one regiment. After severe fighting the Kabyles retreated, but returned next day, when they were again defeated. An expedition against them is resolved on.

Advice from China stats that Dr. Parker, U. S. commissioner, was at Foochow, but had been unable to get an interview with the Viceroy.

The Steamer Jacinto broke down on her way to Sinoda, and put back to Whambon.

Howard Cunningham an American merchant, was killed at Foochow while endeavouring to quell a street row.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 16.—BREADSTUFFS—Weather continues favourable and the bulk of the grain crops in England is now gathered. In the north of Ireland and Scotland much yet remain out.—At to-day's market a lively demand. was experienced. Good Wheat at an advance of 1d to 2d for 70 lbs on last Friday's prices; new wheat at 10s 3d to 10s 5d, old 9s 3d a 10s; new red 9s 4d a 9s 8d; old 8s a 9s 2d for 70lbs.

BEEF.—Rather more inquiry, but as yet little business has resulted. Pork flat rather lower.

The public sales of the English and French Governments having had rather a depressing effect. Bacon —good demand. Holders demanding an advance, which in some instances have been succeeded.

TORONTO Sept. 30, 1856.

WHEAT.—There was a great deal of business done on the street to-day, the supply reaching over 7,000 bushels, being unusually large for Monday. The price paid was slightly better than on saturday, there being an apparent disposition to secure as much wheat as possible. The highest figure paid was, we believe, 7s 2d, and the price ranged from that down to 6s 9d a 6s 11½d for prime samples, and for inferior 6s 8d a 6s 10 was paid. The ruling figure was 7s 1½d, and the average price for the day may be set down at 7s. Farmers accepted these rates freely, and moved off the market with very little hesitation.

FLOUR.—There is more doing in flour at slightly lower prices. We note a sale of 500 brls Fancy at $6 30 f. o. b. Superfine may be quoted at $6 a $6 12½, and extra at $6 50 a $6 75 per barrel, BARLEY was not so freely brought in, and as 6d per bushel was realized without difficulty.

OATS are plenty in store, and sell slowly at 2s 6d per bushel wholesale, and 2s. 9d retail.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - -
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE, which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently much enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT, embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING, strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the perpetual obliteration between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it effecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus rendering the whole useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions which it has long borne, enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE, embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine, and actual business, thus developing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTEND COURSE, embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time specified by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student can be fully faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System, invented by the Principal of Folsom, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many instructions are given by the best writers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Bookkeeping, Mercantile Law, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, History, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surrounded with every convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance by our Secretary is secure good situations for many of his graduates.

TO THE

INDEPENDENT ELECTORS

OF THE

Counties of Essex and Kent.

GENTLEMEN,

THE time has now arrived when it becomes me to address you briefly upon the great change made in the Constitution of this Canada by our Sovereign's gracious permission for us to Elect our Legislative Councillors, whereby she has been pleased to invest her Subjects Prerogative to create them as heretofore. For that boon we should be grateful; and I doubt not that, if properly treated and carried out, it will add to the well-being of every subject. But as complified in those Elective Institutions which have so much contributed to our internal advancement and prosperity. It, however, behooves her Subjects carefully and to create calmly upon what the qualifications of a Legislative Councillor ought to be, and what the duties of that Council are. It is or ought to be an honorable one in every sense of the word. It should consist of men not famed for being Party men, of violent political feelings, or prone to aid in factious opposition to the Government of the day; but men who are well known to the community as men of character and experience in the world, men who can be relied on as much for their honour and independence as for their talents in the Senate as for their ability, and of men too who, by their experience in Legislation, can bring their learning to bear upon those Enactments which should ever be the study of the popular branch of the Legislature for their deep and solemn consideration. To such men you may safely entrust your interests and, in my opinion, at least, it would be dangerous to confide in any others. Moreover, the duties of the Council are most important. They are a check upon the vague, hasty, imperfect, and crude mass of legislation which sometimes emanates from the Lower House; and their deliberations should be conducted with that dignity and cool reflection which in a popular assembly it is next to impossible to maintain. I do not address you as a stranger or as a new man soliciting your suffrages for the distinguished honour to which, by your favour, I aspire. But I address you as an old friend and neighbour who has lived amongst you continuously for nearly twenty-four years, through good report and evil report, and who was your chosen representative in Parliament for more than eighteen years! And you have, by your requisitions, told me that I and I alone am your choice to represent you in the new Council, that is to be. You know my abilities, humble though they are; you know my experience in Parliament, and you know my character; and upon that knowledge you have been pleased to base your proposition that I become your Representative in that Council. I do not profess to be a Politician—a bigotted Partizan with any set of men—but I do profess to have and ever will maintain the principles of an honest and independent public character, wherever I am placed; and I will yield to no man in liberality of sentiment or action; and I point to my conduct for the last ten or fifteen years as a Member of the Legislature as evidence of the truth of these assertions. In fine, I shall e or consider it my duty to contend for the freedom and rights of all the inhabitants of this noble country, whatsoever may be their nation, creed, or colour. These are my Principles. To my antecedents you are no strangers; and it is most gratifying to receive your assurance that he who has been your friend and neighbour for so long a time, and your representative in Parliament for a longer period than any other man in Canada (save one) ever represented the same constituency, still enjoys your favour and your confidence, and that, "with all his imperfections on his head," you will confer upon him the greatest honour you can bestow—a seat in the first Elective Legislative Council of this Province.

That I shall, through your favour, be triumphantly placed in that high and honourable position I do not for a moment doubt. My visits through the Counties have entirely satisfied my friends as well as myself on that important point; and I pledge myself to serve you honestly, faithfully, independently, and diligently, and according to the best of my abilities and powers. And you shall find in me a strenuous advocate for an enlarged representation based on population at the proper time—for the promotion of Education upon the most extensive and liberal plan—and for the support and progress of all measures (I care little for men), which I may conceive will tend to the happiness and good government of Canada and the prosperity of the noble and enterprising races who inhabit it.

I remain, Gentlemen, as ever,
Your faithful Friend,
JOHN PRINCE.

The Park Farm, 27th August, 185 .

TO THE ELECTORS
OF
The Western Division.

GENTLEMEN:

THE Legislative Council of Canada was originally intended to be an imitation of the British House of Peers, but from various reasons, unnecessary here to mention, the mere nomination of its members by the Crown has failed to secure for it the respect and weight which a branch of the Legislature ought to possess.

It has therefore been deemed expedient to render it elective, so as to secure for it a portion of the popular favor, hitherto accorded to the Legislative Assembly.

This change, when fully carried out, will invest the Council with an importance in some degree similar to that which attaches to the Senate of the neighboring Union, a seat in which is a position of greater importance than the Governorship of a State.

The Elective Council of Canada will however have this superiority over that of the Senate of the United States, that its members, instead of being appointed by local Legislative bodies, often by corrupt combinations and intrigues, will be elected directly to them; they will also represent nearly equal constituencies, instead of the gross inequality in this respect, which is found in the American Senate. Senators from N. York represent a population ten times as great as the same number of Senators from Delaware or California.

When it is considered that a Counciller will represent twice the number of Constituents of a Member of the Assembly, and for twice the length of time, it must be obvious that the selection of a proper person to fill so high an office is of the utmost importance to your interests, and to those of the country at large.

The weak point of all representative institutions is the disposition of the Executive to gain majorities by bribing the representatives of the people, and the facility with which the latter have too often sold themselves for considerations of private advantage.

It is by appeals to private interests, by places and jobs, that party hacks are manufactured, and I can conceive no greater political calamity for a Country than to have a majority of its representatives composed of such venal and selfish politicians. It is under this evil that Canada has long groaned, and is now groaning, and against which every possible precaution should be taken by Constituencies, when called upon to exercise their invaluable privilege of electing representatives to Parliament.

To secure an object so desirable every thing depends on the personal character of the men chosen, and the two leading elements to be sought for in a Candidate are integrity and ability; without the first an able man may exert his abilities against you, and for his own selfish ends, and without the latter, an honest man may become the mere tool of a Ministry, hoodwinked by their plausible sophistries.

Having lived amongst you for twenty-seven years, you can judge from my antecedents, better than I can, whether or not I possess these essential requisites for your representatives; at all events, any mere profession without the guarantee of previous character, should go for nothing.

My political convictions are entirely in favor of liberal measures, and should I be elected, I will give my most strenuous aid in carrying out the measures of so much importance to the prosperity of the country, such as

Representation by Population, so as to give Upper Canada its proper position in the Legislature.

Common School Education free from Sectarian influence, and the repeal of such acts as grant support to Sectarian Schools now existing.

Opposition to all grants of public monies for Sectarian purposes, and also to all acts giving religious corporations power to hold real estate for the purpose of revenue, irrespective of creed or denomination, and the Retaining the seat of Government in Upper Canada.

If my views on these subjects meet with your approbation, and I should be honored with your confidence and support, I will endeavor, if elected, to serve you faithfully, to the best of my ability, with honesty of purpose, and a single eye to the good of this great Province, and to the special interests of the Division with which I am connected.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient
and Faithful Servant,
JAS. DOUGALL.

AGRICULTURAL ODE.

BY WM. C. BRYANT.

Far back in ages
The plow with wreaths was crowned,
The hand of kings and sages
Entwined the chaplet round,
Till men grew proud
Disdained the toil
By which the world was nourished,
And blood and pillage were the soil
In which their laurels flourished;
Now the world her fault despairs—
The guilt that stains her story,
And weeps her crimes amid the cares
That formed her earliest glory.

The throne shall crumble,
The diadem shall wane,
The tribes of earth shall humble
The pride of those who reign,
And war shall lay
His pomp away;
The fame that heroes cherish,
The glory earned in deadly fray
Shall fade, decay and perish.
Honor and toil o'er all the earth,
Through endless generations—
The art that calls the harvest forth,
And feeds the expectant nations.

USE OF CLOVER TO FRENCH LAND.—I have sowed clover seed some 15 or 20 years and find it a very cheap mode of enriching land. Some land on my farm that would not produce over 25 or 30 bushels of corn per acre, when I bought it, will now produce 75 to 80 bushels per acre—and with a good coat of manure I have no doubt it could be made to produce in a good season, over 100 bushels per acre.

BUCKSKINS AND GLOVES.—A good recipe for cleaning leather and buckskin gloves. Take half a pound of prepared chalk, half a pound of prepared alum, three cakes of castile clay, half an ounce of fuller's earth, one ounce of pumicestone powdered, one table-spoonful of starch, six tablespoonfuls of sweet oil, two ounces of white soap. To be mixed in boiling water; the oxalic acid and prepared alum to be added last.

TO FATTEN FOWLS.—Fowls may be fattended in four or five days by the following process:—Set some rice over the fire with skimmed milk, as much only as will serve one day. Let it boil till the rice is swelled out; add a teaspoonful of sugar. Feed the fowls four or five times a day, and do not give them as much each time as will fill them. Great care must be taken that they have nothing sour given them, as that prevents their fattening. Give them clean water or milk from rice to drink. By this method the flesh will have a clear whiteness

CATHARTIC PILLS

OFFERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and, by restoring their irregular action to the healthy standard, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors, Physicians, and Patients, has shown cures of dangerous diseases almost beyond belief, were they not substantiated by persons of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Their excellence as a purgative, for which they are the Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give directions for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

FOR COSTIVENESS.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as to gently move the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of FEVERS and the cure of the complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while under a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, which is sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take mild doses—from one to four—to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and the heartburn, bodyaiorn, and sunborn of dyspepsia will rapidly disappear. When it has gone, don't forget what cured you.

FOR A FOUL STOMACH, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength is restored to the system.

FOR NERVOUSNESS, SICK HEADACHE, NAUSEA, Pain in the Stomach, Back, or Side, take from four to eight pills on going to bed. If they do not operate sufficiently, take more the next day until they do. These complaints will be swept out from the system. Don't wear these and their kindred disorders because your stomach is foul.

FOR SCROFULA, ERYSIPELAS, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the bowels open. The eruptions will generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many dreadful ulcers and sores have been healed up by the purging and purifying effect of these Pills, and sores of long standing diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have completely yielded to their influence, and the sufferer has suffered in perfect health. Patients! your duty to society forbids that you should parade yourself around the world covered with ulcers, blotches, blisters, sores, and all or any of the unclean diseases of the skin, because your system needs cleansing.

TO PURIFY THE BLOOD, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which are the seeds of incurable diseases will be swept out of the system like chaff before the wind. By this purging they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections arising from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the Liver. Torpidity and congestion vitiate the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is dangerous to the health, and the constitution is frequently undermined by this disregard of nature's kindest monitions. Obstruction of the duct which empties the bile into the stomach causes bile to overflow into the blood. This produces Jaundice, with a long and dangerous train of evils. Costiveness, or alternately costiveness and diarrhœa, pains of Feverish symptoms, languor, low spirits, weariness, restlessness, and melancholy, with sometimes inability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness; sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the whites of the eyes become a greenish yellow; the stomach acid; the bowels sore to the touch; the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious diarrhœa, dysentery, &c. A medium dose of three or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is wicked to suffer such pains when you can cure them for 25 cents.

HUMORAL DISEASES, and all inflammatory Fevers quickly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, for the sake of the bowels' gentle, but freely.

AS A DINNER PILL, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be made more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

TILES, TILES,

THE Public are respectfully informed that M. & J. H. WHITEHOUSE are Manufacturing and have on hand a large quantity of Tiles, for Draining Cellars, Farms, &c., at their Brick Yard, in Westminster, two miles from London, and a quarter of a mile from Mr. J. Nellis's Tavern, at First Toll Gate on the Hamilton Road, which they will sell at the Low Price of £4 per 1000 with Soles or Bottoms, without £2 15s. They will be found to be much cheaper than any other Material for Draining, as they facilitate greatly in the labor of the farmer in the course of Draining, only requiring a Drain the width of the Spade and when put down will never require removing. Samples may be seen and orders received at the Store of Mr. J. Fitzell, corner of Richmond and Dundas Streets, London.

Also Roofing Tiles and Press Bricks for fronting Buildings of a superior quality.

No. 1, CHEAP HOUSE.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded, together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: A. J. P. KNIGHT, JAMES SCOWDEN and D. W. RAY.

TERMS: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the ILLUSTRATED HORTICULTURIST for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned has made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS
Of known ability have also been engaged. Hints and Notes for the Month, Leaves, ponderous on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

Autumn Fancies.

BY SENNIE ELDER.

The summer gladness steals away,
And Autumn lifts his sombre head—
Like stern old warrior o'er his prey—
The gentle flowers all pale or dead.

The yellow sunlight flings the mist
From hill-top to the silent vale;
His presence hath a glory trist.
And all his smiles are cold and pale.

But what to me are all these signs
Of Nature's weakness or decay?
My soul but sees the spirit lines
Which lead me, sweetly, far away.

O, ye winged messengers of love!
Bear swiftly on the hoary hours,
Which leave my spirit, as they move,
A pathway strewn with sweetest flowers.

With shadowy days and silent nights
A haleyon time for me hath come,
To taste again the pure delights
Which circle round the sphere of home.

Then, watching for my form away,
Are dark bright eyes and loving smiles,
Genial as the latest summer day,
Yet tinged with gentle light the while.

Flee, swiftly then, ye leaden hours,
And bid the glorious moment come,
When all my life is strewn with flowers,
And Heaven dawns o'er the light of home!

Dreaming on Wedding Cake.

A bachelor editor out West, who had received from the fair hand of a bride a piece of elegant wedding cake, to dream on, thus gives the result of his experience:

We put it under the head of our pillow, shut our eyes sweetly as an infant blessed with an easy conscience, soon snored prodigiously. The good dreams gently touched us, and lo! in fancy we were married! Never was a little editor so happy. It was my "love," "dearest," sweetest, ringing in our ears every moment. Oh! that the dream had broken off here. But no, some evil genius put it into the head of our ducky to have pudding for dinner, just to please her lord.

In a hungry dream we sat down to dinner. Well, the pudding moment arrived, and a huge slice almost obscured from sight the plate before us.

"My dear," said we fondly, "did you make this?"

"Yes, love, ain't it nice?"

"Glorious—the best bread pudding I ever tasted in my life."

"Plum pudding, ducky," suggested my wife.

"No, no, dearest, bread pudding. I always was fond of 'em."

"Call that bread pudding?" exclaimed my wife, while her lips slightly curled with contempt.

"Certainly, my dear—reckon I've had enough at the Sherwood House to know bread pudding, my love, by all means."

"Husband—this is really to bad—plum pudding is twice as hard to make as bread pudding, and is more expensive, and is a great deal better. I say this is plum pudding, sir," and my pretty wife's brow flushed with determinment.

"My love, my sweet, my dear love," exclaimed we, soothingly, "do not get angry, I'm sure it's very good, if it is bread pudding."

"You mean, low wretch," fiercely replied my wife in a higher tone, "you know it's plum pudding, sir!"

"Then, ma'am, it is so meanly put together, and so badly burned, that the devil himself wouldn't know it. I tell you, madam, most distinctly and emphatically, and I will not be contradicted, that it is bread pudding, and the meanest kind at that."

"It is plum pudding," shrieked my wife as she buried a glass of claret in my face, the glass itself tapping the claret from my nose."

"Bread pud!" gasped we, pluck to the last, and grasping a roasted chicken by the left leg.

"Plum pudding!" rose above the din, as I had a distant perception of feeling two plates sun h across my head.

"Bread pudding!" we groaned in a rage as the chicken left our hand, and, flying with swift wing across the table, landed in mamma's bosom.

"Plum pudding!" resounded the war cry from the enemy, as the gravy dish took us where we had been depositing the first part of our dinner, and a plate of beats landed upon our white vest.

"Bread pudding forever," shouted we, in defiance, flinging the soup tureen, and falling beneath its contents.

"Plum pudding!" yelled the amiable spouse, as noticing our misfortune, she determined to keep us down by piling upon our head the dishes with no gentle hand. Then in rapid succession followed the war-cries of "Plum pudding!" she shrieked, with every dish.

"Bread pudding!" in smothered tones, came up from the pile in reply. Then it was "plum pudding, in rapid succession, the last cry growing feeble, till just as I can distinctly recollect, it had grown to a whisper. "Plum pudding!" resounded like thunder, followed by a tremendous crash, as my wife leaped upon the pile with her delicate feet, and commenced jumping up and down—when, thank Heaven, we awoke, and thus saved our life. We shall never dream on wedding cake again, that's the moral.

Anecdote of Mr. Layard.

From the Reminiscence of Eastern Travel in a English magazine, we obtain the following anecdote of Mr. Layard, whose explorations among the ruins of Nineveh have gained him a world wide reputation.

Austin Henry Layard now member of Parliament for Aylesbury, found himself wandering about, on one occasion, somewhere near Bokhara, in the upper provinces of India, and here his funds ran short. He called on a merchant, and requested him to advance him some money.

"Can't do it," was the reply, "as many fellows have imposed on me with fictitious drafts; I've been too often taken in and done for."

"O, well," said Mr. Layard, "as you please; I have money at my banker's in London, and I will come and breakfast with you to-morrow."

"Do so; I shall be happy to see you at breakfast."

Next morn who should walk into this merchant's room but a Persian gentleman in full Oriental costume, who said

"I have come to breakfast with you, as I promised."

"What?" said the merchant, "I don't recollect seeing you before."

"O, yes you have; you saw me yesterday, and I said I should return this morning."

"You're Mr. Layard, are you?" he inquired, considerably astonished.

"Yes."

After breakfast, and when the traveler had told him his plans, and aroused the interest of his host in his discoveries he expected to make among the mounds around Mosul, in the plain of Shinar, where the ruins of ancient Nineveh are supposed to be, the merchant said,

"I'll advance you money—five hundred pounds if you like; how much do you want?

"O, I don't want so much as that; give me five pounds."

"Five pounds?"

"Yes."

So he got the five soverings, put them into the sole of his shoe, as the safest place while travelling, and having mounted his horse, he rode away.

On his journey down to Assyria, he had to pass through the territories of the hostile Khan, who had already taken the lives of several Englishmen, and was now trying to get hold of our traveller, whom he knew to be coming through his dominions. Mr. Layard knew this, and one day when drawing near his enemies, he waited till the hour of tiffin, when they were all in their tents at the forenoon meal, when, putting spurs to his horse, he dashed into the midst of the hostile encampment, rushed into the chief's tent, and plunged his hand into a bowl of salt which he immediately put to his mouth, exclaiming,

"Now I am safe."

"Well," said the chief, "you are safe."

He admired the boldness and dexterity of the Englishman, but above all, the faith thus reposed in "The Covenant by Salt." Having tasted the chief's salt, he had now a claim, not only on his hospitality but on his protection, and he was safely escorted on his way to the scene of his future discoveries.

EDUCATION'S RIZ.—A precocious youth in a country town in Massachusetts, had arrived to the age of nine years when his father sent him to school. He stood beside his teacher to repeat the letters of the alphabet.

"What's that?" asked the master.

"Harrow!" vociferated the urchin.

"No; that's A."

"Ah."

"Well, what's the next?"

"Ox-yoke!"

"No; it's B."

"Taint B, neither! it's an ox-yoke crotch all hemlock! gosh ninety! think I don't know!"

"Ma; here's a word in the paper I want to know. What is a homicide!"

"A homicide, child is one that murders another."

"Well, ma, when Jack Nebb killed our old Tom cat, that was a Tommyside, wasn't it?"

"Pshaw, child, go away and don't bother me."

Young ladies who are accustomed to read newspapers are always observed to possess winning ways, most amiable dispositions, invariably make good wives, and always select good husbands—a fact.

The best pairs of human qualities are the tenderness and delicacy of feeling in little matters, the desire to soothe and please others, the minute of the social virtues. Some ridicule these feminine attributes, which are left out of many men's natures; but I have known the brave, the intellectual, the eloquent, possess these gentle qualities; the braggart, the weak, never! Benevolence and feeling enable the most trifling actions

Other feelings grow cold—other memories pass away; but the gentle image of the mother, who has watched our childhood, her love, her tenderness, her unwearied devotion, will forever be mirrored on the human heart.

One of the finest year-old sheep that we have seen for some time was exhibited at the stall of Messrs. J. & T. Trebilcock, in St. Lawrence Arcade, on the 20th inst. Upon inquiry, we were informed that it was raised on the farm of Mr. Uriah Young, ninth concession Markham, and weighed 36 lbs. to the quarter. The unusually fine condition of this sheep may be judged of from the fact, that it had no less than five inches of solid fat on the ribs.—Globe.

DILL CAUGHT.—By special telegraphic report from Kingston, we learn that the convict Dr. Dill, escaped from the Kingston Penitentiary, has been recaptured at Prescott and was brought back to Kingston on the steamer Banshee last evening.

Inagua, one of the Bahama Islands, was visited by a violent and destructive hurricane on Monday, the 26th August. Upwards of a hundred houses were entirely or partially prostrated. The schooners James Power, and Elvira of Nassau, and an American brig laden with sugar, were totally lost. Four persons were drowned off the James Power, two lives were lost on the Island.

A NATIONAL CURIOSITY.—The proprietors of the St. Charles Hotel, who are at present busily engaged in improving and clearing up for the opening season, inform us that on emptying the cisterns which they keep at the top of their premises to be provided against the occurrence of fire, in addition to the sediment and refuse to be expected in them, found a quantity of fish of various kinds, from minnows to gar fish!—Here is a nut for the curious about sulphur showers, frog pourings, and blood rains, to crack. How were the animals got up there? "We pause for a reply."—N. O. Pic.

"Tommy my son, what are you going to do with that club?"

"send it to the editor of course."

"But what are you going to send it to the editor for?"

"Cause he says, if any body will send him a club, he will send them a copy of his paper."

The mother was near fainting but retained consciousness to ask:

"But Tommy, dear, what do you suppose he wants with a club?"

"Well, I don't know," replied the hopeful archin, "unless it is to knock down subscribers as don't pay for their paper."

DENTISTRY GAME.—The St. Louis Herald says: "Some of our pigeon-droppers have recently resorted to a new game to ascertain if a pigeon is worth plucking." They go from boat to boat on the Levee, meet with countryman, and pretend to have a most excellent tooth wash, professing to be tooth pluggers. They ask a very small fee. The unsophisticated bite at the bait and open their mouths; the thief commences fingering their teeth with one hand, and pick their pockets with the other. Should he fail in the first attempt, and finds that the 'pigeon' is flush, he turns him over to a regular pigeon dropper."

A fool in high station is like a man on the top of a mountain—every body appears small to him, and he appears small to everybody else.

CANADA OCEAN STEAMER.—The Montreal Gazette says:—

From the letter of the Editorial Correspondent of this journal, dated at London on the 10th, we learn that the Hon. Mr. Merritt had already had an interview with the Colonial Secretary on the subject of an Imperial Grant to our ocean steamers, and Mr. Labouchere had appointed a day for an interview in the next week with the Hon. Messrs. Young, Merritt, J. H. Cameron, John Ross, and Sir Allan McNab, Bart, on the same subject.

SUPPRESSION OF NEWSPAPERS IN CALIFORNIA.—One who travelled extensively in California last year, informs us that among other expedients of the party which at that time were in the ascendant, was the suppression of all the newspapers of a certain character, arriving from the Atlantic States, either by buying up the whole edition in San Francisco or by destroying them in their way to the mountains. In consequence of this it was scarcely possible, in the remote districts, to obtain information relating to both sides of political questions. The New York Tribune, which was largely sent to California and for which a correspondent inquired, in scores of places could not be had. The Boston Journal was also kept from California readers. The informant inquired at the express offices through which those papers were regularly sent, and was told after three several arrivals of steamers that they were not come and that nobody knew why. It is to be hoped that the circulation of newspapers from this part of the Union is not now obstructed in California by the same methods. There is still greater reason now than there then was, for stopping them on their way.—N. Y. Post.

ECONOMICAL GOVERNMENT.—The admirers of Republican Government, who so loudly prate about the extravagance of our Canadian Administration, will probably be shocked to learn that the amount raised by direct taxation last year, in the United States, not including Municipal taxation, was over one hundred and twenty-seven millions of dollars!—The amount paid to members of Congress during the present session for wages, travelling expenses and stationery—was $72,000,000!! Cheap legislation that!

SNAKE STORY.—The Dayton Gazette of the 8th inst., tells the following story:—

THE RATTLESNAKE TAMER.—A young man deaf and dumb, named Elvin Birch, amused the passengers on the railroad train from Richmond east, last Friday, by exhibiting his travelling companion and pet, a live rattlesnake which was 18 years old, and he seemed delighted to receive its embraces, by permitting it to coil around his neck. It seemed to be completely under his control, and would permit him to open its mouth to show its poisonous fangs, after which he placed it carefully in his tin box, without the least fear. It had twelve rattles.

A DILEMMA.—A gentleman, Mr George W. Still, residing at Petersburgh, Va., caught a neighbor in a beaver trap a few mornings since. Mr. S. had experienced considerable difficulty in keeping his watermelons quietly "at home o' nights," and hit upon a beaver trap to solve the mystery of their disappearance. Accordingly he set one, upon the approach of a trap, though larger, without teeth. In the morning, instead of a thieving negro, he found an honest neighbor fearfully crouching over it —fast. Imagine the neighbor's feelings!

Ireland.

THE DUBLIN CRIMEAN BANQUET.

From the Correspondent of the Times.

DUBLIN, Sept. 5.

The managing committee are making energetic exertions to render this ovation worthy of the occasion. Circulars have been despatched to almost every influential person in Ireland, with a view of obtaining support and pecuniary assistance. The general meeting is to be held on Monday in the Round-room of the Mansion House, and a large attendance is confidently expected.—There are, it is calculated, about 4,000 soldiers on the Irish establishment in possession of the Crimean medal, but of these it is estimated about 2,000, or one-half only, would be enabled to assemble in Dublin, and calculating the expense of each man at 5s.—the same sum as was allowed in London for the Guards—£500 would cover the actual expense of the dining part of the programme, and an additional £100 or so, ought surely to cover the contingencies incident to the occasion. It would be strange indeed, if in this, the land of tributes and testimonials, enthusiasm rightly directed, failed in the effort to raise this insignificant sum towards a demonstration at which men of all creeds and parties might for once mingle together without an apparent chance of discord.

THE HARVEST.

The following is extracted from the monthly agricultural report of the Derry Journal, and applies to the state and prospects of the harvest in the north-western counties generally:

"The harvest is now sufficiently advanced to give a pretty correct notion of the produce of the cereal crops. Wheat will be sadly deficient in the northern counties. The nearer it approached to maturity the more apparent became the blighting effects which the moist atmosphere of the past summer had upon it. It may be safely stated that the 80,000 additional acres which his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant recently stated to be under this crop in Ireland, as compared with last year, will not bring up the produce of wheat to the superabundance of that season. The few samples which have appeared in the markets look very ill, and the crop is usually spoken of as wanting a third of an average yield Oats, on the other hand, were never better, both in quantity and quality, and from the high price which they command, and as the fact that this is the staple grain crop in Ulster, the farmers will, in all probability, have another profitable season from their cornfields. Potatoes will fall very short of last year's produce. The growth has ceased at too early a stage, so that, taking it for granted that those now in the ground will keep good, which is still very doubtful, we should want a third or a fourth of last year's quantity. There were, however, more potatoes produced in 1855 in the north of Ireland than were required for the legitimate use to which they are usually applied; and large quantities were consumed by cattle in the spring of this year. As to all this season, various opinions have been expressed during the last two or three weeks respecting them. But judging of the effects of the disease this year, and from the course it has taken in other seasons, we believe the crop will be likely to turn out equal to that of 1852, 1853, and 1854, but very much less than the crop of 1855. In the counties of Derry and Donegal there is no great want of hands for harvest work, nor are the wages so very high as they are stated to be in some other parts of the kingdom. There is, however, ample employment, and a fair day's pay for a fair day's work.

Postal Treaty Between the United States and Canada.

Washington, Sept. 10, 1856.

The articles (additional to those of March, 1851), between the Post Office Department of the United States and that of Canada, providing for the exchange of registered letters between the two countries, will go into operation on 1st October next.

The first article provides:—Letters alleged to be valuable, posted at any Post Office in the United States or its Territories, and addressed to Canada or posted in Canada and addressed to the United States, and deliverable at any of the respective offices of exchange, to be hence conveyed to their destination, shall be registered at the Office mailing on the application of the person posting the same: provided that the full postage chargeable thereon to destination, together with a registration fee of five cents on each letter, be prepared at such mailing office: and provided, also, that such registration shall not be compulsory, and shall not render the respective Post Office departments of the United States or Canada, or their revenues, liable for the loss of such letters or packets, or the contents thereof.

The fee is to accrue to the United States Post Office Department upon all registered letters sent from the United States to Canada, and to the Canada Post Office Department upon all registered letters sent from Canada to the United States.

The opening of the Grand Trunk Railway from Portland to Michigan will form perhaps the most important era in the history of the British Provinces in America. So far, the prestige of this great highway, as regards its structure, stands higher than that of any other road on this continent. This remark applies also to the material and rolling stock at present in use, and it is proper that nothing should be wanting in maintaining this superiority over all other roads.

We have lately seen several newspaper accounts of a successful experiment that has been made upon this road between Montreal and Brockville, in the ventilation of one of the passenger cars of the company, and if it be certain dust can be excluded at the same time that a sufficient quantity of fresh air is afforded to the passengers, in summer, and that their feet can be kept warmer in every part of the car in winter, we would urge it upon the company at once to determine, and accomplish as fast as possible, the ventilation of all their passenger cars.

This subject has for the last seven or eight years engaged the attention of Railroad Companies in the United States, and has enlisted the ingenuity of a great number of inventors, scientific and non-scientific; and although scarcely a month passes without the announcement of the "Eureka," yet all in their turn have dropped into oblivion.

The experiments to which we have alluded, may also turn out to be ineffectual, but from the reports we have, and continue to receive, we do not hesitate to say, considering the vast importance of the subject, that it deserves a thorough investigation and trial before it be allowed to drop.

It may very safely be affirmed that the Railway Company which accomplishes those objects will at once establish its superiority over all others, and the increase of travel, for a few months only, will repay all expenses incurred.

When the nuisance of dust and cinder in summer travelling, and the suffering from foul air and cold feet in winter, be removed, Railroad travelling will become a pleasure and attract and increase the number of passengers incalculably; whereas at present few travel either in winter or summer who are not obliged to do so.

We feel the more interested in having this ventilation thoroughly tested, and its success, as we understand the inventor to be a Canadian; and our faith in its ultimate success is also increased, by a particular account furnished by the Montreal Herald of 23rd August, which appears to us perfectly philosophical.—Leader.

Perilous Shipwreck on Lake Ontario.

LOSS OF THE STEAMER CORRA LINN.—We noticed yesterday the loss of the small steamer Corra Linn near Kingston in the gale of Thursday night last. The particulars of the disaster come to us in the Kingston News. Some seventy passengers were in great jeopardy during a whole night and their escape may be deemed miraculous. The steamer has run for several years between Kingston and Belleville, and until last season was known as the Novelty. The News thus describes the disaster:

In the rain and wind storm of Thursday night between the hours of seven and eight, the Corra Linn steamer with passengers on Salmon Island shoal about two miles from the main shore, and between five and six miles from this city. There were on board sixty or seventy persons in all, who were for hours in the greatest jeopardy from the vessel going to pieces at every swell which struck her broad beam and her down on the ledge of rocks with tremendous violence. The scene on board is described as distressing in the extreme; the female portion of the passengers and children manifested their alarmby wailing, crying and praying in the most agonizing manner, while the male passengers and crew stood by themselves with all sangfroid to provide means of safety in case the vessel went to pieces, which was most imminent. A few musket shots were fired, and colored lamps exhibited as signals of distress, and shortly after the steamer City of Hamilton went to the rescue, and sent a large yawl, fully manned, which no sooner neared the Linn than she filled, but the hands were fortunately rescued.

After being pounded on the rocks for about two hours, the Linn was at last fairly lifted over the ledge, and snugly in a bed of gravel, and where the heavy dashing surge could not reach her. The darkness was so extreme that the Island lying about only four rods, was not seen for some time, but when discovered so near, as being a convenient place of refuge in case of emergency. The steamer Lady Elgin, in the morning, went out to proffer aid, but the wind being still very violent the sea running high, no help could be offered.—In the afternoon Mr. Hamilton sent out the steamer Passport, provided with large jolly-boats which would live through the surge, and which eventually succeeded in taking off all the passengers in safety.

The Corn Linn is owned by Messrs. A. & D. Shaw one of whom was on board at the time of the casualty, and who is confident that had not the vessel been providentially heaved into her present position, she must inevitably have been dashed to pieces in less than an hour. She has made considerable water, and is considered in a very precarious state, from the fact that she is in the midst of a series of rocks, rendering the approach of large craft impracticable.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, OCTOBER 9, 1856.

THE NOMINATION.

With a number of the supporters of Col. Prince, we attended the Nomination at Chatham on Saturday last, and felt much gratified at the immense concourse of Prince's friends, that had assembled, particularly from the County of Essex. We are indebted to the Windsor Herald extra for the following particular.

On Saturday last the nomination took place at Chatham. The day was fine and the people assembled in great numbers. The party in favor of Mr. Rankin left Windsor in the steamer Ottawa, at seven o'clock in the morning—the friends of Col. Prince started in the Pearl and Ruby an hour and a half afterwards. On board the Ottawa the number was about 300, but certainly not more; on the Ruby there were 287, and on board the Pearl 400, making at the lowest calculation 650; a large number of the friends of Colonel Prince also went by the Great Western Railway. The trip was made by the three boats in good time, as they arrived at Chatham at the hour specified for the nomination. It is probable that the inhabitants of Chatham have not before seen such a large assembly in their town as congregated on Saturday, and as they progressed along King Street, (which certainly for width and beauty is a credit to the enterprise and go-ahead disposition of the inhabitants) they presented almost the appearance of intruders, as the entire length of the street in their march to the Town Hall was taken up by the visitors. It may be mentioned that the two boats which carried the friends of Prince were cheered from every wharf in Essex and Kent with the exception of two, from one of which "Hurrah for Dougall" was heard,—from the other "Hurrah for Rankin."

The people at the nomination did not conduct themselves as well as might have been expected, for they did not give a fair attention to the proposers and seconders of the candidates, and the only excuse to be given is that they had not time to listen to long speeches.

Mr. Ronalds publicly delivered to the Returning Officer, Mr. John Mercer, a Protest signed by Colonel Prince and certain other electors of Essex and Kent, against his receiving any nomination or votes for Mr. Rankin, that gentleman being a member of the Lower House, and therefore disqualified, by Statute, being elected as a Councillor.

Col. Prince was Proposed by Henry Ronalds, Esq., of Raleigh plains, in Kent, and seconded by Edward Bolsmer, Esq., of Sandwich, in Essex.

Mr. Dougall was proposed by Mr. McKellar, Esq., and seconded by Capt. Traxler

Mr. Rankin was proposed by Colonel Drake, and seconded by John O'Connor, Esq.

As stated before the speakers were not listened to with much patience, as they were frequently interrupted. Mr. McKellar got the best hearing.

When the Sheriff called for a decision from the assembly, he forgot that Mr. Dougall was one of the candidates, and directed that they should divide—one side for Prince and the other for Rankin. After much difficulty the division was made, when either by recollection or from some other cause, the Sheriff discovered his mistake, and then informed the friends of Mr. Dougall that they should retire outside of the railings, leaving the friends of Messrs. Prince and Rankin within the pale. After nearly a quarter of an hour had elapsed the Sheriff gave his decision that Mr. Rankin was nominated by the majority.

This took the whole of the assembly by surprise, as they knew that there was a bona-fide majority for Prince: but it was explained by the fact (as stated by parties on the ground) that the Sheriff had included Mr. Dougall's supporters with the adherents of Mr. Rankin, conceiving that as they saw little chance of their own candidate being elected they would give their support to Mr. Rankin. This may not be fair way of judging, and it is probable that the Sheriff will discover that he has made a grand mistake when he finds himself under the necessity of returning Prince by a large majority of the votes.

Order having been restored, Colonel Prince addressed the assembly (certainly the largest we have seen in this part of the country) to the following effect:—He reminded the audience that he never ascribed to the day of nomination so much importance as many persons did; because, in truth, it did not indicate the success of either candidate. Hundreds might be present on such occasions who were not voters, and yet their show of hands told equally with others The polls were to decide the question, and he had no doubt that at the polls he should triumph, and that the very small and doubtful show of hands which had been pronounced in favor of another candidate would then vanish into nothing.

The Colonel then entered into various topics applicable to the new law under which they were assembled, and pronounced his political creed to consist mainly in promoting improvements of the country, and in encouraging the development of its resources.

"It is remarkable," said he, "that not one of my opponents has, from the commencement of this contest brought forward the subject of internal improvements in these counties. It is remarkable that they have never suggested the vast and feasible project of a ship canal from the Chenenlle carte to the Thames, and from thence to the Two Creeks on Lake Erie, thereby at an expense of not more than half a million, connecting the waters of Lake Erie and St. Clair, securing to us the entire command of these and the great Lakes above, and draining and thereby rendering invaluable thousands and tens of thousands of acres [which now consists of marsh and swamps."

Then he touched upon the Southern Railroad, which he had always supported and meant still to support, and told that he himself was for some time President of the Niagara and Detriot Rivers Railroad, which ran over nearly the same line of country as is proposed for the Southern, but the charter was lost because capital sufficient to build the road could not then be raised; and he had the pleasure to announce that within the last 10 minutes he had received a telegraphic despatch that Messrs. Buchanan and Harris had arrived by the "Africa," from England, and that the Southern Railway was safe! (Cheers.)

The Colonel then dwelt at length upon he duties of the new Legislative Council, and of the fitness of a candidate who aspired to the honor of a seat in it, pressing the assembly to elect none but a man of experience in matters of Legislation, and upon whose honor, skill, and independence of character they could safely rely; and he pledged himself, should he be elected, as no doubt he would, to serve them with zeal and industry, and to the best of his ability, and that was the only pledge he would give them, his solemn assurances to promote all local improvements and the welfare and prosperity of Canada at large by all the means within his reach or power.

"As to pledges involving political questions," said he, "which may arise, and which yet remain the subjects of agitation, I decline following the example of those candidates who are bold enough to compromise themselves by promises which they may not be able to perform, who 'rush in where angels fear to tread;' I say I will not follow their example, because, I ask you, what guarantee could you have from me, if pledged to perform your bidding; what reliance could the Commons of Canada place on me that I would in such case independently and honestly set upon bills coming up to the Council for my supervision as one of that honorable body?"

Mr. Prince then entered into an explanation why he had not pledged himself to the same extent as the other Candidates. Nothing was more easy than to give pledges, the only difficulty consisted in redeeming the pledges. In entering the Legislative Council it was to be expected that a representative would meet with men who were his equal in ability, and, in some instances, his superior in that respect; it was therefore useless to pledge when exercise of judgement was required—based on discussion.

The Council ought not to be a partizan body—they should be an independent body and not wedded to any party or to any particular line of politics; and it is because they ought to be independent and non-political that they are or ought to be respected by the people. Moreover, the councillor, or a member of the Lower House, who takes his seat as one bound to his constituents by pledges, is not a free man—he is not the people's representative but he is their delegate, their deputy, their slave,—he is not permitted to exercise his own abilities and judgement, or to act with independence—in fact he is a mere automaton, and in my opinion, wholly unfit to do justice to the people or to carry out any of the great principles of our representative system." (Cheers)

The Colonel then dwelt upon various other matters applicable to the occasion, and expressed his thanks to those friends who had attended the immense meeting, and rejoiced to see Essex and Kent so well represented upon this interesting occasion as it was.

The Colonel then sat down amidst much applause

Mr. Dougall then addressed the assembly in a speech of considerable length, in which he explained his political views. He was listened to with great attention, as all his remarks were made in a pleasant style of good temper, without reflection on either of the other candidates.

It may be mentioned that, although the supporters of Mr. Dougall were few on the ground, that he had made no provision for insuring their attendance, or more might have been present. Mr. Prince himself made no provision in this respect, but still his friends mustered in numbers so strong as to surprise himself. If Mr. Dougall is rejected at the polls, the reason will be, not want of respect on the part of the voters, but their determination to support an old friend—JOHN PRINCE—who never has, and never will advocate anything detrimental to their interests.

RANKIN'S ELIGIBILITY.

This question is governed by the Statutes 7 Vic., chap. 65, and 19 and 20 Vic., chap. 140.

The former Act provides that no person shall cease to be a member of the Assembly until his successor is appointed.

The latter Act declares that no member of the Assembly shall be elected a member of the Council.

But a man is always a member of the Assembly until his successor is appointed. Therefore until Rankin's successor is appointed, he is a member of the Assembly and cannot be elected to the Council.

This is logic, as well as law and common sense. The handbill produced by Rankin's supporters is (equally common) nonsense, for it assumes that Rankin's seat in the Assembly would be vacated by his election, forgetting that the last Act declares that he shall not be elected. If Rankin honestly expected a seat in the Council, he would use the only means of obtaining such, i. e., he would try to obtain some office which would vacate his seat in the Assembly. As it is, he evidently desires, for the gratification of his malice, to split up Col. Prince's support so as to get Mr. Dougall elected.

QUALIFICATION FOR VOTERS.

The only persons entitled to vote in Essex and Kent at the Legislative Council Election, are as follows, under 18 Vic., chap 16, section 2:

1. Owners of real property worth £50, or worth yearly £5, who have had their deeds six months before voting.

2. Lessees of real property of same value, whose leases [verbal or written] were originally for at least a year, and who have held their leases for six months before voting.

3. Occupants of real property of same value, who occupy, with the consent of the Crown or of the owner, and who have occupied for six months before voting, and with the intent that they shall become the owners, that is, under some agreement to purchase or acquire the property.

Several persons may vote on one property, if their shares be sufficient, except members of a corporate body, who cannot—sec. 3.

Purchasers of Crown lands, any of whose payments are overdue and unpaid, cannot vote.—section 5.

Voters must be 21 years old, and British subjects, either by birth or naturalized.

The following persons may be naturalized on taking the oath of allegiance, which (by 12 Vic., chap. 27, section 43,) may be taken before the returning officer.

1. Aliens resident in the Province before 10th February, 1841, and their children.—12 Vic., chap. 197, section 2.

2. Aliens who have been for five years resident in the Province.—12 Vic., chap. 197, section 4; amended by 18 Vic., chap. 6.

Of course, all qualifications must be bona fide, and not obtained for the purpose of voting alone.

JOHN PRINCE.

Sandwich, 1st October, 1856.

Electors must have in mind that on Monday the 13th the poll will be held in the various Municipalities, those who are favourable to the return of Col. Prince should be at their post, and not found wanting. Let every elector record his vote in the true cause.

SUR VOS GARDES!

DOUGALL VENDU A RANKIN!

TRAHISON, COMPIRATION ET CONDUITE DESHONNETE DE RANKIN ET DOUGALL!

LISEZ, EN VOICI LA PREUVE!

AU DR. COATSWORTH, Kingsville.

Mon cher Monsieur,

Jeudi dernier, à l'assemblée de Mr. Dougall, à Amhersburg, je demandai à Mr. Dougall, s'il avoit promis au partis de Kent, "de faire ses efforts, pour assurer à Rankin les voix qu'il ne pourroit s'assurer à lui même." Mr. Dougall remis avoir jamais fait une telle promesse, et je mentionnai alors, que Mr. Scoble, m'avoit dit, qu'une telle promesse avoit été faite, ce que Mr. Scoble sur son honneur remis emphatiquement. Je crois que vous êtes présent à Colchester, lorsque Scoble donna une telle réponse, et je vous demanderais la faveur de me dire, ce que vous lui avez entendu dire.

Tout a vous,

JOHN RICHMOND.

Amhersburg, 3rd Oct., 1856.

REPONSE.

Je n'hésite nullement à répondre à votre question. Mr. Scoble dit en ma presence qu'il avoit reçu une lettre de Mr. Dougall (avant la solicitation des voix,) contenant l'opinion de Mr. Dougall à l'egard des deux candidats; dans cette lettre Mr. Dougall désoit, "qu'il s'efforceroit de procurer à Rankin les voix qu'il ne pourroit pas se procurer à lui meme, je vous crois parfaitement juste et correct, dans ce que vous avez avancez, à l'assemblée, et je suis très étonné d'apprendre, que Mr. Scoble puisse être coupable d'un Deni, si chonté, et d'une rétractation si effrontée, de ses propres paroles. Je vous permets de faire usage de cette lettre comme bon vous semblera.

Tout a vous,

GEO. COATSWORTH.

To Mr. John Richmond.

TO DR. COATSWORTH,

KINGSVILLE.

Dear Sir,

At Mr. Dougall's Meeting at Amhersburg, on Thursday last, I asked Mr. Dougall if he had given a pledge to parties in Kent that he would endeavor to throw votes when he could not get them for himself, in favor of Mr. Rankin. Mr. Dougall denied ever having given such a pledge, and I stated to the meeting that Mr. Scoble told me such a pledge was given, which he emphatically denied upon his honor. I think you were present in Colchester when Scoble made that statement, and I wish you would do me the favor to state what you heard him say.

Yours truly,

JOHN RICHMOND.

Amhersburg, 3rd October, 1856.

REPLY.

AMHERSBURG, Oct. 3rd, 1856.

Dear Sir,

I have no hesitation in answering your question. Mr. Scoble stated in my presence, that he had received a letter from Mr. Dougall, (before the canvass,) containing the opinion of Mr. Dougall in regard to the two Candidates, and in which Mr. Dougall stated that he would exert himself to secure votes for Mr. Rankin, in case he could not secure them for himself. I think that you were perfectly justifiable in the statements you made to the meeting, and I am astonished to hear that Mr. Scoble can be guilty of such a barefaced denial and retraction of his own words. I give you permission to use this letter as you may think proper.

Yours truly,

GEO. COATSWORTH.

To Mr. John Richmond.

Aux Electeurs de la Division du Ouest.

MES AMIS!

Moi, Edwin Larwill, votre Répésentant, pour ce Comté, (Kent,) PROTESTE, contre la conduite d'un de mes collegues, membre, comme moi, de la chambre des Communes (chambre basse) en Canada en ce qu'il se mêle, s'interesse), dans l'Election d'un Conseiller Legislatif: l'interet qui y prend, et la manière dont il se mêle de cette election, étant dans mon opinion (illégale,) contre la Constitution, et de tout manière hors de saison.

J'étois présent à la nomination du Col. Prince, de Dougall et Rankin: l'officier Rapporteur, s'est trompé, et que dans la force du terme, la majorité des Electeurs, fut décidement en faveur du Col. Prince.

Tout à vous,

EDWIN LARWILL.

Chatham, Oct. 4, 1856.

To the Electors of the Western Division.

MY FRIENDS,

I, EDWIN LARWILL, your Representative of this County, protest against a fellow Member of the Commons House of Canada, interfering in the election of a Legislative Councillor, (as Mr. Rankin is,) such an interference being, in my opinion, unconstitutional, and in every way improper.

I was present at the nomination of Col. Prince, Dougall and Rankin. The Returning Officer declared the show of hands in favor of Rankin; but he admitted voluntarily, that the distinction as to numbers was so nice, it was difficult for him to decide. My opinion is, and hundreds of electors think the same, that the returning officer was mistaken, and that in point of fact, the majority of electors was decidedly for Col. Prince.

Yours truly,

EDWIN LARWILL.

Chatham, October 4th, 1856.

Electors of Kent.

MEN OF KENT,

The nomination of Candidates for the Legislative Council is over. Three Candidates have presented themselves for your choice; you have had an opportunity of seeing and hearing them all. They are well known men.

As your Representative in the Commons House of Assembly, I have frequently been asked my opinion and advice respecting the parties offering for your suffrages, which I have given as cautiously as possible, being aware that each Candidate should have an equal opportunity of expressing his views to the constituency, independent of any influence I may be presumed to possess. The time has now arrived when silence might be considered either cowardice or hypocrisy, both of which, though accused of, I eschew. I have a partiality for one of the Gentlemen, and I owe it alike to my constituents and the opposing candidates to express it.

Gentlemen, I give my vote and interest to John Prince, Esq. My reasons are:—His unquestioned ability, Experience and Independence. He never was a party man. Our Government has ever [until now] been conducted upon party principles. Hence the Colonel was never acceptable to any class of politicians. He never sold his brains for either office or emolument, but retained his integrity, and consequently his constituency until professional duties prevented.

The defeasure of Col. Prince met with a rebuke so just and overwhelming on the day of nomination, it is worth recording:—A large majority of the electors, constituting the wealth and intelligence of the constituency, declared him to be a FIT AND PROPER person to represent their interests in the Legislative Council. This ought to be sufficient for the "Planet" and other vile sheets.

As to Mr. Rankin, if he were desirous of being useful to his county, his position in the Lower House affords him double the opportunities that a seat in the Upper House would. Why, then, does he feel ocular demonstrations of the general good opinion entertained of the other candidates. "Electors, it is not my intention to make a long speech. I will only detain you a few moments. I have come forward on this occasion, solely on public grounds, not to promote any private or personal views; I come forward to keep out of Parliament an old worn out politician on the one hand, and on the other, an ignorant bigot, and a clear grit at that." He then thanked the electors for their attendance there that day. Now I cannot separate the candidates from their supporters, and therefore do not consider the language as an evidence of either Mr. Rankin's intelligence or discretion. Long public services, I had always supposed, entitled a man to consideration, if not reward. I have also been taught to respect age, to listen to the words of experience, and having found the advantage of them, would advise my constituents to do the same. Of Mr. Dougall, I have only to say that he represents certain political principles entertained by a very hard-thinking, industrious, and worthy class of men, who, though perhaps, not sufficiently numerous to elect their candidate, have sufficient influence to outtide them to reject.

In conclusion, I am happy to say that so far as my personal supporters at the last general election are concerned, they have, so far as I have been able to learn, determined to support John Prince. I have also the best of evidence from Essex that the electors there will do likewise.

For my part, I am proud of my acquaintance and friendship with Colonel John Prince.

Very respectfully yours,

EDWIN LARWILL.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADIAN.

QUEBEC, Oct. 6th.

The steamer Canadian from Liverpool, Wednesday 24th, arrived here to-day, she brings 4 days later news than brought by the Africa.

The Niagara arrived at Liverpool September 21.

British News quite a blank and political intelligence equally scarce.

In the French Market the price of Consols had become somewhat firmer, but the rise was not considered likely to be important.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 27

The steamer Niagara imparted greater foreign news and impressed the activity of the market. Our breadstuff market continues drooping; we reduce our quotations on wheat 2d to 3d for 70lbs; red wheat 9s 2d; white wheat, old, 8s 8d to 9s; new, 10s.

The New Spanish Constitution has been published. It is a reissue of the constitution of 1845, with 16 explanatory articles.

The Madrid Correspondence of the Paris Journal des Debats says that the Queen and O'Donnell were so much at variance, that O'Donnell tendered his resignation for the present, but the Queen declined to accept it.

The Journal des Debats as also the correspondents of the London papers, state that if Naples does not at once concede the concessions demanded, four line of battle ships, two frigates and two corvets, already detailed for the purpose, and will remain in the Bay of Naples, and threaten proceed to Naples, they will take on board the English and French Ambassadors.

Buffalo & Brantford Railroad.

The Buffalo Courier of Monday, has the following remarks on the present position of the Buffalo and Brantford Railroad:

This road we have been opened for traffic some time during the month of October, but from present appearances, there is little probability of its being done. We learn that Capt. Barlow, the Managing Director, in part performance of the agreement made at the time of the transfer of the road to the Bogerts, has paid over to the old directors, some $27,000, which it was intended by Capt. B., and received by them with the understanding that it was to be applied to paying off the laborers and employees of the company. This sum has, we are informed, been appropriated by those directors, paying off themselves and some small judgments on props ity which they had to turn over to the new company. In view of this state of affairs, Capt. Barlow has refused to pay over the balance, but has applied to the court of Chancery for the appointment of a Receiver to expend the amount as originally contemplated by paying the laborers and others to whom the company were indebted. Unless this indebtedness is removed, we are told the company will not be allowed to run their trains It is a great pity that the affairs of this certain road should be promptly and amicably settled, and the road put in operation.

JOSEPH CAUCHON,

C. C. L.

Toronto, Sept. 22, 1856.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,
TORONTO, 25th July, 1856.

To Emigrants & Others Seeking Land for Settlement.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out THREE GREAT LINES OF ROAD, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities, to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD.

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River, known as "Fernill's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," (leading to the Lake Muskoka,) and "Hawkins' Line," by which last line it will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming a "Bell's Line" as a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskoka, 177 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides on Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted. To reach the section of Country under the French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the township of Grattan, in which Mount St. Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road!

Commencing in the Township of Addington, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, in Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Madawaska, a distance of 35 miles, which is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects the Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The agent for the disposal of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINTS MILLS. The outlines of the township Plans of this road are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Madawaska. The Lots in these Plans are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh, Ashley, Effingham, Angleses, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of KINGSTON, Canada West, thence to NAPANEE, either by land or Steamboat, and thence North by the Tamworth Road to Kaladar, at the Village of FLINTS MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

The Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 30 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and forming the entrance of the Bay of Quinte, and thence due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, lately called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is already laid out, and will be opened out by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings.—The Land in this district is easily settled, and is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require.—Attendance at the Office can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

We direct way to reach this Section, which is easily accessible, is by KINGSTON, Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to BELLEVILLE, 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to HASTINGS, 20 miles.

In order to facilitate the settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government has authorized the Commissioner of Crown Lands to sell, for cash or Military Scrip, these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS:

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years.—build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed: after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from the obligation of building and of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live) provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot. The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such a description as can be put up in four days by five men. The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for new Settlers, and hence, without any charge, when this is done the cost of the erection is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone-house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement are, in sections of Canada West, capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, and also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land—some lots being much better than others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these Locations will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and others with soft wood.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres—will take case of and covered from one—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £6 to £7 currency.

The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settler at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, can build himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment.—The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at those seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labour.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords material for good roads during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the earth, not only facilitates communication while the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, whether Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ratio of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened by settlement, has increased FIVE-FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, HOURISES EVERY TEN YEARS in the mere lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa District, stretching from the navigable waters on the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River—an immense extent of country which is rapidly now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

THE OTTAWA COUNTRY,

lying South of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of EIGHT MILLIONS OF PEOPLE, and is attracting very special attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the Shores of Lake Huron to the City of the United States, and to open the same.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken, and will be completed in the present year—the practical object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Ontario, so that suitable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean. The projected works are alluded to, in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

TO THE

INDEPENDENT ELECTORS

OF THE

Counties of Essex and Kent.

GENTLEMEN,

THE time has now arrived when it becomes my duty to address you briefly upon the great change made in the Constitution of this Country by our Sovereign's gracious permission for us to Elect our Legislative Councillors, by which she has been pleased to wave Her Royal Prerogative to create them as heretofore. For that boon we should be grateful; and I doubt not that, if properly exercised by the people in a like manner to the increased prosperity of Canada as accomplished in those Electric Institutions which have so much contributed to our internal advancement and prosperity. It, however, behoves us to consider well and to reflect calmly upon what the qualifications of a Legislative Councillor ought to be, and what the duties of that Councillor are. It is or ought to be an honourable Body, in every sense of the word. It should consist of men not famed for being Party men, of violent political feelings, or ready to aid in factious opposition to the Government of the day; but men who are well known to the community as men of character and experience in the world, men who can be relied on as such, for the honour and independence of demeanour in the Senate as for their ability, and of men too who, by their experience in Legislation, can bring their knowledge to bear upon those Enactments which come up to them from the popular branch of the Legislature for their deep and solemn consideration. To such men you have, during your interests, and, in my opinion, at least, it would be dangerous to confide in any others. Moreover, the duties of the Council are most important. They are a check upon the vague, hasty, imperfect, and ill-digested legislation which sometimes emanates from the Lower House; and their deliberations should be conducted with that dignity and cool reflection which in a popular assembly it is next to impossible to maintain. I do not address you as a stranger or as a new man soliciting your support for the distinguished honour to which, by your favour, I aspire. But I address you as an old friend and neighbour who has lived amongst you continuously for nearly twenty-four years, through good report and evil report, and who was your chosen representative in Parliament for more than eighteen years! And you have, by your requisitions, told me that I and I alone am your choice to represent you in the new Council, that is to be. You know my abilities, humble though they are; you know my experience in Parliament, and you know my character; and upon that knowledge you have been pleased to base your requisitions that I become your Representative in that Council. I do not profess to be a Politician—a bigotted Partizan with any set of men—but I do profess to know and ever will maintain the principles of an honest and independent public character, wherever I am placed; and I will yield to no man in liberality of sentiment or action; and I refer to my constituents, and it is most gratifying to receive that by appearing at the day of election, and receiving a vote, he is guilty of a violation of the law, and that (no matter how many votes he has) he cannot take his seat in the Legislative Council, and the votes you give him will therefore be absolutely thrown away! I have given him notice as to the consequences of the illegality of his proceedings, and, I now beg leave to respectfully warn you against casting your votes in favor of a man who places law at defiance, and whose aim appears to be, the sacrifice of your valuable suffrages at the shrine of his own personal vanity and ambition.

AYER'S PILLS

Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

JULES MAURI, Esq., the well known perfumer, of Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, whose choice products are found in almost every toilet, says:

"I am happy to say of your CATHARTIC PILLS, that, have found them a better family medicine, for common use, than any other I possess my knowledge. For many years I have realized marked benefits from them, and consider with me in believing that they possess extraordinary virtues for driving out diseases and curing the sick. They have cured many of their sick and journeys to be taken in the spring. A few doses of your Pills cured me. I have used your Cherry Pectoral many years in my family for coughs and colds with unfailing success. You make and distribute the best medicines I know, and I feel it a pleasure to recommend you for the good you have done and are doing."

JOHN F. HEATH, Esq., Sec. of the Penn. Railroad Co., says:

"SIR: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicines, having derived very material benefit from the use of both your Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. I am never without them in my family, nor shall I ever consent to be, while my means will procure them."

The widely renowned S. S. STEVENS, M. D., of Westminster, Vt., writes:

"Having used your CATHARTIC PILLS in my practice, I certify with pleasure that they are a most efficient cathartic. In cases of disordered functions of the liver, causing headache, jaundice, dyspepsia, and the many kindred evils of diseases that follow, they are a surer remedy than any I know. In all cases where a purgative remedy is required, I confidently recommend these Pills to the public, as possessing the best qualities I have ever found. They are worthy their reputation, and perfectly safe—qualities which make them the best physic for the people. For years I have known your Cherry Pectoral as the best Cough medicine in the world; and these Pills are in every instance to be commended for the treatment of diseases."

Acton, Me., Nov. 25, 1853.

"DR. J. C. AYER—DEAR SIR: I have been afflicted from my birth with scrofula in its worst form, and now, after twenty years' trial, and an untold of amount of suffering, have been entirely cured in a few weeks by your Pills. With what feelings of rejoicing I write can only be understood by those who realize what I have suffered, and how long.

"Never until now have I been free from this loathsome disease in some shape. At times it attacked my eyes, and nearly or almost blind, besides the unendurable pain and others it settled in the scalp of my head, and destroyed my hair, and then I kept the scalp all of my days, sometimes it came out in my face, and kept it for months a raw sore.

"About nine weeks ago I commenced taking your Cathartic Pills, and am entirely free from the complaint. My eyes are well, my skin is fair, and my hair has commenced growing. It is now a thick head of which nature has first already a new person.

"Hoping the statement may be the means of conveying information that shall do good to others, I am, with every sentiment of gratitude, Yours, &c.,

MARIA RICKER."

"I have known the above named Maria Ricker from her childhood, and her statement is strictly true.

ANDREW J. MERRYE.

Overseer of the Portsmouth Manufacturing Co."

CAPT. ISAIAH DAVIS, Worthy of the Ship Master's Society, Boston, 30th April, 1854:

"Your Pills have cured me from a bilious attack which arose from derangement of the Liver, which had become very serious. I had failed to get relief by my frequent use of various every remedy I could try; but a few doses of your Pills have completely restored me to health. I have also given them to members of my family with the best effects. They were promptly cured. I recommended them to a friend afflicted with Dyspepsia. He had been sick for months; he told me in a few days they had cured him. He is now in the best health he ever enjoyed in his life. I say no more."

From the late distinguished Solicitor of the Supreme Court, whose brilliant abilities have made him well known, not only in this but the neighboring States.

New Orleans, 9th April, 1854.

"SIR: I have great satisfaction in assuring you that myself and family have been very much benefited by your medicines. My wife was cured, two years since, of a severe and dangerous cough, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then has enjoyed perfect health. My children have often since been cured from attacks of the influenza and Croup by it. It is an invaluable remedy for children. Your CATHARTIC PILLS have entirely cured me from a dyspepsia and costiveness, which has given me, for some years,—in spite of all care in such matter important, from the fact that I had failed to obtain in the New Orleans market, and many other of the country affords, and from my of the numerous cures I had seen effected.

"You seem to me, Doctor, like a providential blessing to our family, and you may well suppose we are not unmindful of it. Yours respectfully,

LAFAYETTE THANTER."

Senate Chamber, Colo., April 25th, 1854.

"DR. J. C. AYER—Honored Sir: I have made a free use of your CATHARTIC PILLS, both in my family and myself, and have been cured by them of the dreadful Rheumatism and erysipelas, which for years afflicted me. The first dose relieved me, and a few subsequent doses have entirely cured me of the same. I feel in better health now than for some years before, which I attribute entirely to the effects of your CATHARTIC PILLS. Yours with great respect, LUCIUS B. METCALF."

NOTICE.

To the Electors of the Counties of Essex and Kent in Canada West.

GENTLEMEN:

You are aware that Arthur Rankin, Esq., (who is a member of the House of Assembly in this Province) aspires to represent you in the Legislative Council, and has proclaimed himself a Candidate for that distinguished honor. By the statute Law of the land, (namely, the Legislative Council Act, under which the election is about to take place,) it is enacted that no member of one house shall be elected a member of the other; and is therefore perfectly clear that by appearing at the day of election, and receiving a vote, he is guilty of a violation of the law, and that (no matter how many votes he has) he cannot take his seat in the Legislative Council, and the votes you give him will therefore be absolutely thrown away! I have given him notice as to the consequences of the illegality of his proceedings, and, I now beg leave to respectfully warn you against casting your votes in favor of a man who places law at defiance, and whose aim appears to be, the sacrifice of your valuable suffrages at the shrine of his own personal vanity and ambition.

For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been greatly enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete Courses ever published, and is adapted to the public in any similar Institution in the United States.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT

embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING.

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Personal and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries; made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual forms. By so doing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTEND COURSE.

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business Firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering upon special business.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP. PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual branches of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmenograph or Spencerian System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now in the Public High Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchanging, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit-rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, and which makes me first already a new person.

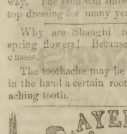
Fattening Swine.

The period when farmers pen their swine is now approaching and a few words thereon will prove at least the feature of appropriateness.



The first requirement to success in this department of farm economy is—a good unobstructed stricture on which to build the flesh. Razor-backs shave their owners and the community at large. Long legged,—subsided animals may answer for the purpose of "making good time," on the way to the trough, but for filling pork barrels they are totally indequate. If a farmer has no other cribs in which to place his corn, two or three pigs of this description will allay any anxiety on that score. Further, more, the only ears to which a hog should run are ears of corn,—these appendages may give to a donkey a grave look—but on a pig! Good breeders deliver. ta!

TO TAKE OUT SUNBURN.—If the sperm oil has fallen on the dress or floor and but a quantity as to stand up in a lump, you may gently remove a part of it with a knife. But do not attempt to scrape it all off as that will injure the fabric of the article.—You need only try to dislodge a little from the surface, and even this may be omitted. You have merely to hold the article before a fire, (not near enough to scorch,) spreading it out on your hands.—You will soon see the spermaceti begin to evaporate, a small vapor or smoke rising from it, and the grease disappearing rapidly; so that, in a short time, no trace of it will remain. We know, by experience, that this method is ways successful. Spots may also be removed by laying a white paper over it, and pressing the place with a warm iron; but heated irons are not always to be had, and it is more convenient to hold the article to the fire.

SHEEP MANURE OR MEADOWS.—Sheep manure is No. 1, for grass lands, which can easily and effectually be manured by building light movable sheds, open on one end; the soils to be made ilk shed runners on the ends; put them in the lots to be manured, and when the sheep occupy it for a night or two, long enough to give the ground in and around it a good coat of manure, hitch a team to it and remove it two or three rods, and so on. When you get across the lot, hitch on to the other end and, draw it back over a new strip of land, and so on until the whole lot is manured in this way. The land will show the effect of the top dressing for many years.

Why are Shanghi roosters like early spring flowers? Because they are crowcuses.

The toothache may be cured, by holding in the hand a certain root—the root of the aching tooth.

CATHARTIC PILLS

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and, by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors, Physicians, and Patients, has shown that all the various diseases almost beyond belief, were they not substantiated by persons of such exalted position and character as to forbid the supposition of untruth, their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give Directions for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

FOR COSTIVENESS.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as to gently operate in the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure of one complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while either a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it is a, matter of importance.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, which is sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take mild doses—from one to four—to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and the Secretions, sodiptess, and sordors of dyspepsia will rapidly disappear. When it has gone, don't forget what cured you.

FOR A FOUL STOMACH, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength is restored to the system.

FOR NERVOUSNESS, SICK HEADACHE, NATURAL Pain in the Stomach, Back, or Side, take from four to eight Pills, going to bed, by which the cure is more effectually, take more the next day until they do. These complaints will be swept out from the system and bear testimony to their good effects in orders because your stomach is foul.

FOR SCROFULA, ERYSIPELAS, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the bowels open. The eruptions will generally soon follow the cleansing of the blood. Any decadful ulcers and sores have been healed up by the same treatment, purifying the blood, which is the source originating diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have completely yielded to their influence, and gave the sufferer a new state of health. Patients' your duty to society forbids that you should pollute yourself around you with vexed with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the unclean diseases of the skin, because your system wants cleansing.

TO PURIFY THE BLOOD, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently and the impurities which now in the seeds of incurable diseases will be swept out of the system, preventing and saving life. By this purity they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections arising from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the Liver. Torpidity is the first stage—congestion the next—and the under it ends for disease. This is disastrous to the health, and the constitution is frequently undermined by their cause. A single dose will show you the result.

No. 1, CHEAP HOUSE.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typographic and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. KNIGHT, JAMES SNOWDEN and D. W. RAY.

TERMS: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the ILLUSTRATED HORTICULTURIST for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE

AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE

Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The active promotor of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1846, having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING.

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTEND COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

What is Life.

BY HENRY NEELE, ESQ.

Tell me, what is Life, I pray?—
'Tis a changing April day,
Now, dull as March, now, blithe as May;
A little cloud, a little light,
Nought certain, but th' aproach of night,
At morn and evening, dew appears,
And life begins and ends with tears.

Yet, what is Life,, I pray thee tell?—
'Tis a varied-sounding bell,
Now a triumph, now a'knell;
At first, it rings of hope and pleasure,
Then, sorrow mingles in the measure;
And then a stern solemn toll,
The requiem of a parted soul.

Yet, tell, prithee, what is Life?—
'Tis a tale with wonder rife,
Full of danger, full of strife;
A tale, that first enchants the ear,
Then fills our souls with doubt and fear
At last, with grief bows down our heads,
And sends us, weeping, to our beds.

Yet, what is Life?—That insect vain
Lur'd, from the heav'n it might attain,
To wed the glow-worm on the plain;
Wealth, pleasure, fame, at distance seen
Shine brilliant as the glow-worm's sheen
Life weds these seeming glorious forms,
And finds them blind and grov'lling worms.

Yet, what is Life, again declare?—
Oh! 'tis an arch of promise fair,
Built, like the rainbow—in the air;
Many a hue, but none that last,
Many a ray, but each soon past,
Form'd of things that soon must sever
Swiftly gone,—and gone for ever.

Early Times in Indiana.

Said Major Oudesley, as he casually dropped in on us yesterday morning and commenc- talking away in his usual, quiet, chatty and peculiar manner—

"I'm sick and tired of this artificial way of doing things in these days."

"Why so, Major?"

"There is an eternal sight too much parade about everything that is going on."

"I was at a wedding last night; the daughter of an old and much esteemed friend was to be married, and I was so urgently invited, that I couldn't help going; there was so much fuss and parade that I was perfectly disgusted. I couldn't help comparing the proceedings when a couple was married in Lawrenceburg many years ago, when Indiana formed part of the great Northwestern Territory. At that time the settlements of the emigrants were mostly confined to the rich bottom lands of the water-courses. Lawrenceburg was a small village of a few log cabins. My father was acting magistrate for the district, and very promptly attended to all the various duties of that office, in addition to which he was in the habit of doing a good deal of manual labor on his own hook."

"That was when you wasn't big enough to do much, Major."

"Exactly; I was a tow-headed brat of some eight or ten years old when the incident I am about to relate occurred, but I remember all the particulars as well as if it occurred yesterday. You see it was about dinner time one day in the fall of the year, when the old man, being engaged in laying in a supply of wood for the winter, drove up his ox team with a pretty solid load of fuel.

Just then a young and unsophisticated couple entered the village, hand in hand, inquired for the Squire, and were duly directed to the house. The youth was barefooted, and wore a coarse but clean tow linen shirt and pants, and rough hat of home manufacture. His fair companion was dressed in a blue cotton frock, pink cotton apron fine bonnet and coarse brogan shoes without stockings.

These were their wedding-dresses, and their severe simplicity and the thorough Independence they manifested made an impression upon my mind not to be effaced.

"We come to get married," said the young man to the old lady, my mother, who was properly busy among the pots and kettles."

"That's a very good 'business," said she, smiling graciously, "though you appear to look very young; but there's the Squire, just drove up; he'll splice you in less then no time." So out she bolted to give the fortunate functionary due notice of the business in hand.

"I can't stop till I unload this wood," said the old man; "tell them to come out here."

Out they come.

The old man was on top of the cart, and every time he threw off a stick he asked a question. Before he was fairly unloaded, he had the youth's whole story, having ascertained the names, ages, and residence of the parties, how long he had known the young woman; if he really loved her, and was willing to labor honestly to promote her happiness, &c.

The youngster gave simple and satisfactory answers to all the questions propounded.

In the meantime the old lady, perfectly understanding Dad's way of doing things, had sent out to say to the people that a wedding was coming off at the house; and by the time the wood was unloaded, quite a crowd had collected to witness the ceremony.

The old fellow, having pitched out the last stick, and picked up his long goad, stood up in the cart and commenced the performance.

"Jest jine hands," said he to the young couple. It was done accordingly.

"I am satisfied with both of ye, continued he, "you've a perfect right to get married;" and he united 'em in short order,

"As the rafters on this house are joined together, so I jine you—you are man and wife—salute your bride. I don't charge you anything for the operation.

"Whoa haw, Buck; get along, Bright!" and with an eloquent flourish of his long stick, he started for another load of wood, leaving the newly wedded pair amid the villagers kissing each other with a very distinct and particular evidence of satisfaction.

"That was a wedding worth having," said Major Oudesley: "I knew the couple afterwards, and know them yet, for they are both living in a high state of prosperity.—And I knew their children after them, too, and mighty fine children they are, for one of them is at this very time Governor of the State of Indiana.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Remarkable Ærolite.

We find in the Lake Superior Miner, of Aug. 30th, the following account of a remarkable Ærolite.

An Ærolite of a most remarkable character appeared in the heavens, just after sunset on the evening of Friday, the 15th inst. We have heard of its having been seen at Marquette, Copper harbor, Eagle harbor, the Cliff Mine, off Misery Bay from the propeller Manhattan, at this village, at the Norwich Mine, and at Superior. The first and last named points are about 250 miles distant in a right line, and this fact may aid us in forming some conception of the immense magnitude of this object. The most minute observations of the phenomenon which have come to our knowledge were made at the Norwich Mine, and on board the propeller Manhattan.

The passengers and crew of the vessel observed a fire ball of the most dazzling brilliancy, about half the apparent diameter of the sun very high in the heavens, moving towards the south, attended by a roaring or rushing sound, terminating with explosion. It remained in sight for about thirty seconds when it suddenly disappeared or faded away. A line of smoke or cloudy vapor was thrown off from the fiery nucleus as it moved along, which remained visible in the heavens for half an hour or more, after it had disappeared. At first this lay in a right line marking the path of the meteor.—But it soon began to wind itself itself into a sinuous or serpentine from, and finally coiled up. Some of the crew of the Manhattan remarked that the "sea serpent must have got up into the air and busted."

At the Norwich Mine it appeared to be about north, and to move in a south westward direction. Its motion was first observed, and as it disappeared the time was noted between the disappearance and the sound. The persons on the ground computed its distance to be about 46 miles. There were two or more loud reports following each other in quick succession like the booming of distant cannon, four minutes after it disappeared. The phenomenon was witnessed by twenty or thirty persons on this location. It appeared very high in the heavens from this point.

It was also seen by a great number of persons at Marquette, and appeared from there to be quite near the horizon, and a little to the north of west. From its course when seen from these various points, we conclude the object must have occupied a place very high in the atmosphere between our village and the Porcupine mountains—or perhaps over the lake to the north of the coast lying between those points.

Miscellany.

CRICKET.—Eleven English against Eighteen Americans.—This exciting match was was commenced yesterday morning at 10:40, and when time was called at 5:30, each side had played one inning, with the following result:—Americans went in first—they only played fifteen men, three players having disappointed them—but hopes are entertained they will turn up to-day, and give a different colour to the game. At present the Americans got 64 to the English 128, just double. The American players consisted of Messrs. Shonnard, Stedwell and Bashford, of Yonkers; Baker of Newark; J. and W. Wisser, Richards, Johnson, Kuhn and Howe, of Philadelphia; James, of New York; Chapin and Cutles, of Albany and Oddie, of Brooklyn. The English comprised Messrs. Cuyp, Sharp and Fletcher, of the New York Club; Gibbes, Walker, Wright and Earnshaw, of the St. George's Club; Facon, of the Philadelphia Club, and Hobbs and Smith, of the Albany Club.—The weather was beautiful and the ground well covered with visitors. Play will be resumed to day at 10 o'clock precisely on the Hoboken ground.—N. Y. Tribune Octo. 7

THE BARRISTER MATCHED.—At a late quarter session a man was brought up by a farmer and accused of stealing some ducks. The farmer said he should know them and where and went on to describe their peculiarities.—"Why," said the counsel for the prisoner, "they can't be such a rare breed—I have some like them in my yard."—"That's very likely, sir, said the farmer, "they are not the only ducks that I have had stolen lately."

THE TRUE WOMAN,—The true woman for whose ambition a husband's adoration is suficient; who applies her military instincts to the discipline of her household, and whose legislative faculties exercise themselves in making laws for the nursery: whose intellect has field enough for her in communion with her husband; and whose heart asks no other honors than his love and admiration; a woman who does not think it a weakness to attend to her toilette, and who does not disdain to be beautiful; who believes in the virtue of glossy hair, and well fitting gown, and eschews rents and raveled edges, slip shod shoes and audacious makes up; a woman who speaks low and does not speak much; who is patient and gentle, intellectual and industrious; who loves more than reasons, and does not love blindly; who never scolds and rarely argues, but adjusts with a smile; a woman who is the wife we all dreamed of once in our lives, and who is the mother we still worship in the backward distance of the past. Such a woman as this does more for human nature, and more for woman's cause, than all the captains, barristers, judges, and members of parliament, put together.—God-given and God-blessed as such a one is.—Dickens.

SLEEP.—Observation and scientific experiment constantly confirm the fact that the brain is nourished, repaired, during sleep If then, we have not sleep enough, the brain is not nourished, and like everything else, when deprived of sufficient nourishment, withers, and wastes away, until the power of sleep is lost, and the whole man dwindles to skin and bone, or dies a maniac!

By all means, sleep enough, by requiring them to go to bed at some regular hour, and to get up the moment of spontaneous waking in the morning. Never waken up any one, especially children, from a sound sleep, unless there is urgent necessity to do so; it is cruel to do so: to prove this we have only to notice how fretful and unhappy a child is when waked up before the nap is out. If the brain is nourished during sleep, it must have most vigor in the morning, hence the morning is the best time for study; then the brain has most strength, most activity, and works most clearly. It is the midnight lamp which floods the world with sickly sentimentalists, false morals, rickety theology and all those harum scarum dreams of human elevation, which abnegate Bible teachings.—Dr. Hall's Monthly.

"My dear Jerusha Ann, may I see you home from singing school to-night?" "No, Jonathan," pettishly answered the down-easter. "I don't want you—I'd sooner the dogs would bite me." "Perhaps you did't hear what I said?" asked Jonathan, stepping up to her. "Yes I did. You asked me if you could see me home." "No I didn't, bawled Jonathan, "I asked you how your mother was!"

WHAT WAS IT CUT WITH?—A party of friends had assembled one evening, and after discussing the various topics of the day, one of them remarked:—"Well, boys, I suppose you've heard of Dave Duncomb's marriage?" Some of them had heard of it, and some had not. "Well," continued the speaker, "he is married, and I was at the wedding. A right merry time we had of it too, I assure you; but there was one thing that surprised me very much, and that was the manner in which they cut the wedding cake; I can't help thinking on it. Now what do you suppose they cut it with!" "The wedding ring," said one. "No," answered the speaker, "you must guess again." "A string," said one. "No." "A stick whittled to an edge," suggested a third.—"No." "A piece of tin," ventured the fourth, thinking thathe had hit it. "No." "Well, what was it?" exclaimed they all in one breath, after guessing every imaginable article they could think of except the right one, that could either possibly or impossibly be put through such a cake. "Why" said the quiz, "they cut it with a knife to be sure."

ACCIDENT.—TWO MEN KILLED.—We regret to learn that on Wednesday last, a fatal accident occurred on the Grand Trunk Railroad, between Trenton and Smithfield.—From what we can learn, the railroad runs nearly parallel with the travelled road, and two men were driving along the road, and being desirous of crossing the railroad track, before the Engine and ballast train overtook them, whipped their horses into a run, but, unfortunately, when upon the track, the horses became frightened, and refused to proceed, but stood and reared upright. Dology was killed almost instantly, and the other, whose name is Saxon, had both his legs taken off, and died shortly after. The former, we learn, leaves a wife and 9 children, and the latter a wife and 5 children. Both men were in a state of intoxication. The engine was thrown from the track, and struck a stump, smashing it to pieces. Fortunately, the engineer though thrown from the engine some distance, was not materially hurt,—Bellville Intelligencer.

A FINNISH VIEW OF THE RELATIVE STRENGTH OF RUSSIA AND ENGLAND.—A traveller recently from Finland gives rather an amusing account of the opinion of the Fins on Russian aggression:

"A Fin came to me the other day and told me that the Czar had sent to the King of Sweden and told him that it was no use to resist any longer, for that he, the Czar, was determined to annex Sweden and Norway to Russia. Upon this, the King, in a great fright, applied to Queen Victoria.—Her Majesty immediately sent to the Czar and told him he should do no such thing. Upon this the Czar, in a rage, wished to fight with her directly, but she said she would do so next year. The Emperor, in a tremendous passion, sent Queen Victoria a sack of barley and said: "You see all the grains in this bag—can you count them? I will bring an army to fight you, as many as these are in number, and if that won't do, I will bring as many more." And what did Queen Victoria answer to that? I asked. Why, said the Fin, she sent the Czar one grain of pepper and told him to put it in his mouth. "My army," she said, "is small, and so is this grain of pepper; but this grain bites sharp; so my army will bite sharp, much sharper than you like." Upon this the Czar put off fighting for another year. This was in 1853."

In the Court of Quarter Sessions at Montreal, his Honour Mr. Justice McCord delivered an important judgment in the case of the Queen vs. Samuel Cochrane et al, charged with conspiracy to defraud John McDonald. The defendants were indicted under four counts for conspiracy to defraud one John McDonald of a certain lottery ticket, No. 7,436, in a certain lottery set on foot by one Joshua Bates, wherein several prizes were portions of real or immoveable estate. This species of lottery is known as a "tirage au sort." To this indictment the defendants demurred, on the ground, generally, that even supposing the facts alleged against them to be true, no offence in law has been committed, and no indictment will lie for conspiring to take that which is in law a nullity. The Judge held, in accordance with decisions of the English Law Courts, that where a cause of action arises ex turpi causa, or a transgression of a positive law of the country, the plaintiff has no right to be assisted. The demurrer, therefore was maintained, and the indictment quashed.—Globe.

CANADIANS AT N. Y. STATE FAIR.—The following Canadian exhibitors took prizes at the New York State Fair, held last week at Watertown, in the class—"from out of the State:"—W. Davis, Toronto, diploma and $15 for best short horn bull, two years and upwards. Richard Coates, Oakville, diploma and $15 for best Devon bull, two years and upward; and $15 for best blood stallion, four years and upward. A. C. Palmer, $15 for best stallion, horse of all work, four years and upward. Henry Battell, $15 for best brood mare, horse of all work, four years and upward. Peter Archdeacon, $15 for best draught stallion, four years and upward. In sheep, C. A. Jordison, Port Hope, took two prizes of $10 each, one for the best long-wooled buck, the other for the best pen five long-wooled ewes John Spencer, Whitby, took $10 for the best middle wooled buck, and $10 for the best pen five merino ewes. W. Roddick, Cobourg, carried the $10 prize for the best merino buck.—Globe.

MRS. PARTINGTON'S LAST.—"Well," said the old lady, the other day, as she was engaged at her knitting work, "I wonder if I ever shall be able to express myself correctly. It seems to me I never can use the right word. Every time I undertake to say something I make some blunder or other. Whenever I open my mouth I am sure to put my foot into it!"—And she drew a sigh as she spoke, indicating that her mortification was inexpressible, GRAIN IN GREAT BRITAIN.—The imports of grain into Great Britain, for the calendar year of 1853, was equivalent to 85,619,532 bushels of wheat; in 1854 it was 63,567,240 bushels; in 1855, 50,227,608 bushels. The estimate for the next year is that 40,000,000 bushels will be wanted; of which Russia, it is supposed, will supply 10,000,000 bushels, Prussia 10,000,000, and other European countries 5,000,000; leaving 15,000,000 bushels to be furnished by the United States.

Mirth is like a flash of lightning, that breaks through a gleam of clouds and glitters for a moment; cheerfulness keeps a kind of daylight in the mind, and fills it with a steady and perpetual serenity.

The London (C. W.) Free Press, of the 3rd inst, says, that on Saturday last, while several children were playing on the 6th concession of Zorra, the youngest child of Mr. Andrew Emerson, Farmer, was stung to death in the following manner:—The children in their play, had disturbed, near the woods, a yellow wasp nest, and been attacked, ran away, its face was found completely covered with wasps. The poor little sufferer lingered until Monday morning.

Queen Victoria has eight children, four sons and four daughters. Their names and titles are as follows: Victoria Adelaide Mary Louisa, Princess Royal, now fifteen years of Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, fourteen years old; Alice M. and Mary, twelve years old; Helen Augusta Victoria, nine years old; Louisa Caroline Alberta, seven years of age; Arthur William Patrick Albert, five years of age; and Leopold William Duncan Albert, two years old.

SANDWICH, OCTOBER 16, 1856.

GLORIOUS VICTORY.

THE contest for the Election of a member to represent the Western Division in the Legislative Council, has resulted in a glorious majority for the Candidate whom we considered it our duty as well as pleasure, to support, and that Candidate is Col. Prince. His majority over the other two candidates is of such a nature as to prove most clearly, that the electors have lost confidence in Mr. Rankin as a public man, and that the course he has pursued, in relation this election, has met with any thing but a favourable reception from his former constituents, We are inclined to believe that Mr. Rankin will feel himself bound to resign his seat in the Lower House when so large a majority has been obtained against him, in his own County, and go back to the people for re-election. Mr. Dougall, the third candidate, polled very few votes in Essex, but polled more in Kent than either of the other candidates.

The following figures shew the number of votes polled for each of the candidates, and are as nearly correct as can be, we believe they will not vary half a dozen when the official reports will be made. They shew a majority for the now Honorable John Prince of 543, as far as returns have been received.

Next week, a full report will be given, which we regret cannot be given this week.

☞ We are this week unavoidably obliged to issue only half a sheet, and hope that our readers will overlook our shortcomings in this number, when it is remembered that the victory gained on Monday and Tuesday was the cause of a general rejoicing in this neighborhood, and we could not deny to all hands a participation in them.

MARRIED.—In the City of Detroit, on Wednesday the 8th inst, Daniel O. Beere to Mrs. Leopold Boydell, both of Petite Cote near Sandwich.

In accordance with an old established custom, the Sandwich boys had determined to give the "happy pair" a chivaree; and on Tuesday night, they went, accompanied by fife and drum, &c., to their residence at Petite Cote, where they were received by the bridegroom with genuine English hospitality. The health and prosperity of Mr. Beere and his blooming bride was drunk with three times three. Several speeches were made and songs sung, after which three cheers were given for the Queen, and this party, led by the music returned home, highly pleased with the manner in which they were received.

Terrific Collision on the Great Western Railway.

THREE CARS BURNED, AND FIVE SMASHED TO ATOMS.

From the Extra of London Free Press.

A frightful accident, which might have resulted in appalling consequences, occurred about one mile west of London about 1 25 a. m., October 9th. A train of seventeen cars, heavily laden with horned cattle, was coming east, which it met the night train going west. The result was a collision, entirely destroying five cattle cars by the violence of the shock, while one passenger car, the baggage car and post office were burnt. On visiting the scene of disaster, we found the line strewn with the debris of the two trains. The engine of the cattle train—curiously enough called the "Bison"—was much shattered in the fore part of the work, massive machinery being twisted, bent and broken in a manner that gave one a good idea of the force of the concussion. Proceeding a little further, we saw the charred remains still smouldering of a passenger car and baggage car, both of which had been precipitated down the embankment. Further on were three cattle trucks and upwards the poor beasts being strewn around, dead and wounded, forming a sickening spectacle. To the left were two other cattle trucks rolled down the embankment, with many dead beasts inside. We counted no fewer than 27 head of cattle lying dead or maimed. In addition, the line was covered for a distance of many yards, with broken iron, splinters, &c. A gang of men were immediately despatched to clear the line, which was effected by ten o'clock. The engine of the night train, "Mazeppa," was not so severely damaged as the "Bison." The mail train consisted of four passenger cars, baggage car, and post office.

An incident showing the force of the collision on the front part of the cattle train may here be mentioned. Four bullocks were precipitated through the roof of the truck in which they were confined, and deposited in a confused mass in the tender. Fortunately no lives were lost, and little personal damage done; but taking into account the severity of the accident, it is little short of miraculous how any escaped. The Conductor of the passenger cars, Mr. Atkinson, received a severe contusion on the head and body, but had no bones broken. The Express Company's agent, Wheaton, had also a narrow escape, one car was thrown completely over him, and when found the car above was but six inches from his chest, with the left eye nearly destroyed. Mr. Macdonald, in charge of the Canadian Mails, badly escaped with his life. The post office car in which he was at the moment of the accident, was forced into the first passenger car, while that car was jammed into the post-office.

The American mail consisted of from fifteen to twenty bags, and the Canadian of about six. Every bag of the latter was found—not a letter saved. The train caught fire from the ashes scattered from the four or five stoves used for heating the cars. Nearly the whole of the passengers baggage was burnt, together with the Express Company's baggage, two tons in weight, so furiously did the fire spread. The Express Company's private chest and documents fortunately escaped uninjured. With respect to the causes which led to the accident many rumours are afloat. It appears that the cattle train was on time in passing Wardsville station, and a telegraph was sent to London that it was on the first place and the Great Western London station the cattle train lost 45 minutes of time, being due at 12.35 and not arriving till 1.25. The night Express for the west was up to time. It is the duty of the Station master to start the train when freight or cattle trains are known to be up in the train. The night Station Master on duty was Mr. Jas. Manby. The blame would appear, therefore, to lie between the station master and the conductors.

From information we have received, there can be no doubt but that Mr. Manby, the station master on night duty is exonerated from blame, and the conduct of the two trains must explain the matter. It appears that there are two ways of working the trains, one "on time," and the other "by telegraph." It is usual for the night trains to be working on time, by which it is arranged that if a train cannot make its time, it must lie over at the nearest siding to allow next train to pass, and not block up the track. Now it seems that the cattle train was due at London at 12.35, but it did not reach the spot on which the accident occurred till 1.25, forty-five minutes behind time.

THE RAILWAY CELEBRATION.—The Grand Trunk Railway Line is to be opened to Toronto at an early day in October. The length of this line is 333 miles, or 12 miles less than the former estimates of this distance.

The completion of this link forms a continuous line to Lowa City, 1,372 miles from Portland as follows:

Portland to Montreal	292 miles.
Montreal to Toronto	333 "
Toronto to Hamilton	28 "
Hamilton to London	76 "
London to Detroit	111 "
Portland to Detroit on Broad Guage line	850 "
Narow Guage lines—
Detroit to Chicago to Mississippi River at Rock Island	182 miles
Rock Island to Iowa City	58 "
	522 miles.

Total length of road from Portland to Iowa City 1,372 miles.

From Toronto (west) the Grand Trunk line is completed to St. Mary's 91 miles, which is to be extended to London, 19 miles, the coming year, making a double line between Toronto and London. From London a single line will be extended to Sarnia, operated for the use of the Great Western and Grand Trunk Companies.

From Toronto (north) a line extends to Lake Huron at Collingwood, on the 5½ feet guage, a distance of the railway to Toronto furnishes a perfect connection between the seaboard at Portland and the far West. We hope to see at the proposed celebration at Portland, a full representation of the business men of Canada and the Western States. —Portland Paper.

The revolutionary faction in Canada are rapidly sinking into insignificance, and not even the thunders of that unscrupulous portion of the press in its interest can further succeed in raising a respectable howl. It is true, in a few backwood villages, where as yet the reaction so rapidly obtaining has not quite pendetrated, a few Grits continue to get together, to "keep the ball rolling," and, without exciting in the least the notice of their neighbors, proceed to pass the resolutions so liberally scattered over the country by the clique at Toronto. But even these little escapades have become fewer and lesser, till we fancy we have heard the last of them. In no place where a general County Meeting has been held, although called by the political gamblers themselves, for their own purposes, and every means of success adopted, has that success attended—"Glorious Old Norfolk" refused to come at the call of the disappointed; Huron—where every attempt was made to keep the meeting from the knowledge of their opponents, the Grits sustained a most disgraceful defeat; Perth—positions in favor of Wm Cayley and the Ministry adopted by overwhelming majorities. But it remained for the County of Brant to inflict the coup-de-grace on the prospects of that unfortunate faction. Saturday last will be long a day to be remembered by the Opposition, as forever blighting their hopes and utterly frustrating their fondest desires. On that, to them, inauspicious day, the golden vision of official plunder ceased to tempt them, and disappeared from their longing eyes. Brant—the constituency of the "blood-wading" Christie, has dealt the blow involving the doom of "a tall game," and puts the Globe and its minions in mourning. With the aid and influence of the said Christie, Wilson of London, the Herald, the Expositor, and an obscure religious sheet of Brantford, pressed in the service, the Grits, in a most ing of Queen Brant, have been defeated by nearly two to one! Is not this a very fair index to the general feeling of the Province.—Conservative Standard.

Arrival of the Persia.

The Persia arrived at her dock at half past nine this A. M., and brings Liverpool dates to the 4th. The steamer City of Baltimore arrived at Liverpool on the 1st, the Cambria on the 4th. The Ericson sailed on the 15th. The subjects of interest are the demonstration against Naples.—The Belgian Boundary and the Right of Possession of the Isle of Serpents.

Advices from Naples the only information from the Brussels Nord which says that the Austrian Ministers at Paris and London have urgent orders from that government to entreat France and England to abstain from any demonstration at least until the return of Martino's Meditorial Mission to Naples further it is said that the Western Powers in consideration of Austrian assent There is considerable letter writing but no facts respecting the Belgrade Boundary.

German papers assert that Great Britain has addressed a second note to Russia on the subject of the Isle of Serpent, more peremptory than the first. The result is unknown.

Great Britain has proposed as a plan of adjustment of the Montenegro difficulties, that Turkey cede an extension of boundary to Montenegro, and that Montenegro acknowledged the sovereignity of the Porte.

TORONTO Oct. 13, 1856.

The supply of produce this morning on the market was extremely limited, owing to the unfavorable appearance of the weather in the morning, and to the fact that to-day was the first business day of the week, when there is always a comparatively small number of farmers in the market.

Wheat to the extent about 5000 bushels changed hands from 6s 6d to 6s 11d per bushels. The demand appeared as active as usual, but competition was hardly as keen. The average for the day would be rather lower perhaps about 6s 1d, or less. Farmers seemed much inclined to accept the current rates, moved off freely.

Barley in good request, and prices are better. We note sales of choice, to considerable extent, at 3ls, and a small lot at 31s 3d. Fancy is held at 32s, and extra 33s a 33s 9d per barrel

Barley is inactive. We note sales of a few lots at 5s per bushel.

Oats 2s 6d by wholesale, and 2s 6d by retail, per bushel.

Peas 3s 6da3s 9d, and very few coming in

Potatoes not in good supply, at 3s 6 a4s per bush.

Pork not so plenty, and selling at $7 a$7½ per 100 lbs.

Beef coming in freely, and selling at $6 a $6½ for prime, and $5½ a $6 for common

In other articles we observe no change.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,
TORONTO, 25th July, 1856.

To Emigrants & Others Seeking Land for Settlement.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out THREE GREAT LINES OF ROAD, now in course of construction, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD.

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River, known as "Ferrall's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," (leading to the Lake Muskako, and Lake Huron, by a branch) at the Township of Brudnell, Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa; and with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskake, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of Upper Canada Proper Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted. To reach the section of Country now for settlement, the Settler will proceed from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles Westward to the Village of Grattan, in which Mount St. Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road!

Commencing in the Township of Angiesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, in Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Madawaska, a distance of 25 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects the Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINTS MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Madawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh, Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of KINGSTON, Canada West, thence to NAPANEE, either by land or Steamboat, and thence North to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINTS MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

The Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 35 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the Township of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, lately called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order.—The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the County of Hastings.—The Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend 10 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without dimduity, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever they require.—Sufficient guidance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Section, which is easily accessible, is by KINGSTON, Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to the VILLAGE OF HALLOWELL, and hence by Land Road to HASTINGS, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government has authorized Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS:

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month after put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years,—build a house (at least 20 by 16 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed; after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from the obligation of residence, (except upon the location of the lot on which they live) provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot. The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be erected is of the description as can be put up in four days by five men. The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the erection is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone-house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, in the sections of Canada West, are capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, and also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

The soil, of course, varies in large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land—some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres—well taken care of and covered from wet—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £4 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settler at the Rates rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon be in a state of comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment.—The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can locate a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at other seasons, obtain liberal remuneration for his labor.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication, and is of use as material for good roads during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from all the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the earth, not only facilitates communication, but is the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber factories, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ratio of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once cleared and cultivated, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, doubles EVERY TEN YEARS in the above lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, which extends from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River—an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

THE OTTAWA COUNTRY.

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and containing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of EIGHT MILLIONS OF PEOPLE. And it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the Shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken, and will be completed in the present year; its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These projected works are alluded to, in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 30
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Introductory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING, strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great naturnl twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the Inheritance of accounts, those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mystories, made such each by learning and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions, designed to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest detail to the learning and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTEND COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in additionthe Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirkythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular and recommended by our best Educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirkythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms which this College occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

Dear, laughing imp o' joy, thy een,
Blue, like an heaven's rain scarce sheen,
Glower in my face wi' rapture keen—
What can I do
But clasp thee in my arms again,
And prie thy mou'?

Thy wee, sweet mou'? O! how I hain
Wad kiss thee o'er and o'er again!
Een when thou'rt cross I scarce can blame,
But tak' thy part;
For, oh! thou tak'st reproof o' mine,
Right sair to heart.

Delighted is my heart, I trow,
To hear thee mimic pussy's mow:
Then thou canst read and whistle too,
Syne dance and sing.
Wee pranks that help to tell us thou

Prevention of Smoke.

In all our Atlantic cities and villages where wood and anthracite coal are used for fuel, no smoke fill the atmosphere, and the houses have that clean and fresh appearance which excite the surprise of persons arriving here from England, where bituminous coal is employed for fuel. In various parts of our country, however, bituminous coal is now used for fuel, and it will yet become the great fuel for manufacturing and domestic purposes, owing to the magnitude of our bituminous coal fields, in comparison with which the anthracite beds are mere specks. Where bituminous coals are used(as in Pittsburgh, and cities and villages on the Ohio river,) the atmosphere is redolent with smoke, and the houses have a sooty, chimney-sweep appearance.—If the smoke from such fuel could be prevented it would be a very desirable thing to all those who use it. Two inquiries, therefore arise in regard to it, namely: what is the cause of the smoke; can it be prevented.

Fairburn, C. E. and M. E., of Manchester, Eng., in his lectures to engineers, presents some very useful information relating to these two questions. He says:—

"Perfect combustion is the prevention of smoke, and whenever smoke makes its appearance we may reasonably infer that there is imperfect combustion, and probably the want of attention to a few simple rules is the cause. From well-known chemical facts, 1 atom of coal gas requires 8 atoms of atmospheric air for its complete combustion; when that quantity is at its maximum, or in excess, there is no smoke; when this condition is not fulfilled, smoke is invariably present. In order to render the residue of the products of combustion transparent or smokeless, a supply of air, amounting to fifteen times that of the gases evolved, must be admitted. Should it exceed that quantity, the effect will not be smoke, but an additional expenditure of fuel to supply the loss of heat which this excess of air would require for absorption, rarefication, &c.—Hence the necessity which exists for power to regulate the admission, if not the exact, at least of an approximate quantity of air.—On the other hand, should the supply be deficient in quantity (which is often the case) a dense volume of smoke is then visible, accompanied with all the defects annoyances of imperfect combustion.

The variable changes which accompany perfect and imperfect combustion are not only visible, but may be proved by experiment. Let any one apply his hand to the tube of an Argand gas-burner, and he will find that the instant the aperture is partially closed, the flame immediately becomes elongated, and instead of a clear brilliant light, a dull red flame with a dark volume of smoke, is the result. This shows the effect of a diminished supply of air; and the same may be applied to a steam engine furnace when imperfectly supplied with oxygen, when the gasses pass off in opake volumes unconsumed and where a considerable portion of heat is entirely lost from that cause. It has been stated that we cannot have fire without smoke, but this is not the case in steam boilers, as a well constructed furnace, properly managed, furnishes many examples where bituminous coal is consumed in large quantities, and with little, if any appearance of smoke. In attempting the total suppression of this nuisance two important considerations require to be attended to as essential, the first of which is, an abundance of boiler space, and the second, a sufficient supply of air."

The reason why wood emits but little smoke is that it contains within itself a great amount of oxygen, to produce perfect combustion. The reason why anthracite coal emits no smoke is that it contains no hydrogen, like bituminous coal; it is mostly composed of carbon, which is not volatile and only becomes so when it unites with its combining proportions (C. O. 2) of oxygen in perfect combustion, producing carbonic acid gas. Bituminous coal is a hydro-carbon, that is, it contains hydrogen, a very volatile gas, which at a comparatively moderate heat escapes, and lifts up some of the carbon with it, thus producding carbonic oxyd (smoke.) The addition of more oxygen to it at a high heat will produce perfect combustion, prevent smoke, and increase the quantity of heat. The prevention of smoke, therefore, not only involves the removal of a disagreeable evil, but the saving of fuel also.—Scientific American.

An Alabama Justice.

When the Creek Indians inhabited Alabama, there were several magistrates appointed who had extensive jurisdiction.—Their power, and the extent of territory over which they spread, made these magistrates in power equal to a petty Governor. One of these magistrates was a well known "character," who resided in "Turkey Town," an Indian village on the Coosa river. He had a "marshal" who was known in his tribe as "Moneycries. The magistrate was remarkable for his contempt of legal opinions and judicial forms. "Equity" was his hobby; and when his notions of right and justice came in contact with "law" the latter was forced to give way. He thought the customs of the Indians more "equitable" in many cases than the laws of Congress, and he never failed in such cases to set aside the latter. "Moneycries" co-operated heartily with "the court"—and by their combined efforts they managed to deal out justice with certainty, but sometimes with real Indian severity.

The following scene once ocurred in court.

Magistrate—This court is held to try a case in which "Little Chubby," a Creek Indian, is defendant, and Tom Dale, a grocery keeper, is plaintiff. Dale claims $20 from Little Chubby, and Chubby says he paid it in beaver skins. "Gentlemen," continued the magistrate, addressing the bystanders, "Injins ain't likely to lie when they owe white men; but white men will lie when they trade with the Injins. This is the experience of my court. Proceed, gentlemen, with this case."

The attorney for Tom Dale proceeded to make out his case, and he swore that his debt was just, true and unpaid." He then introduced a witness to prove that Little Chubby had caught only ten beavers in the last month—and that he had sold them to deponent. The Indian had no witness, and the case was thus fully made out.

The attorney remarked, addressing "the court," "May it please your honor, I claim a judgement for my client. There is no defence except the averment of Chubby, and this the court can't regard."

"Gentlemen," said the magistrate, "I ain't satisfied, and I ain't going to allow this Injin to be swindled." He then addressed Moneycries:

"Mr. Marshal, hand me that book. I'll take a swar in this case myself," and suiting the action to the word, he kissed the book, and addressing Moneycries, remarked—"Mr. Marshal, summon you this court, and will take a swar in this case. May it please the court," said he, "there's cheaten around this bard, I intend to expose it to the court. I'd rather take an Injin's word than a whiskey seller's oath, any time. But court can't decide in favor of an Indian without a swar in his behalf, and that swar I am now, Mr. Marshal, going to take."

He then proceeded to state that Little Chubby had come to his house, and he offered to buy from him ten beaver skins.—Chubby declined selling them, as he had promised them to Mr. Dale, to pay a debt of twenty dollars due him. He saw Chubby go into Dale's and leave the skins, and when he came out Chubby told him he had paid his debt. When he had concluded, he resumed his seat.

Dale's attorney protested against his "taking a swar in his case," but he was interrupted by the magistrate, who informed him that this was his mode of dispensing equity.

Lawyer—May it please the court, I will take an appeal in this case.

Magistrate—The court is satisfied that the evidence is in favor of Little Chubby, and no appeal will be allowed.

Attorney—May it please the court, I consider this proceeding a ——— farce.

Magistrate—The court considers this a case of contempt, and will fine Mr. ——— $20 for swearing in court.

Attorney—Then our court may go to perdition, if your honor pleases.

Magistrate—Mr. Marshal will take Mr. M——— into custody till he pays $20; and whenever he pays it, the marshal will summon a posse of Injins, and tie him up, there upon inflict upon him twenty stripes, according to Injin custom, and then inform him that it will improve his health to get out of the reach of my court in twenty-four hours.

Attorney—May it please the court, I will give my note for the fine, if the court will agree to it.

Magistrate—The court won't be hard, provided the character of the court is here after respected.

Speed of Railways.

Dr. Lardner adopts some ingenious arguments, or rather, illustrations, to show the velocity with which Express trains move in England. The Great Western Express to Exeter runs at the rate of 43 miles an hour, including stoppages, or 53 miles, not including stoppages. To attain this rate, a speed of 60 miles an hour is adapted midway between some of the stations, and in certain experimental trips, 70 miles an hour have been reached. A speed of 70 miles an hour is equivalent to 35 yards per second—35 yards between the beats of a common clock. All objects near the eye of a passenger travelling at this rate will pass by in the 36th part of a second; and if 35 stakes were erected at the side of the road a yard asunder, they would not be distinguished one from another if painted red, they would appear collectively as a continuous flash of red color. If two trains with this speed passed each other the relative velocity would be 70 yards per second, and if the train was 70 yards long, it would flash by in a single second. Supposing the locomotive which draws a train to have driving-wheels 7 feet in diameter these wheels will revolve five times in a second. The piston moves along ten times in a second, but as there are two cylinders which act alternately, there are two puffs, or escapes, of steam in a second. The locomotive can be heard to "cough" when moving slowly, the cough being being occasioned by the abrupt admission of waste steam up the chimney, but 20 coughs per second cannot be separated by the ear, their individuality becoming lost. Such a locomotive speed is equal to nearly one-fourth of that of a cannon ball, and the momentum of the whole train, moving at such a speed, would be nearly equivalent to the aggregate force of a number of cannon balls equal to one-fourth the weight of the train. That a smash should follow a collision is no object for marvel, if a train, moving at such speed, or anything like such speep, should meet with any obstacle to its progress.—Dodd's Curiosities of Industry.

A BEARD FIFTY YEARS OLD.—An eccentric character at Hanover, N. H., named Increase Kimball, died on the 16th inst., at the age of 80. He had allowed his beard to grow for half a century in consequence of a religious vow, and was generally considered an amiable and harmless lunatic. In 1804, he invented the first machine for cutting wrought nails, for which he obtained a patent; but he refused to sell the right, and his machine was superseded by others. The graduates of Dartmouth College for the last half century well remember "the Jew."

HERBERT'S RECEPTION.—Herbert the murderer of Keating who was kept in his seat in Congress by the votes of the Filmore Know-Nothings and Bogus Democracy has reached his home in California, and met a freezing reception. The day after his arrival a committee of gentlemen waited upon him, and presented to him the petitions which had been numerously signed, asking him never to make this State his residence again. He accepted the documents, and promised to give them a respectful consideration.—Detroit Tribune.

The great scheme of the Honduras Railroad company, with a capital of 10,000,000 dollars, under a British charter, is about to be brought out under the most favorable auspices. The directors are divided between England and the United States, and some of the influential firms give countenance to the project, and appear in the directory as agents to procure subscriptions. The difference of the distances between New York and San Francisco, as compared with the Panama route, is 1,103 miles, and the difference from Liverpool to San Francisco, touching at Kingston, Jamaica, is 841 miles. It is estimated that at the present rate of speed by steam and rail, the time between New York and San Francisco can be accomplished in thirteen days four hours, and that steamers can be built, and with increased railway speed, the time can be reduced to eleven days six sixteen hours. The accomplishment of this work will bring San Francisco within speaking distance of New York.

The following instance of dueling on a large scale we copy from the New York Times:—General Lane of Kansas has sent a challenge of a rather remarkable character to the Governor of Missouri, to meet him in a single combat, with a hundred followers on each side, and settle the Kansas difficulties by a free fight, and so put an end once for all to the matter; the question of Slavery or Freedom for the new State to be determined by the issue of the combat.

A young lawyer who had long paid his court to a young lady, without much advancing his suit, accused her of being "insensible to the power of love." "I does not follow," she archly replied, "that I am so, because I am not sworn to the power of an Attorney." "Forgive me!" cried the suitor, "but you should remember that all the votaries of Cupid are solicitors."

General D'Orgoul, says the Semaphore of Marseilles, ambassador of the King of the Burmans, has just arrived. The general has been at Alexandria for the last two months, waiting for information from Paris as to whether he would be received. It appears that the last packet from Marseilles brought the requisite information, and that an aid de camp of the Emperor would receive the Burmese mission at Marseilles.

M. Meyerbeer is now in Paris, waiting, it is said, the result of the debut of Madame Borghi-Mamo, in "Le Prophete," ere he determines whether to give to the great musical theatre "L'Africaine,"—or failing this, this new comic opera, without chorus, and with only three vocalists, which he has completed, to the Opera Comique. Of any intention on his part to essay an oratorio we hear no longer a whisper.

A Yankee being an inveterate hater of every thing British, is living in a neighboring city with a Colonist's family. He takes every opportunity to have a slap at Brother Bull, and the Colonist does what he can to defend the venerable gentleman.

"You are arguing," said the Colonist, against your ancestors.

"No I'm not."

"Who was your father?"

"A Yankee."

"Who were your forefathers?"

"Yankees."

"Who were Adam and Eve?"

"Yankees, by thunder?"

FRENCH WOMEN.—The French woman's characteristics are generally that she is unexceptionably shod; that she wears inimitable gloves; that she has a toilette of two colors only; with a distracting way of wearing a shawl; that her manners are bewitching, full of small graces and delicately shaped coquetries, but never wanting in the nicest appreciation of external proprieties, to which her flirtations are always subordinate; that she has a marvellous faculty of walking clean through the dirty streets of Paris, and as marvellous a knack of holding up her skirts with one hand over her left hip; that she has a supernatural preservation of youth, a bewildering habit of mistaking her friend's husband for her own.

A French woman cleans her gloves, light hoops, ribbon, silks and laces, at the cost of a few cents, and with surprising success.—They keep fresh in any imaginable but the closest, and are worth to do so. A French woman never buys a lining for a new gown; she cuts up her old gowns and worn out petticoats instead. She unpicks and stitches up again, turns, irons, and renews, until every inch of the stuff has served, half-a-dozen times over, and there is not an unwoven thread in the whole garment. A French woman is always noticeable for her clean linen. Napkins at breakfast, napkins at dinner, and fresh table cloths or upper napkins constantly renewed.

SMILES AND FROWNS.—Which will you do—smile, and make your household happy, or be crabbed, and make all those young ones gloomy, and the elder ones miserable? The amount of happiness you can produce is incalculable, if you show a smiling face, a kind heart and speak pleasant words. Wear a pleasant countenance; let joy beam in your eyes, and let a glow on your forehead. There is no joy like that which springs from a kind act or a pleasant deed; and you will feel it at night when you rest, in the morning when you rise, and through the day when about your businesss.—Home Journal.

The Moniteur publishes the return of the principal merchandize importer into France, together with the Customs' duties levied thereon during the seven months of 1856, ending on the 1st instant, and which amounted to 100,522,391f. Compared with those of the corresponding period of 1855, there is a diminution of 20,008, 089f. The tax on salt produced in the same period 18,022,-257f.

ELECTRIC CANNON.—An electric cannon has been invented—fired without a touch-hole, by means of electricity. The conducting and non-conducting wires are introduced into the cannon during its manufacture, and cut off close to the surface; so that, in the event of the gun falling into the hands of the enemy, they would fail to discover, at least for some time, how the cannon was discharged.

He that flings off a peevish temper on things around him, will overlay with it the most blessed sunshine that ever fell on terrestrial objects, and make them reflect the hues of his own heart; whereas he whose soul sings out itself the sunshine of a benevolent disposition, will make it gild the darkest places with a heavenly light.

GENTILITY.—Gentility is neither in birth wealth, manner, or fashion—but in the mind. A high sense of honor, a determination never to take a mean advantage of another, an adherence to truth, delicacy and politeness towards those with whom we have dealings, are its essential characteristics.

A CURIOUS FACT.—It is an inexplicable fact that men buried in an avalanche of snow, hear distictly every word uttered by those who are seeking for them, while their most strenuous shouts fail to penetrate even a few feet of the snow.

LOVE FOR TREES.—We love trees. They seem like things of life. They stand like sentinels while we sleep, and whisper to us through the day. It seems as though they were kindred, and we hold converse with them as we watch their swaying branches through the long summer days.

King Leopold and the Duke of Brabant attended the International Free Trade Congress at Brussels on the 17th of Sept.

New South Wales.

THE NEW GOLD FIELD.

By the packet ship Sardinian we have advices from Sydney of the 23rd of June, date of 14 days later than that previously to hand. The chief intelligence from New South Wales is that of the discovery, in the first week in June, of a New gold field in the Wellington district which promises to become one of great importance. The Sydney Morning Herald states that for some months previously parties had been digging on Stoney Creek, and the Sydney Gully there paid very well, as also did the surfacing in several places; but owing to the small population the place never got properly inspected, a hole was put down here and there, and this place pronounced to be good." About fifty people were on the Creek when the new diggings were struck; by June 10 the population was over 300 people were arriving from all directions daily, and a great deal of gold was being got. The locality of the new "rush" is the head of the Stoneyard Creek, about twenty six miles from the old Muckawa Diggings, and twenty five miles from Wellington. In the first hole bottomed was found a nugget weighing eight ounces, and several ounces of smaller gold; the next hole down got nine ounces off the bottom, about four feet square (the sinking is about five or six feet): in the latter claim in a day or two afterwards was found a most magnificent specimen, weighing 25 ounces, and containing, at the very lowest, 18 ounces of pure gold. Nuggets are found in all directions up and down the principal gully, varying from a pennyweight to 13 ounces; and so far as the gully has been opened, a distance of over a mile, five holes in every seven will pay for working. Besides the chief diggings, several other gullies have been tried and very handsome prospects obtained. Water will be in abundance for the next few months, and there is every prospect of a very extensive and rich field for the enterprise of the miner.

Death of Mr. Christie, late M. P. P.

We regret to learn the very sudden death of Robert Christie, Esq., for many years the representative of Gaspe in the House of Assembly, prior to, and in the Legislative Assembly, since the Union. He was in excellent health yesterday morning, when the writer saw and conversed with him in Quebec, and shortly before one o'clock, P. M., returning from a walk, he died on entering his house.

Mr. Christie is well known for his literary productions, as well as for his Parliamentary career. Most of our readers will recollect the circumstances of his being expelled from the House of Assembly in 1829, on the ground of his having misadvised the Governor to dismiss certain Magistrates from the commission of the peace, for their political opinions and votes in the Assembly. He was again returned by his constituents, and again expelled, and continued deprived of a seat until the Union, after which he was again elected by the same constituency and remained a member until the General Election of 1854.

Mr. Christie was at various times a contributor by his pen to the Quebec Gazette, when conducted by the late hon. J. Heilson, and subsequently to the Quebec Mercury. His writings were vigorous, and showed an intimate acquaintance with the political history of the country. He was rather a violent and crotchetty politician, and his hot temper generally impaired his political utility.

His principal literary labor is his History of Canada; rather valuable as a compilation, but otherwise not deserving the name of history, nor even entitled to the credit of being a connected and clear narrative of events.

Mr. Christie must have been nearly 70 years of age, but his florid and healthy appearance betokened a considerably length ened period of existence.—Montreal Argus 14th.

Clergy Reserve Fund.

The effect of the commutation clause of the Clergy Reserves Act is beginning to be felt, in the shape of a pecuniary benefit to each municipality. Had the views of the Clear Grits prevailed, there would not have been a single penny coming to the municipalities for a generation yet to come. The following is the circular addressed by the Receiver General to the heads of the municipalities:

RECEIVER GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Toronto, 1st October, 1856.

SIR,—I have the honor to inform you, that in accordance with the provisions of the 19th Vic. 43rd chapter, and the Act of the Upper Canada Municipalities Fund for the year 1855 being the monies arising from the Clergy Reserves. Your municipality is entitled to receive ——cy, which sum will be paid to the Treasurer of your Municipality, or to such person as he may appoint as his Attorney to receive the same. In the event of your Treasurer not attending at the office in person, I enclose blank Powers of Attorney, to be signed in duplicate. The Powers must be executed as stated in the margin.

If the Treasurer apply in person, he must produce your certificate of the Deputy Reeve's, as to the fact of his being the Treasurer. I enclose a form for that purpose. You will please also inform the Treasurer, that if he act by attorney, he will so advise this department by mail, as the money will not be paid until the receipt of such advice. These precautions are obviously necessary to ensure regularity, and protect the Municipality against fraud.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
JOS. C. MORRISON.
Receiver General.

The Dean Richmond.

Mr. W. Kernaghan, of Chicago, who went out with the Dean Richmond to Liverpool, enclosed to the Times the logbook of the voyage, thinking it might be useful to British Shipowners and Shipmasters. Appended to it we find the following interesting particulars. It already appeared in most of the provincial papers that the Dean Richmond sailed from Chicago the 17th August last and entered the Mersey on the 17th September:

"Dean Richmond,—Keel, 125; over, 145; beam, 26 feet 2 inches; hold, 11 feet 9 inches; tons, 387; draught, empty, 5 feet; 150 tons, 7 feet; 350, 9½ feet; 500, 10 feet; mainmast, 90 feet; diameter, 25 inches; tops, 60 feet; diameter, 13 inches. THE OCEAN TELEGRAPH—RETURN OF THE 'ARTIC FROM HER SOUNDING EXPEDITION.

The United States steamer Artic, which, it will be remembered, left the Brooklyn Navy Yard on the 18th of July last, to make soundings across the ocean, from Newfoundland to Valencia Bay, on the western coast of Ireland, with a view to laying an Oceanic Submarine Telegraph, connecting those points, returned from her expedition on Monday. She comes back having completed her undertaking in a manner eminently satisfactory. The best nautical apparatus in use for the purpose was brought into requisition and the fact fully established that there was no physical obstacle to the laying of a submarine cable to connect the American and European Continents. The existence of a plateau along the line sounded was learned by Capt. Berryman from two soundings, previously taken by himself across the ocean from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Valencia Harbour, Ireland. In the recent sounding expedition specimens of the bottom of the ocean have been taken up where each sounding was made, through quills attached to the bottom of the sounding instrument. The highest depth found was 2,070 fathoms. In the deeper parts the bottom was found to be a very fine mud of greyish colour, and so soft that the instruments used for sounding not unfrequently sank several feet in the mud. In nearing the shores on each side a change to a green ooze was observed in the mud. No rock or any other substances were encountered, endangering in the slightest the laying of a submarine telegraph wire.

The whole sounding has been completed in much less time than was anticipated, and without the occurrence of a material accident to record the work. Capt Berryman will at once make to the Department at Washington an extended report giving the results of the soundings not only as bearing upon the practicability of laying down a telegraph wire, but imparting all facts of interest learned in reference to the mutations of the sea currents prevailing here, and the different barometrial and various physical phenomena evidenced.

No doubts remain now but that the Newfoundland, Newport and London Telegraph Company will shortly enter upon laying a submarine telegraph coil, to connect Europe and America.—N. Y. Times, 16th.

THE MCKENZIE HOMESTEAD.—Poor little Mac,—after years of toiling drudgery, and now in his old age, he for the first time makes the discovery that he has spent his time, talent and treasure on a worthless and thankless party. In the Message he has published his doleful plaint, and certainly, if all he says is true, he is much aloused man. Nevertheless, the base ingratitude of his friends of the present day, and the mean treatment he has just experienced in the homestead matter, exceeds in injury the whole evils of his chequered life. Much of his past sufferings have been the result of his own folly. His estate and consequent pecuniary loss was brought about solely by his own rashness; but as we have reason to believe, the offer to him by his party of a home in his old age, as a token of gratitude by a party for long services, was not of his seeking, but spontaneously offered by the kind hearted portion of the party spoke out for their liberality, the utter failure of that party to fulfil that promise,—may even the apathy with which they now look upon his embarrassments, is a cool, keen, cutting and deliberate insult—too much, indeed, to be borne. We all remember with what enthusiasm the party spoke out for the endorsement that "Homestead," and with what powerful energy the party rallied into public meetings and formed committees. Foremost in this was Haldimand County, but yet not one cent from it ever reached poor Mac. Committees were formed, much printing (at McKenzie's expense) was done. Months passed away, and the whole affair ceased to be talked about; and when all was over, the total amount received by the Treasurer was found to be Ten pounds! Not enough to pay for the printing!! And so ends the ridiculous farce of the homestead.

Of that £10 ten dollars was given by a Ministerial Member of Parliament, and the balance from other parties. It is probable that more dastardly conduct has never been practised towards any long-tried partizan by his party that McKenzie has experienced at the hands of the Clear Grits of the present day. He says—and we fully believe it—that were his party sufficiently honest to pay him his just due—that which they owe him for subscriptions to his paper in arrears, he would not require a homestead to-day. Let his people take the hint, and learn to be just before they make generous offers.

New Appointments and Promotions in the Army.

The deaths of the General officers which have just taken place will involve several new appointments and a large amount of promotions in the army. By the decease of Sir Colin Halkett, the Governorship of Chelsea Hospital and the Colonelcy of the 45th regiment and by that of Lord Hardinge the colonelcy of the 57th regiment, are rendered vacant. Coupled with the recent deaths of Lieut.-Gen. Gordon and Gen. Sir H. G. Campbell, the decease of Sir Colin Halkett also creates a vacancy on the fixed establishment of general officers, to which Colonel William Booth, half-pay 42st Regiment, the senior on the list, an officer who has served in the Nepaulese and Burmese wars, will succeed: Lieut-Col Raymond, now in command of the depot battalion at Winchester, will become Colonel, and Major Bradshawe, on the staff in Australia, lieut-colonel. These deaths will also cause the promotion of Lieut-Gen. Aylmer to be general, and major-general Cochrane to be lieut-general, by which the latter officer will have to resign the command of the Dublin district. The Duke of Cambridge will also, probably, have an opportunity of placing three officers on the list of those receiving rewards for distinguished services in place of Sir Henry Somerset, who has been appointed to the colonelcy of the 25th regiment, vice Sir H. F. Campbell; and of the two next names to be appointed to the 45th and 57th regiments. It is, we believe, usual to promote the Lieutenant-General of Chelsea Hospital to the Governorship when an opportunity arises, and the present lieutenant governor, Sir Edward Blakeney, will there fore, be most likely to have the appointment. The next name among the general officers will, along with those of Lord Hardinge and Major-General James Jones [which occurred on Monday], make Colonel Greaves, later deputy-quarter-master-General in Ireland, a major general.

Majority for Prince, 511.

Col. John Prince was then declared duly elected by a majority of 511 votes over James Dougall, Esquire, and 512 over A. Rankin, Esquire.

The HON. JOHN PRINCE then rose amidst the cheers of the assembly., and stated to the Electors that he felt this the proudest day of his life; that he had not experienced so much pleasure as he now felt in the whole sixty years of his existence. We did not go about the streets trumpeting our success. He said that it became his duty to return his sincere thanks to the Electors who had gained the day. He could not expect that Kent would support him, where he was but little known, but to Essex he looked for it, and they came out nobly to support him. He had been opposed by the reigning powers of the day and by men in office, but they had failed, and he was elected by the intelligence of the people, and all the power and corruption which was brought to bear against him, and by which his enemies sought to destroy him, only served, by their influence to illuminate his cause. But the battle is won, and he had little more to say and now that the contest was over he hoped all would be forgotten and all animosity would cease. He was elected by a large majority, and his course would be to watch over the interests of the public at large, and to do everything in his power for the benefit of these two counties. As long as we preserved freedom of action, and proved true to our Sovereign and the Empire to which we have the honor to belong, we cannot but prosper. Nothing will be more gratifying than to have an opportunity of holding communication with his constituents, for whom he would be happy to do all in his power. He again thanked the electors for the honor they had done him.

MR. DOUGALL then rose and stated, that he did not intend to inflict upon them a long speech, but would address himself more particularly to the Electors of Kent. The men of Kent had acted conscientiously, and that none of his party had used other than legitimate means to obtain his election. The reason why Essex did not go for him was that most of the electors of the Southern Townships were pledged to the other Candidates before he came out, and he could not expect the support of the Roman Catholics who opposed him upon the question of the schools; this accounts for his want of support in Essex. He returned thanks to those Electors who had supported him.

MR. RANKIN said that he came forward as another of the defeated candidates. The race has been won and the old Colonel is the winning horse. He felt no jealousy whatever against the successful candidate, but would have been better pleased had he (Rankin) been elected. Did not regret the stand he had taken in this election. He had listened with pleasure to the speech of the winning candidate, and was now prepared to enter into a new struggle, and that is the struggle to see who can render the greatest possible good to the people; every effort would be used by him to advance the interests of this his native county.

Three enthusiastic cheers were then given for the Queen, and the assembly retired with the greatest good order.

THE ELECTION.

The election is over, and the attempt to prove that Col. Prince had lost his former popularity in this county has resulted, as we all along predicted it would, in its utter discomfiture. the Colonel has been elected by a majority of 511, which majority is mainly made up by his old county, and, as is admitted on all hands, would have been doubled had Mr. Dougall kept out of the field. And it must be gratifying to our representative in the Council, to find that even his retirement and long absence from public life could not efface from the minds of his constituents the remembrance of his long and faithful services.

But our gratification at the result of this struggle must not lull us into forgetfulness of the lessons which its progress has taught us. We have found that there are those who, while professing sincere regard for the sanctity of private life, have yet dared to profane it by introducing into public discussion, that no action, personal or political shall be known, without being dragged into the light of day and blazoned forth for the benefit (or otherwise) of the people, to suit the purposes of a professedly purely political opponent.

Now this is a new element in Canadian electioneering, and one which, as a journalist, we desire to see exposed in all its infamy to the public gaze. Long since, through the pages of Martin Chuzzlewit, have we learned to detest the authors of such iniquity, in Dickens' immortal portrait of the editors of the "New York Stabber;" and long since did we learn to hold in detestation the principle, or rather want of principle, which can tolerate such a course. Let the County of Essex take warning. As long as such men as Mr. Rankin are the representatives of its opinions, so long will those opinions be deemed by the right-minded of this country to be either the opinions of the Col. Divers and Hannibal Chollops of the Great Republic, pourtrayed by Dickens, (in a word, of the bullies and loafers of the United States,) than of a free, independent and enlightened people, who exercise their elective rights from a consciousness of their importance, and not from a desire of individual benefit.

☞ The Grand Trunk Railway is completed from Montreal to Toronto. The first train arrived through from the former place on Monday last.

THE CANADA DIRECTORY FOR 1857.—We have received the prospectus of a new Directory about to be published by Mr. John Lovell, Montreal: and from the specimen pages furnished with it, we are inclined to believe that it will be a work of the very greatest benefit to the public, containing, as it will, a short description of every City and Town, and the principal Villages in the Canadas, in which mention will be made of the chief characteristics, population, &c., of the places, and of all the Railways passing by or through them. The want of a work of this kind has been much felt, and Mr. Lovell in supplying this want deserves great credit. Subscription Twenty-five Shillings.

☞ The "Canadian Agriculturist" is again upon our table, and contains as usual a number of excellent articles, which are worthy of being read by every agriculturist in the country.

Archdiaconal Visitation.

The Venerable Archdeacon of York recently held his visitation in St. John's Church, Sandwich. His charge contained a feeling allusion to the probability of this being his last official visit, in consequence of the approaching division of the Diocese of Toronto. In the course of the evening the clergy and churchwardens, assembled at the Rectory, presented the following address, to which the Archdeacon made a suitable reply, the substance of which is added:

ADDRESS.

Rev. and dear Sir,

As this may possibly be the last occasion on which we shall be summoned to meet you in your official capacity, we cannot separate without conveying to you the expression of our heartfelt gratitude, not only for the valuable counsel and instruction which on this, as on former similar occasion, you have afforded to us, but also for the courtesy and kindness which you, in common with all the clergy and laity of your archdeaconry, have uniformly experienced at your hands.

While, however, we thus take leave of you as the Archdeacon of York, we are not without the hope that, upon the division of the diocese, you will be called upon to fill a higher and more responsible office in Christ's Church,—one to which your distinguished services and long experience entitle you no less than for which, we are persuaded, you are eminently qualified.

We have the honour to be,
Reverend and dear Sir,
Your faithful servants
And brothers in Christ.

REPLY.

I could wish, my reverend brethren and gentlemen, that opportunity had been afforded me of preparing an answer letter worthy than any I can now offer, of the kind Address you have just presented to me. But perhaps my genuine feelings of thankfulness and regard will be best spoken without the formality of a written reply.

I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to fulfil the duties of the office I have the honour of holding in the Church of God; and to make it as practically useful as possible, I have on several occasions visited every parish, and I believe every missionary station, within this Archdeaconry, besides frequently meeting my brethren of the clergy and laity on occasions like the present.

If our official connexion, from the probable duration of this portion of the diocese into a distinct see at no distant period, should soon be severed, we shall still be one in brotherhood and affection, and not, I trust, without many opportunities of "taking sweet counsel together" for the welfare of the Church. The performance of my duties will have been rendered pleasant by the courtesy and kindness I have in every quarter, received; and I shall ever entertain a happy recollection of our fraternal intercourse and your warm hospitalities.

You are kind enough to express a wish for my further advancement in the Church; and in doing so, you are more partial judges of my qualifications than I can allow myself to be. Though I should, in the humbler position I now occupy, perhaps best secure my own individual comfort and happiness, and certainly best meet my own estimate of qualification, I am not, as a minister of God's Church, at my own disposal but must endeavour with faithfulness to discharge whatever duty may in His Providence be allotted to me.

I have again to thank you for your kindness; to offer you every affectionate good wish; and to pray that we may each of us be found to labour diligently and successfully for God's glory, the extension of His kingdom, and the good of souls.

LETTER.

Sandwich, 18th Oct.

EDWIN LARWILL Esq. M. P. P.
My Dear Sir

To me as Chairman of Col. Prince's Committee, has been deputed the very agreeable task of tendering you the sincere and hearty thanks of Col. Prince's friends throughout this county; for the very valuable services rendered by you in the Colonel's behalf, in the political contest which has just ended, and particularly for the exceedingly able, manly and independent letter addressed by you to the Electors of Kent. To that letter and your unceasing exertions in the Colonel's behalf, we are satisfied that we are indebted for the large number of votes polled by Col Prince in Kent, and believing, in fact, knowing such to be the case, Col. Prince's friends here considered it but an act of courtesy due to yourself to come forward and acknowledge those services which are the more highly prized by Col. Prince and his friends, because they are well aware that they were the voluntary offering of an honorable, upright and independant man. Permit me therefore to again thank you on behalf of the County of Essex, and to express a sincere wish that you may long live to occupy the proud position of M. P. for Kent,

Believe me to remain,
My dear Sir
very sincerely yours,
THOS. WOODBRIDGE,
Chairman.

Chatham, Oct, 21st 1856.

To THOS. WOODBRIDGE, Esq.
Sir:

I have received your communication as Chairman of Col. Prince's Election Committee, thanking me for the part I have taken in the recent contest.

Assure yourself and friends that I simply discharged what I thought to be my duty.

I appreciate the compliment paid to me, and will endeavour to deserve, by upright conduct, the confidence of the men of Essex.

Very Respectfully yours,
EDWIN LARWILL.

To the Electors of the Counties of Essex and Kent. Western Division.

GENTLEMEN,

I have been this day lawfully DECLARED the successful candidate in the late contest, and you have conferred upon me the highest honour in your power to bestow—a seat in the Legislative Council of this Province. For your noble support of me during the severe struggle just ended, I beg you to accept my best and warmest thanks; and I repeat the assurance I have so often given, that I will serve you faithfully, zealously, and honestly; and my chief object shall ever be to promote the welfare and prosperity of this my adopted country, according to the best of my judgment ability and power.

Believe me to remain,
Gentlemen,
your obliged and faithful
Friend and Servant
JOHN PRINCE.

GREAT PEDESTRIAN FEAT.—Paddy Hoofs the celebrated pedestrian, but better known at Lord's, and the various commons in the neighborhood of London, as the "Ammer with the whiskers," is still carrying on his Herculean feat of walking round a lady in full dress 100 times in 100 consecutive days. He is now in his second week, and looks as fresh as when he first started. There seems to be a considerable amount that Paddy will never be able to complete his arduous undertaking. What makes it all the more difficult is that a fresh lady is substituted every day. It has been observed that the dresses of these various ladies, instead of decreasing, are actually getting bigger almost every week. What the size, therefore, will be before the 90th, much less the 100th day, be completed, the most elastic imagination snaps, like an overstretched piece of India rubber, in its vain efforts to comprehend. It is also feared that there will be no open space large enough in the vicinity of the metropolis to admit of the experiment, as soon as it has expanded to its fullest dimensions, being fairly tried. In the meantime, however, Paddy displays uncommon pluck. His unfailing good humor and cheerfulness under his trying labors, such as would exhaust the oldest and worst paid postman of St. Martin's-le-Grand, win smiles of approval even from his fairest ramparts. We wish Paddy well to follow out his task, and shall from week to week make a point, or somepoints rather, of recording the onward march of his iron tipped blushers and undaunted perseverance.—Punch.

OBITUARY.—The Charleston Mercury is in deep mourning on account of the death of Wm. Elder Esq., one of the Editors of that paper. The deceased, says the Mercury fell " at the third fire, in a duel with Edward Magrath, Esq., in consequence of the peremptory challenge of the latter for the publication of alleged offensive matter in this paper, the author of which was not called to the communication complained of, had reference to the candidacy for Congress of Hon. A. G. Magrath. It is not now that we are called upon to pursue the merits of the question involved. In the presence of death,—the death of one who has been intimately associated with us for years, and who breathed as true a heart as ever beat on the soil of Carolina,—we have our hearts in sorrow and in suffering, and pass by all considerations of partly conflict, in the sense that we have a friend, true and tried, and a brother in the hard duties that make up our connection with the public life. It will not be easy to find a brave and more self-sacrificing spirit—it will not often that the community will be called upon to mourn over the extinction of a more brilliant and generous intellect."—Ex.

DISTRESSING OCCURENCE.—Yesterday afternoon, a young man named DEAN, had been indulging in liquor, to what extent we have not learned, but sufficiently so to make him feel in humor to tease. He had been teasing some of his fellow-workmen when Mr GRUNDY came into the shop, and he immediately commenced upon him, when finding he was annoying Grundy, he seemed to relish the fun a little more. Grundy made to go out of the shop, and he was passing, Dean gave him a shove, still in good nature, whereupon Grundy turns round, seizes a stick, and strikes him a blow across the head, splitting the skull to the corner of the eye, and then striking him while down, a blow across the back and another across the shoulder. Dean is in a very precarious condition.

Since the above was in type we have learned from Dr. Wilson, who was called in to attend to the case, that the wound was of a most dangerous character, and presented the appearance of a piece of ice, when a person's head had been pressed upon it. The Dr., assisted by Dr. Lord, commenced to operate by trepanning the skull. The Dr. says that considerable of the brain was lost by oozing out at the wound, rendering it altogether very doubtful whether or not the patient recover.—St. Mary's Journal.

GREAT SUSPENSION BRIDGE.—Surveys and estimates are now being made for the construction of an immense suspension bridge across the Mississippi at St. Louis.—We understand that J. W. Bissell, of St. Johns, has received the appointment of engineer to superintend the work. This bridge will be over a mile in length, and 54 feet above high water mark, so that all steamers can pass under. The greatest distance between the towers will be 1800 feet. The bottom of some of the towers will be 60 feet below the surface of low water. The cost of the bridge will not fall much short of two millions of dollars. It is not designed for a railroad bridge, although several railroad companies are largely interested in the enterprise. The work will be a splendid one, and worthy of the enterprising people who have undertaken to accomplish it.

COOKING WITHOUT FIRE.—A patent has been recently granted to Mr. Aitro, of Burybampkin, N. Y., for a novel contrivance for cooking without fire. The required caloric is generated by the employment of lime and water. Between these two substances there is a strong chemical affinity, and when they are brought in contact, in the proper proportions, they unite with such rapidity and energy as to develop an intense heat.—No decomposition takes place, and therefore no gas escapes; thus heat is produced without combustion. The inventor turns this phenomenon into a highly useful purpose in the present improvement. During an experiment made in our office the other day with one of these contrivances, we cooked a slice of ham; stewed a couple of apples, boiled some other apples, and boiled a quantity of water, all at once, at a consumption of perhaps a quarter of a cent's worth of lime. The inventor makes several different sizes; the largest does not exceed a lady's bandbox Among them is a dinner-pail pattern, so arranged that the mechanic when noon time arrives, has only to pour a half a pint of water in the pail in order to cook a warm dinner. The lime and edibles are, of course, arranged at home.—Farm Journal.

The Military Excursion that was expected to take place on Queenston Heights on Monday, was postponed in consequence of the unfinished state of the Monument and the absence of Sir J. B. Robinson, Sir Allan McNabb and others, of the Building Committee in England. The inauguration of the Monument will take place next summer, when a grand Provincial celebration will be held suitable to the occasion.—Mail.

Toronto, Oct. 21. 1856.

The supply of produce on the market this morning, considering the disagreeable weather and the day of the week, was large, especially in the article of wheat. About 6,000 bushels changed hands at prices slightly lower than on Saturday. Farmers, however, anticipating a further decline, moved off rapidly. The range of prices extended from 6s. 10d to 7s per bushel, the latter being only realized for the choicest samples. The demand was active, and competition, although not general, was brisk between two or three of the buyers.

Flour market unchanged. We quote superfine at 30s a 31s; fancy 31s 3d a 32s; and extra at 32s 6d a 33s 9d.

Rye is in active request and very little is coming forward. It has been bou't at 3s 9d per bushel, but 4s would be paid for a good sample.

Barley is inactive at 5s per bushel,

Oats unaltered. Sell in store at 2s. 6d, by retail at 2s. 9d per bushel.

Pork not so plentiful. We quote it at $7 a $7½ per 100 lbs.

Wood from the wharves is selling very freely at $3½ a $6 per cord; on the market it is bought at $5 a $5½ per cord.

Detroit, October 21, 1856.

Flour—Receipts are large, and receivers are anxious sellers. The only sales reported are 288 bbls at $5 87½, and 60 bbls double extra at $6 37½.

Wheat—Considerable offering on change, and more doing. The transactions sum up 38,500 bus, as follows:—22,500 bush white winter, free on board, at $1 35, and 16,000 bush red winter, free on board, at $1 24. Streets receipts are light, and reach about 400 bu at $1 25 a 1 28.

Corn—Sales 3000 bu at 53c, and 2000 bu 52c.

Oats—In demand and quick at 33c per bu. We note sales of 1500 bu at 32c, free on board, at this figure.

Barley—Is in request. We note sale of 150 bus at $2 40 per 100 lbs.

Potatoes—Are moving freely, and sell from wagons at 35c per 50 lbs, according to quality.

Salt—Sells at $1 75 per bbl for fine; $2 30 for coarse, delivered at R. R. Depots.

Freights—Engagements to Oswego in canal boats to load wheat to Oswego on private terms. The Patrick Henry cleared for Ogdensburg this afternoon with 5700 bush wheat, and 800 bbls flour.

New York, Oct. 21

Flour—Without change. Sales 6000 bbls at $6 40 a 6 60 for common to choice superfine state; $6 60 a 6 90 for extra state; $6 50 a 6 70 for common to choice superfine Western; $7 a 7 40 for common to good extra do. Sales 400 bbls Canadian at previous prices.

Wheat—Dull and prices drooping. Sales 18,000 bush at $1 42 a 1 44 for Milwaukee club; $1 55 a 1 60 for white Canadian, $1 54 for red Indiana.

To Emigrants & Others Seeking

LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD.

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Ferrall's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this Road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," (leading to the Lake Muskake, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskoka, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable lands.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country under Dr. French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St. Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 35 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Allenger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence North 36 miles to the Village of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 13 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinto to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorise Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—and build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed; after which see emolument only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from the obligation of building and of residence, except upon the lot on which they live provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot. The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as can be put up in a few days, by the time the neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the house is small: the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, are, in sections of Canada West, capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land—some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timber found in almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care and covered from wet—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £9 to £7 currency. Any small required to make Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the owner at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labor.

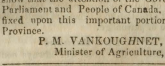
The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords material for good roads during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering of the ground, and consequent communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the mere lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that the Settler will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.



The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of eight millions of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass from the Ottawa country from the shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken and will be completed in the present year: its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River, Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These projected works are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

A DAILY AND A WEEKLY FOR $3,50

Those of our readers of this paper who desire a daily review of the Cleveland, New York and other markets, may be accommodated on the following terms. For $3,50 we will send with the "Commercial Gazette and Marine Record of the Lakes" for one year, and will subscribe for the Daily Clevelander for one year and send the Publisher's receipt to your address.

The "Clevelander" is the size of this paper, is printed on minion and agate type, and on heavy white paper. The report of the home markets will be prepared by us, and we need not repeat that neither patience nor skill, will be spared to make it full and correct in every particular. The New York, Buffalo, and Oswego reports are furnished by the N. Y. associated press, and will be correctly rendered. As a newspaper the "Clevelander" is perhaps equal to any daily in the State. Recollect, only $3,50 for the "Daily Clevelander" and the "Commercial Gazette" for one year. Parts of a dollar may be sent in postage stamps. For two dollars the two papers will be sent six months.

I, William Crosby, for twelve months past residing at the Village of Windsor, in the County of Essex, at present a prisoner in the close custody, of the Sheriff of the County of Essex, and being a Baker by trade do hereby give notice that I intend to present a petition to Alexander Chewett Esquire Judge of the County Court of Essex, praying to be examined touching my debts, estates, and effects, and to be protected from all process upon making a full disclosure and surrender of such estate and effects, for payment of my full and lawful debts, and I hereby further give notice, that the time when the matter of the said petition shall be heard is to be advertised in the Canada Gazette and in the Maple Leaf Newspaper, one month at the least after date hereof.

AYER'S PILLS

Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

JULES HAUEL, Esq., the well known perfumer, of Chemist Street, Philadelphia, whose choice products are found at almost every toilet, says:

"I am happy to say of your CATHARTIC PILLS, that I have found them a better family medicine, for common use, than any other within my knowledge. Many of my friends have realized marked benefits from them, and entertain with me the highest opinion of their extraordinary virtues for driving out diseases and curing the sick. They are not only effective and pleasant to be taken, but the qualities which must make them valued by the public, when they are known."

The venerable Chancellor WARDLAW writes from Batchtimore, 18th April, 1854:

"DR. J. C. AYER—Sir: I have taken your Pills with great benefit, for the listlessness, languor, loss of appetite, and bilious headache, which has of late years rendered me in the spring. A few doses of your Pills cured me. I have used your Cherry Pectoral with great success in my family for coughs and colds with unfailing success. You make medicines which cure, and I feel it a pleasure to commend you for the good you have done and are doing."

AGENT for the Ex. Ex. Co. of the Penn. Railroad Co.

1859. "DR. R. R. Offee, Philadelphia, Dec. 13, 1853.

"Sir: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicines, having derived very material benefit from the use of your Pectoral and your CATHARTIC Pills. I am never without them in my family, nor shall I ever consent to be, while they can be procured for money."

The widely renowned S. S. STEVENS, M. D., of Went Nassau, N. H., writes:

"Having used your CATHARTIC PILLS in my practice, I certify from experience they are an invaluable purgative. In cases of disordered functions of the liver, causing fever, inflammation, costiveness, and other diseases of the kind, they are superior to any other remedy I have used. They are sure to operate, and operate well, which makes me feel almost as much an invaluable article for public use. I have for many years known your Cherry Pectoral to be the best Cough medicine in the world; and these Pills are in no wise inferior to that unrivalled preparation for the treatment of diseases."

"Acton, Me., Nov. 25, 1853.

"DR. J. C. AYER — DEAR SIR: I have been afflicted from my birth with scrofula in its worst form, and now, after twenty years' trial, and an untold of amount of suffering, have been completely cured in a few weeks by your Pills. With what feelings of rejoicing I write can only be imagined when you realize what I have suffered, and how "Absent nine weeks ago I commenced taking your CATHARTIC PILLS, and now am entirely free from the complaint. My eyes are well, my skin is fair, and my hair has commenced growing again. I feel as well, which makes me feel already a new person.

"Such a statement may be the means of conveying information that shall do good to others, I am, with every sentiment of gratitude, Yours, MARIA RICKER."

"I have known the above named MARIA RICKER from her childhood, and her statement is strictly true.

MERVEY, Overseer of the Portsmouth Manufacturing Co."

CAPT. JOEL PRATT, of the ship Marion, writes from Boston, April, 1854:

"Your Pills have cured me from a bilious attack which more than a hundred dollars could not cure. Many of my servants have found great benefit from their use."

"DEAR SIR: I had filled of any relief to my Physician, and from your Pills I took very little, but a few doses of your Pills have completely restored me to health. I have also used your Pills in the case of worms, with the best of effects. They were promptly cured. I recommended them to a friend for costiveness, which had troubled him for months; he told me in a few days they had cured him. He now makes the best medicine in the world; and I am free to say so."

Read this from the distinguished Solicitor of the Supreme Court, whose brilliant abilities have made him well known, not only in this but the neighboring States.

"New Orleans, 5th April, 1854.

"SIR: I have great satisfaction in assuring you that myself and family have been very much benefited by your medicines. My wife was cured, two years since, of a severe and dangerous illness, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then has enjoyed perfect health. My children have several times been cured from attacks of the bilious complaint by your CATHARTIC PILLS, which have relieved them from a dyspepsia and costiveness, which has grown upon me for some years,—indeed, this cure of costiveness alone, from the first time I had used it, is to me of more value than all the money I have ever paid for medicine. I had taken, in the way of medicine, more than enough to physic a dozen men, and was never relieved, but rather injured, until I used your PILLS. Yours with great respect,

JACOB B. MCLEAN."

The above are all from persons who are publicly known where they reside, and whose statements, and the facts they state, merits without a thorough conviction that they were true.

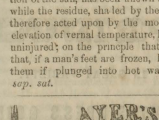
CHINESE POTATO (Dioscorea batatas).—C. A. Peabody, Esq., the "great Strawberry man," and Horticultural editor of the Soil of the South, published at Columbus, Ga., does not appear to entertain a very favorable opinion of this proposed new esculent. He says:

"That new horticultural wonder, the Chinese Yam, proves a delicate and slow grower. We are satisfied that in this climate it will take two years, at least, to get a tuber large enough to eat. The vine resembles our wild potato, but is half as large as an ox. We have no idea that we shall have to move our fence round the Chinese Yam patch, in consequence of the enlargement of the tubers."



SALT AND GUANO.—Recent experiments stated in the Mark Lane Express, go to show that common salt is a valuable addition to all applications of guano to the soil. It not only has a tendency to give strength and hardness to the straw, (which guano weakens) but prevents the loss of ammonia, which is constantly going on even in a dry atmosphere.

Mr. Saral, the editor of a French agricultural journal, says: "We left in open air, in plates, during 15 days, equal weights of the pure guano and guano previously mixed with salt. At the end of that time we examined anew the amounts of nitrogen, and found that the pure guano had lost 11. 6 per cent, of nitrogen, while that mixed with salt had lost only 5 per cent." The Express recommends the use of refuse salt from fish packers for that purpose, and any refused salt would probably answer the purpose.

To Thaw Frozen Plants.

To preserve vegetable life, after having been frozen the same precaution is necessary as in the case of animals. Sudden elevation of heat, proves fatal in both cases.—When the noses of French soldiers became frozen and lost all feeling, in their retreat from Moscow, they were preserved by rubbing them wi h snow. The restoration of vegetables frozen while alive is to be accomplished by the application of cold water, but not when the soil is shiving on them. For reasons that here made obvious, early Yorks and other things should be planted on the north side of ridges.

That portion of trees standing on the north side of a wall and rising above it, so as to be exposed in early spring to the action of the sun, has been known to be killed, while the rest, shaded by the wall and therefore acted upon by the more gradual elevation of vernal temperature, has escaped uninjured; on the principle that is known, that, if a man's feet are frozen, he will lose them if plunged into hot water.—Verb. sep. sal.

CATHARTIC PILLS

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver and other organs of the body, and, by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors, Physicians and Patients, has proved that the most serious diseases almost beyond belief, were they not administered by persons of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give Directions for their use in the complaints to which they have been found useful.

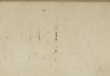
FOR COSTIVENESS.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as gently moves the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure of one complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well who suffers a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, generally relieved.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, which is sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take mild doses—from one to four—to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and the Smarting, Sulphurous, and swollen feelings will readily disappear. When it has gone, don't forget what cured you.

For a Foul Stomach, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength is restored to the system.

FOR NEURALGIA, SICK HEADACHE, NAUSEA, Pain in the Stomach, Back, or Side, take from four to eight pills on going to bed. If they do not operate sufficiently, take more the next day until they do. These complaints will be swept out from the system of Don't wear these and their kindred disorders because your stomach is foul.

FOR SCROFULA, ERYSIPELAS, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the bowels open. The eruptions will generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many dreadful ulcers and sores have been healed up by the purging and purifying effects of these Pills, and some alarming diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have completely yielded to their influence. Leave the sufferer in despair to health. Patients! your duty to society forbids that you should parade yourself disfigured by running sores, with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the uncleun diseases of the skin, because your system will not purify.



TO PURIFY THE BLOOD, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which sow the seeds of incurable diseases will be swept out of the system like rubbish before the wind. By this property they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the liver. Torpidity and congestion vitiate the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is followed by the head-ache, and the constitution is frequently undermined in other cases, the whole body is affected. Obstruction of the duct which empties the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. This produces jaundice, a long and dangerous train of evils. Costiveness, or alternate costiveness and looseness, are common. Feverish symptoms, languor, low spirits, weariness, restlessness, and melancholy, with sometimes fatal ability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness; sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become yellow; sometimes the stomach acid; the bowels sore to the touch; the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which usually ends in bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious diarrhœa, dysentery, &c. A medium dose of three or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is wicked to suffer sick headaches when you can cure them for 25 cents.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT, and all Inflammatory Fevers are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, to move the bowels gently, but freely.

As a DINNER PILL, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be made more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

TILES, TILES,

THE Public are respectfully informed that M. & J. H. WHITEHOUSE are Manufacturing and have on hand a large quantity of Tiles, for Draining Cellars, Farms, &c., at their Brick Yard, Westminster, two miles from London, and a quarter of a mile from Mr. A. Nellis's Tavern, at First Toll Gate on the Huntsville Road, which they will sell at the Low Price of £4 per 1000 with Soles or Bottoms, without £2 15s. They will be found to be much cheaper than any other Material for Draining, as they effect much greatly in the labor, also in the expense of Draining, only requiring a Drain the width of the Spade and when put down will never require removing. Samples may be seen and orders received at the Store of Mr. J. Fitzell, corner of Richmond and Dundas Streets, London.

Also Rooling Tiles and Press Bricks for ronting Buildings of a superior quality.

No. 1, CHEAP HOUSE.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages; devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, demands such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateurs of Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded: together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. KNIGHT, JAMES SNOWDEN and D. W. RAY.

TERMS: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the ILLUSTRATED HORTICULTURIST for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to secure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE

AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to all the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the work, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE

Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM EVANS, Esq., who has now resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simple course - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.
THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's New Method, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.
THE METHOD OF TEACHING,
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.
THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than mere routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.
THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.
THE EXTEND COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.
PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West, at least in the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular and recommended by many of the colonial men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms in this College occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

Old Church Bells.

BY JONATHAN SPREE SLINGSBY.

Ring out merrily,
Loudly, cheerily,
Blithe old bells from the steeple tower,
Hopefully, fearfully,
Joyfully, tearfully,
Moveth the bride from her maiden bower.

Clouds there are none in the fair summer sky;
Sunshine flings benison down from on high;
Children sing loud, as the train moves along,
"Happy the bride that the sun shines on."

Knell out drearily,
Measured and wearily,
Sad old bells from the steeple grey;
Priests chanting lowly;
Solemnly, slowly
Unseth the corse from the portal to-day.

Drops from the leaden clouds heavily fall
Dripping over the plume and the pall;
Murmur old folk as the train moves along,
"Happy the dead that the rain raineth on."
Toll at the hour of prime,
Matin and vesper chime,
Loved old bells from the steeple high—
Boiling, like holy waves,
Over the lowly graves,
Floating up, prayer-fraught into the sky,

Solemn the lesson your lightest notes teach;
Stern is the preaching your iron tongues preach;
Ringing in life from the bud to the bloom,
Ringing the dead to their rest in the tomb.

Peal out evermore—
Peal as he pealed of yore,
Brave old bells, on each sabbath day,
In sunshine and gladness,
Through tones and thro' sadness,
Bridal and burial have passed away.

Tell us life's pleasures with death are still rife;
Tell us that death ever leadeth to life;
Life is our labor, and death is our rest,
If happy the living the deadare the blest.

A Secret Worth Knowing.

Truth is strange—stranger than fiction

A young grocer, of good character and correct habits, commenced business in a good and improving neighborhood. His stock was small, as were his means, and his stock of customers still smaller.

His sales hardly met his expences, and he was evidently going "down hill," and Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

At the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between

A few have rims of iron, very much decayed around their tops. The beads are coarsely and inelegantly made. The shells are those usually found in such places and are much worn. As Professor Wilson has lately shown in the Canadian Journal, they must have come from the Gulf of Mexico, and thus exemplify the existence of an extensive traffic between the northern and southern portions of our continent. The presence of the hair is involved in mystery. It does not belong to any of the skulls, but seems to have been either a talisman or an ornament. While standing amid the relics of decaying bones and mouldering skulls, the question naturally arose, "Who and what are these? What were their joys and sorrows, their occupations and pleasures?—did they come to an untimely end, and how long have they lain in their earthly resting-place, till disturbed by the insatiable curiosity of the white man?" Alas! from those grinning skulls and those discoloured bones, not even the voice of echo is heard. Perpetual silence mocks all our inquiries.—Without presuming to offer any very decided opinions, the writer is inclined to believe that the remains are those of warriors, slain in battle. The chief grounds for this are as follows:—

1. In the spring, a skeleton was found a short distance from the burrow, with every evidence of having been struck down by a tomahawk.

2. In the bright, where the remains were found, is one admirably battle-field

3. The bodies seem to have been hastily interred. Most of them had on their ordinary dresses. A few remains of these were found with the fur yet perfect, the skins neatly sewn, and evidently belonging to some people of Indian dress, still distinct and undecayed. The corpses appear to have been hastily thrown in, and little or no earth thrown over them, as the only covering found over them was that formed by the accumulation of leaves that have fallen since their interment.

The time when this interment took place will never be known, but it must have been after the French began to occupy the country.—Globe.

Miscellany.

THE APPLE.—"I wish you had been Eve," said an urchin to an old maid, who was proverbial for her meanness. "Why so?" "Because," said he, "you would have eaten all the apple, instead of dividing it with Adam."

A gentleman asked a little girl what it was that made a person feel so when another tickled him. "I suppose it is the laugh creeping over him," was the instant reply.

Why is a lover like a knocker? Because he is bound to adore (a door.)

A land speculator, out West, in defending his "tract" against the charge of insalubrity, declared it was so healthy "around," and so difficult for folks to die, that all the inhabitants had to draw their last breath with a corkscrew.

A MAMMOTH SQUASH.—Mr. Samuel Hoard, of this city, has raised a squash in his garden this season, which weighs one hundred and eighty-six pounds. It is probably the largest squash ever grown in this country.—Chicago Times.

Our devil says if all he hears of speculation, high living, extravagance, enormous rents, prostitution and gambling in Chicago, be true that we may hear, ere long, of another great squash in that city. "May be so!"

The entire island now comprising the city and county of New York, was once purchased for the astounding sum of twenty-four dollars! A friend of ours wishes that his great-great-great grandfather had been the purchaser, and that his descendants had "held on to the property."

Louis Napoleon has issued an edict, forbidding the nurse of the little Napkin from calling him "my little rabbit, my little squairel, my little dickey-duckey, and such like appellations, as they would hereafter interfere with his dignity as Emperor of France!" What paternal solicitude and foresight!

"Talk of the inferiority of the female mind!" exclaimed an excited Woman's Rights orationan, "why, Mr. President, woman possesses infinitely more of the divine silliness than man, and any one who attempts to get around her, in these days, will have to start very early in the morning!"

The Abington [Mass] Standard tells the following: The Rev. Mr. G., a clergyman of a neighboring town, being recently absent from home on business, his little son, a youth of four years, calmly folded his hands and asked the blessing usually pronounced by his father at morning meal. At noon, being asked to pronounce the blessing, he replied with a grave face, "No, I don't like the looks of them taters."

FOREIGN INVENTIONS.—An Italian journal states that a capenter has discovered a new method of constructing a locomotive engine, which may be set in motion without the aid of steam, human labor, or fuel. Its daily cost is limited to the value of the grease required to diminish friction, and its use is free from any danger whatever. The inventor, Giochino Papa, living at Brescia, proposes to dispose of his secret. The engine will cost 20,000 francs, if of 100-horse power.

THE ELECTRIC SPARK.—At the London Royal Institution, lately, the instaneous duration of an electric spark and the means ingeniously contrived by Professor Wheatstone to measure it, were illustrated by the original apparatus employed by the Professor; from which it was ascertained that the duration of the spark does not exceed the twenty-five thousandth part of a second.—In a narrow hall, if illuminated in its flight by a flash of lightning, would in consequence of the momentary duration of the light, appear to be stationary; and even the wings of an insect that moves ten thousand times in a second, would seem at rest.

NATURAL SILK FABRIC.—A remarkable circumstance is said to have occurred in the silk factory of M. Garibaldi, at Cremona.—It is positively stated that, in the factory, a quantity of silk worms, instead of forming the cocoon as usual, actually wove a kind of silk ribbon, of the breadth of an inch, and of length of upward of twelve feet. In the course of inquiries made in this matter, it has been elicit ed that a similar phenomena, only on a much larger scale, took place in Alexandria, in 1836, in the silk factory of Dr. Grillo, where the silk worms wove a ribbon five hundred, and upwards of seven feet in length, and part of which remarkable product is now preserved on exhibition in the Museum of Natural History at Turin.

The editor of a paper out west who has just failed, says he did it with all the honors of war, and retired with flying colors—the Sheriff's flag floating from two win dows on the door of the office!

PRINTING VS. PUBLISHING.—A young lady explained to a Printer the other day, the difference between printing and publishing; and at the conclusion of her remarks, by way of illustration she said, you may print a kiss upon my cheek, but you must not publish it.

A letter from Petersburg gives the following bill of fare of the great dinner given by the Czar to 200,000 peasants at the gates of Moscow:—240 sh eep, roasted wholly; 480 tuns, 28,800 litres of broth, 480 dishes of jelly, 7,200 fowls, 1,000 turkeys, 1,000 ducks, 24,000 loaves of white bread, 9,600 loaves of brown bread, 9,600 hams, 40,000 apples, 40,000 pears, 40,000 plums, 4,000 pails of beer, 4,000 pails of mead, 2,800 pails of white and red wine. At the head of every table there was a sheep roasted whole, the horns gilt and the nose tipped with silver. All the fruits were hung upon Christmas trees.

Why is the letter E like a child's first sin? —Because it is the begining of error.

A BLOODY INDIAN WAR APPREHENDED IN THE NORTH WEST.—The St. Paul Pioneer of the 18th instant, gives the intelligence of a threatened war between the Sioux and Chippewa Indians, partly growing out of the recent murders committed by the Chippewas among the Sioux, their hereditary enemies, and partly from a misunderstanding between the Indian agent and the Sioux in regard to the delivering over of certain young men engaged in forays into the Chippewa country. The superintendent demanded those men; on the refusal to comply, the annuities were suspended. Afterwards they complied, but for some reason they have not received their money. The consequence is, a bad state of feeling exists. The Sioux demand the young men, and threaten a war of extermination against the Chippewas.

THE MEDITERRANEAN ELECTRIC CABLE has been lost. It was taken out by the Dutchman, steam ship, to be laid down between Sardinia and the coast of Africa, in connection with the submarine line now in service. The steamer had got safely out with it, and we believe, had commenced paying it out from Cape Spartivento, and the vessel had nearly reached Calate Island, when a tremendous storm burst forth. Every effort was made to hold on the cable, but in order to save the ship and lives of those on board, they were compelled to drop it. The distance between Spartivento and Tunis is about 109 miles. The cable was insured at Lloyd's for nearly £30,000.

REVIEW OF THE VOLUNTEERS.—Yesterday afternoon His Excellency the Governor General, accompanied by his own personal staff, and the Military and Militia Staff, reviewed the whole of the active Volunteer force of Montreal, on the Champ de Mars.

The day was very fine and the ground densely crowded with spectators to the number of fully 15,000.

The whole event through the various evolutions of a field day with great steadiness and precision, and were highly complimented for their appearance and discipline. —Montreal Advr. Oct. 8.

The smoke from burning woods and marshes is felt severely at Saginaw. These fires are very general this fall, and we fear will prove very destructive to fences, hay-stacks and other property.

WILLIAM RUSSEL, who was sent to the Crimea as special reporter to the London Times and who fulfilled his mission with considerable skill, has been writing from St. Petersburg to the same paper, an account of the coronat on of the Emperor of Russia. The rare descriptive skill which he exhibits in his letters almost brings the gorgeous pageant before the eye. Mr. Russell is an Irishman and a short, stout, jolly one too. He is a great favorite with everybody except those whose abuses he exposes; and it was quite a common saying with the soldiers before Sebastopol, during his temporary absence when they suffered any needless privation or hardship—"Oh, this would'nt be so if Billy Russell were only here." His letters have already given him rank among masters of the English language, such as has been attained by no living men save Ruskin and DeQuincy.

THE TURF.—A trotting match took place over the Union Course, Long Island, on Thursday between Lady Moscow and Tacony mile heats, best in five, to harness. Tacony took the first heat, and Lady Moscow the three next. Time— 2.25½, 2.30½, 2.35½, 2.41½.

A LARGE PIECE OF TIMBER.—John Gilchrist, Esq., of Peterborough, C. W., numbers among his lot of masts now at Sillery Cove a huge white pine mast, 101 feet in length, and girthing 40½ inches. This splended denizen of the forest is perfectly straight, and is of excellent quality of wood.

THE NEGRO AND THE NEEDLE.—The earliest record of needle making in England is in the year 1545, in the reign of Henry VIII., and it is supposed that this useful branch of industry was introduced by a Moor from Spain. Needles were sold in Cheapside and other busy streets in London in the reign of Queen Mary, and were at that time made by a Spanish negro, who refused to discover the secret of his art. Another authority states that the art of making steel needles was lost at the negro's death, but afterwards revived by a German in 1556. Probably these facts may account for the needle maker's coat of arms being the head of a negro.

DEATH OF SIR JOHN ROSS.—The English papers contain intelligence of the death of the celebrated Arctic navigator, Sir John Ross, Rear Admiral in the British navy, at the advanced age of 80. Having entered the navy in 1788, he took an active part in the war of the last and beginning of the present century. In 1818, he accompanied Sir Edward Parry in his expedition to the Arctic Seas, and subsequently spent upwards of four years there, from 1829 to 1833, in command of another expedition to those inhospitable regions, and on his return received the honor of knighthood from William IV., for his distinguished services.

A man in Wisconsin recently advertising his farm for sale, winds up as follows:—"The surrounding country is the most beautiful the God of nature ever made. The scenery is celestial, divine; also two waggons to sell and yoke of steers."

By the Arabia.

From the Correspondent of the Globe.

LONDON, October 10, 1856.

Italian affairs are as involved as ever, and doubt begins again to creep over the people's minds here whether, after all that has been said, anything will be done by the Western Powers towards liberating the political victims of Ferdinand of Naples, and promoting the general amelioration of the social condition of the country, by enforcing a change of policy upon the cruel king and his savage ministers. All sorts of rumours, with reference to this question, have been afloat this week. But one statement has been no sooner made than it has been contradicted by another, to be itself disposed of by a third. The last, and one in which the best informed people here are disposed to rely, is that the king is at length prepared to do something in the way of making the reforms required of him. The Austrian Gazette, a ministerial paper, of the 6th inst is the first authority for this. It states that the King of Naples has sent autographic letters to the Emperor Napoleon and Queen Victoria, announcing that he is willing to send a representative to the Paris Conference, and to communicate his intentions respecting organic reforms and an amnesty. This intelligence from Vienna, is thus given in another telegraphic despatch:—"The Correspondence Autrichienne publishes a letter of the 29th from Naples. The King has addressed an autograph letter to the Emperor Napoleon, and another to Queen Victoria, asking that the coming Congress of Paris should consider the conditions of an amnesty, and of the abolition of the reforms advised by the two Powers. The official Gazette de Verona says that at Vienna a firm belief is entertained that the King of Naples will comply with the friendly remonstrances of Austria, which are entirely in harmony with the views of the French Cabinet."

The Vaterandsy Gabette, under its Vienna head, says:—"Although the utmost silence continues to prevail with respect to the affairs of Naples, we can state positively that diplomatic negociations are being quietly pursued, which will probably have the effect of causing the Western Powers to abandon the projected exhibition. We learn from a good source that Russia has not confined herself to the protest expressed in the circular despatch but that Baron de Morenheim lately brought to Vienna a pressing note, in which the necessity of preventing the Western Powers from carrying out their intentions is unequivocally expressed. The manner in which that will be done it is not difficult to divine. Russia will try to send the whole question to a diplomatic congress, and certainly Austria will do all she can to promote the object in that footing."

RUSSIA.

The Moniteur du l'Armee gives the following as the results of the census of the Russian empire taken by the order of the Emperor at the time of his accession to the throne:—

"The total number of the population amounts to 63 millions, the principal elements of which give results unknown to the rest of Europe. The clergy of the Russian Church stand for the enormous number of 610,000; that of the tolerated creeds, 33,000; the hereditary nobility, 500,000; the petty bourgeoisie, including discharged soldiers, 425,000; foreigners residing temporarily, 40,000; different bodies of Cossacks colonised on the Oural, the Don, the Wolga, the Black Sea, the Balkal, the Baschkirs, and the irregular Kalmucks, 2,000,000; the population of the towns, the middle and lower classes, 3,000,000; the population of the country parts, 45,000,000; the wandering tribes, 500,000; the inhabitants of the Trascaucasian possessions, 1,400,000; the kingdom of Poland, 5,200,000; the Grand Duchy of Finland, 1,400,000; and the Russian colonies in America, 71,000. At the accession of the Emperor Nicholas, the census then taken only gave a population of 51,000,000. This large increase in the space of 30 years may, however, be readily understood when it is considered that the Russian territory has now an extent of 22 millions of square kilometres (a kilometre is the of a mile), and a line of coast of 27,000 kilometres. If the population continues to increase in the same proportion, it will by 1900 amount to 100 millions. The Russian empire, according to the same document, contains 112 different peoples, divided into 12 principal races, the most numerous of which is the Sclavonian, including the Russians properly so called, the Poles, the Cossacks, and the Servian colonies of Dnieper. These populations inhabit the finest and the most important provinces of the empire."

PRUSSIA.

A letter from Berlin of the 2nd Oct. states that the marriage of Prince Frederick William with the Princess Royal of England will take place on the 18th October, 1857, the anniversary of the Prince's birthday.

From Berlin we have accounts which state that the question of Neufchatel will be taken into consideration during the sojourn of the King of Prussia at Hohengelern; and in the conference which will take place on the subject, it will be discovered more particularly to draw out the positive propositions which Prussia will have to make upon the question, the powers which signed the protocol of May 2, 1852, having admitted in principal the rights of Prussia over the Principality.

ENGLAND AND MEXICO.—Advices from Mexico are to the 2d inst. The difficulty between Great Britain and the Republic seems to be rapidly approaching a crisis.—The British Legation was closed on the 2d inst., the Mexican Government failing to comply with the requisition respecting the Tepic affair. The British Charge had removed to Tacubaya' there to await further instructions from his Government. In the meantime British squadrons are to be in readiness to act both on the Gulf and west coast of Mexico, should it be decided to push matters to that extremity in enforcing reclamations. Large sales of confiscated church property had been made, and it was expected that the treasury would soon be replenished. Attempts to subvert the Government, and a conspiracy to assassinate President Comonfort, had been detected and frustrated. The Government had suspended payment on the Vera Cruz Custom House. Accounts from the Northern department confirm the news of the defeat of Vidaurri's partisans at San Luis Potosi, at Mier, and at Villareal. The pros ects of success are completely destroyed.

Nicaragua.

The N.Y. Herald of Monday, gives the following summary of the latest news from Central America:—

"We have important news from Nicaragua, brought by the steamship Texas, at this port, from San Juan del Norte, about the 7th inst. The Texas encountered violent gales on the voyage, which delayed her passage and rendered it necessary to put into Norfolk for supplies. She brought $156,563 in treasure, and between seven and eight hundred passengers from California. Our dates from Granada (Nic.) are to the 4th inst. Walker had ordered the evacuation of Massaya, and concentrated all his disposable force at the capital, before which the allied army pitched their camp on the 2nd inst. Several skirmishes had taken place at the outposts, and an eventful battle was hourly expected. The belligerents were, all things considered, not very unequally matched in point of numbers. Parties of recruits from California, New Orleans and New York, were on the march for Granada. The Americans were in excellent spirits and confident of victory, while Gen. Walker was resolved by a decisive blow to annihilate the enemy in the field and paralyze the native opposition, which was being actively organized against him. The administration of the civil affairs of the government was prosecuted with vigorous rigour. The decree of the Constituent Assembly abolishing slavery had been revoked and that domestic institution is now virtually re-established in the republic. It is expected that this act will attract a large number of emigrants from the Southern section of the United States. A large number of valuable estates, confiscated by executive decree, will be sold by auction on New Year's day, affording a fine chance of profitable investment, as the government scrip, which will be received in payment, can be now obtained at a merely nominal price. Major Heiss has been commissioned to proceed to Washington, and ratify the commercial treaty recently concluded with our Government. The fees for distillery licenses had yielded quite a considerable sum of money. Col. Wheeler, the American Minister, at a public dinner, freely expressed the sympathy which the present administration feel towards the establishment of Walker's government. Lieutenant Jennings Estelle, a native of Tennessee, had been shot by sentence of court-martial. He confessed to many homicides committed by him, both in California and Central America. Trade was dull in Granada, and although provisions were cheap, board and lodging were high."

Important from Mexico.

RAPTURE WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

Withdrawal of the British Legation from the Capital.

ENGLISH FLEETS ON THE EAST AND WEST COASTS.

Correspondence of the New-York "Daily Times:"

City of Mexico, Saturday, Sept. 20, 1856

Fearing that I shall not have an opportunity of writing you by our regular mail line to New-Orleans this month, I send you by the British packet, by way of Havana, a piece of important news.

I have it from unquestionable authority, that at the very time this leaves the capital, the British Legation closes its doors. The cause of this proceeding is the Barron, Forbes & Co's case. This, however, is but a hobby; for it is well known that the British Government has been endeavoring for a long time to settle the financial claims of its subjects against Mexico quietly, if possible. But all such attempts have been abortions, and it only required some act on the part of the Mexican Government to demonstrate that all her pleas were groundless, and that sympathy had been wasted on the country, for the British Government to adopt coercive measures. The Barron, Forbes & Co's case has furnished abundant pretext, and I cannot for my part see why the Mexican Minister is going to escape from the difficulty without getting a drubbing.

The British Charge here has acted under the most positive orders from his own Government in his case and the charge which has been rushed on by Mr. Barron's great wealth and political influence, has not the least shadow of foundation. Such could not be the case—the assertion of a lot of editors and brokers in Mexico to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Admiral of the fleet in the Gulf is under orders to hold himself in readiness for any alternative, and Admiral Bruce, of the Pacific squadron, is ordered on the west coast of Mexico.

Thus the country stands at present. For my own part I regard it as being in rather tight quarters. They certainly will find that they have taken the wrong pig by the ear, and be taught what a lesson that will be them serving as their future dealings with countries, where a pledge given in good faith is never broken, except at the sacrifice of all character for honor.

The balance of the news in this capital is of little import. Everything thing promises well at present, but it may be regarded that a month is shower-y weather. The fact that three or four large States are in revolution does not seem to create the least feeling here. The officers of the army chiefly amuse themselves in going about abusing the Government for not paying them off, a performance which they have not witnessed for the last three or four weeks.

Her Majesty in Scotland.

A few scraps we glean of the Royal bearing. The Duchess of Kent found certain biscuits supplied by an Edinburgh baker to be peculiarly nice, and ordered the host of her hotel to continue to supply. On Sunday the landlord found he had none left, and sent for a fresh consignment. The baker indignantly replied he would not serve the Queen herself on Sunday. Mr. Barry represented the case to the Duchess just as it stood, whereupon Her Royal Highness called in person on the Baker, and ordered twelve dozen biscuits to be sent to her every week. The Queen to whose ears the story came, gets every week a similar supply.—Her Majesty, in her walks about Balmoral dropped into the hut of an old Highland widow, and talked very familiarly, upon ordinary topics. At last the widow ended: "Ye ne'er say anything about the Queen: I reckon ye're Mrs. Albert herself?" Calming in at another bothy, Her. Majesty found a very aged woman alone at tea. In the course of the chat, she observed, "You are very old to be alone!"

"O," was the reply, "I've wrath (plenty) o' folk to take cars o' me; but they're a cot to see the Queen." "Tell them," rejoined Her Majesty "when they return the Queen was out to see you." Subsequently Her Majesty took shelter in the same hut from an evening shower and received a very few but very kindly scold for venturing out so late.

Advertisments must be sent in for insertion before Noon on Wednesday in each week.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, OCTOBER 30, 1856.

On Thursday last, the Essex Troop of Volunteer Militia Cavalry marched into Sandwich from Kingsville, (where they had been drilling) for the purpose of finishing their ten days' exercise. Their appearance, as they marched into town was certainly most creditable, and the order which they kept reflects the greatest credit upon the men, as it will be remembered that the troop had then been only seven days on drill. Their uniform is of blue cloth, with white facings, and looks very neat and becoming. The men are mostly from the Township of Gosfield, and a finer-looking set of fellows it would be difficult to find; and all being independent farmers, have taken a pride in appearing as they did.

Their soldier-like appearance, and the accuracy with which they went through their drill, speaks well for Sergeant Spinks, who drilled and brought the troop to its present very efficient state. The following is a list of the officers and men:

Lieut. J. H. Wilkinson,
Cornet Jas. McKee.

Sergt. John Flood.

On Friday morning, Col. McDougall inspected the troop, and paid them a high compliment for their appearance, and for the excellent manner in which they drilled

In the afternoon, Col. Rankin, in appropriate speech on behalf of Mrs. Rankin, presented to the troop a beautiful silk flag which she had made. In presenting it, the Colonel said that he felt certain that in their hands it would never be disgraced. Capt. Wigle, on behalf of the troop, returned thanks to Mrs. Rankin and Miss McKee for the honor they conferred upon them, and assured those ladies, that should occasion require their services, the flag which had been made and presented by their fair hands, would never be disgraced. Three enthusiastic cheers were given for our gracious Queen, three for the ladies, and three for Col. Rankin. The Col. drank to the health of the troop in a stirrup cup, which was passed from hand to hand until all had drunk.

They then re-formed and marched to the Windsor Castle, where they were entertained in a very handsome manner by the Colonel. A regular soldier's feast was spread, and the troopers felt themselves competent to do good service upon the different good things set before them, after so severe a field day as they had experienced.

When the cloth had been removed. Col. Rankin gave the health of the Queen, which was drunk with three times three. The health of Capt. Wigle was then proposed and drunk most heartily. Col. Rankin's was next proposed, and drunk with all the honors. The health of Col. Askin, (who wore the medals which he had won in defence of his country,) was now proposed, and responded to by all present with a hearty cheer. This closed the labours and pleasures of Friday.

On Saturday, His Honor the Mayor of the city of Detroit, came to Sandwich, and invited the troop over to that city, which kindness the Captain could not refuse. At one o'clock the troop crossed the river in the steamer Argo, and was met by the Mayor and a large number of the citizens who had assembled to greet them. After marching through the principal streets they were taken to His Honor's office, where a sumptuous lunch was prepared and awaiting their arrival. The very best feeling prevailed, which we were happy to see. The Mayor proposed three cheers for the Queen, and Col. Rankin returned the compliment by giving three for the President of the United States. This day will long be remembered by the troop, for their kind reception by the citizens and the courteous treatment of Mayor Hyde. We hope that such friendly interchanges of hospitality may increase, and that the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon race upon this continent may learn to pledge each other's prosperity—rather than the encouragement of a hostile feeling which is both unnatural and unhallowed for. On their way to the ferry more than a thousand of the citizens had assembled along the line of their march, and as the troop again entered the ferry boat Argo, a deafening cheer was given by the crowd to their Canadian guests. They then marched to Sandwich and were dismissed, having completed their ten days' drill.

The Assizes for the County of Essex were opened in this town on Monday last by Mr. Chief Justice Draper. The following is a list of Grand Jurors sworn in:—Cornelius R. Quick, Esq., Foreman; Sam. Atkins, John Bray, James Borrowman, Richard Bertheume, Patrick Conway, William Hunt, Henry Harris, Peter Malott, John Maloney, Pierre Marantette, Michael Maloney, Johnson Richardson, Edmond Smith, Robert Taylor, John S. Wigle, George Wilson, Henry Whaley.

The civil docket is unusually small. The number of records tried up to the time of going to press are six, viz.:

The Trust and Loan Co. vs. Salmoni—Ejectment. Verdict for plaintiff, and 1s. damages.

Jones vs. Bartlett—Assessment. Left to arbitration.

Richmond vs. Ferris—Ejectment. Verdict for Plaintiff and 1s. damages.

Leonard vs. Ferris—Issue. Verdict for plaintiff, £69 14s.

McLeod vs. Mercer, Sheriff—Assessment Damages assessed at £130 15s.

Joseph Mark vs. John Morris—Malicious Arrest. Verdict for plaintiff, £12 10s.

The criminal docket is very large. The following prisoners have been tried:

Phoebe Greaves—Larceny. Not guilty

Nancy Munroe—Larceny. Guilty; sentenced to 6 weeks imprisonment.

James E. Pomeroy—Felony. Not guilty.

Our Iron Manufactories.

(From the Kingston Com. Adv.)

CHEWETT AND CO'S IRON AND AXLE FACTORY

This firm as our readers are aware was awarded a special prize for the arrices of Pa manufacture which it exhibited, namely, Bar Iron manufactured from scrap, and iron axles and boxes suitable for light and heavy wagons, carriages, buggies, &c. The iron received the most unequalified approval from the judges as also from the many experienced iron masters and practical mechanics who examined it, being pronounced by them equal if not superior to the best imported. The axles and boxes attracted general admiration, not less from the completeness, beauty and finish of the workmanship, than from the minuteness of their adjustment, and the smoothness and easiness with which the axle worked in the box. It required not the eye of a mechanic to discern their merits at a glance, and consequently we were by no means surprised to hear that Mr. Alfred Perry the Provincial commissioner, whenever he cast his eyes upon them at once engaged the entire collection for the Crystal Palace, Sydenham.—This is a triumph of enterprise of which Kingston has just reason to be proud, for in this branch of Manufacture we believe she stands alone in the Province. Having got the start of other places, and being already able to manufacture articles superior to those imported, at prices equally low if not lower, there is every probability that she will be able to maintain her prestige in the Provincial market. In these circumstances we look upon Messrs. Chewett and Company's iron and axle factory as being the nucleus of a manufacturing establishment, which, if it goes fair play from those who ought to be most interested in its success, namely our provincial tradesmen and mechanics, cannot fail to become one of the most extensive and valuable nurseries of domestic industry within our borders. We are gratified to hear that the impression made at the recent exhibition in favor of the manufactures of Messrs. Chewett & Company, is having a legitimate effect upon mechanics as well as the iron trade throughout the Province, and the orders coming in daily, being an index that they are taking that position in the Provincial market over similar descriptions imported, goods which is universally accorded to them by all judges, and which they certainly merit.

Appalling Burning of a Ship.

The following details of a horrible case of piracy and burning of a ship at Macao have been received at Lloyd's:—

The Dutch ship Baaca, Capt. Heymans, 700 tons burthen, with between 300 and 400 emigrants (coolies) for Havana, put back to Macao with provisions since the 23rd ult. She had on board, (August 10), when her water casks leaking and cargo shifted, having encountered boisterous weather, and on reaching the outer roads brought up to an anchor. There she remained repairing, her officers exercising strict vigilance in preventing the coolies going ashore, as they should make their escape. For the three weeks, whatever discontentmay have prevailed no fears of an outbreak would seem to have been entertained until a Chinese doctor warned the captain that mischief was brewing. In preparing for such a contingency as a rising of the coolies, the small arms were placed on the poop and two guns were loaded with grape and pointed forward. About nine o'clock of the night of the 8th, the disturbance commenced, and the crew took refuge on the poop. The captain first fired a shot or two, overheard, but as that had no effect, and the coolies advancing towards them, yelling frightfully, armed with belaying pins, bricks torn from the cooking places, &c., the captain gave orders to his men to fire, and immediately a volley was poured into the infuriated mass from the two guns, and also from the small arms. This had the effect of checking and pardering down the rioters, and the coolies were driven below, but they sought revenge by setting fire to the ship, and in a few minutes the captain was appalled by seeing flames issuing up from the fore hatch. A frightful scene of carnage followed the coolies rushed up on deck, and no doubt murdered all the officers of the ship. The ship was soon in blaze, fore and aft. In about an hour the mainmast fell with a crash, then the mizzen, and about midnight the magazine blew up with a tremendous explosion. The ship was instantly shivered to fragments, and a vast number of poor creatures who clinging on the chains perished with her. Of the number who were on board, including crew and passengers, about 500, only 150 escaped with their lives; the remainder were either burnt in the ship or drowned. The affair has produced a great sensation in Hong Kong.

Shocking Occurrence--Two Women eaten by Wolves.

Our pen has seldom had to record a more heart-rending circumstances than we are about to relate. Some ten days ago, in the Southern portion of the Township of Mornington, two females went out in the evening in search of their cows, and not returning that night, search was made in the morning, when, sad to relate their skeletons were only to be found, their flesh having been completely devoured by the wolves.—We are yet unable to record the particulars —the sad outcome only having as yet reached us. Our informant also states that a man in that locality has been missing for the last ten days. No trace can be found whatever, as fears are entertained that he met the same lamentable fate as the unfortunate women.

The wolves were never before known to be so numerous or so ravenous as they are this season in this section of the country.—It is regarded as unsafe to be alone on the public highways after dark. Reports are reaching us almost every week of some of their ravages. The other night previous they killed twelve belonging to the same man.

Bears are also numerous and remarkably saucy. A Mr. Bennett of Mornington, was attacked a short time ago, in his own field, a little after dark, by an old bear and three cubs. He fought her off till some of the neighbours came to his relief. An immense one was killed in Mornington a few day ago. —Dumfries Reporter, 15th.

CANADIAN STOCK.

Mr. Southam, well known in the United States as a practical agriculturist and breeder of Hereford cattle, has just returned from a visit to some of our Canadian stock-breeders, and expresses surprise at the excellent quality of the Short Horns and Leicester sheep he has seen in this part of the province. He says that Mr. Miller, of Markham has a herd of Short Horns which, taken as a whole, is quite equal to any he has seen either in England or the United States.—This is high praise; and coming from a thoroughly practical man, who has been accustomed to see, as an exhibitor and a judge, the best stock of both countries, should encourage our breeders to greater efforts, and more care in the selection of animals. There are several herds in Canada that compete closely with that of Mr. Miller, and individual specimens that are—according to recent awards—superior to the best of his.—We need only mention those of Mr. Stone of Guelph, the Messrs. Wade of Port Hope, Miller of Pickering, and others, whose names will be seen in the prize lists of our Provincial and County Shows.

Mr. Southam speaks highly of the quality of the sheep he has seen, not on one, but on many farms. He has purchased several animals for neighbours, as well as for himself, paying very liberal prices. We have no doubt that, with proper management, a very profitable trade in thorough-bred stock may be carried on with the adjoining States.—Globe.

NAVIGATION OF THE LAKES.—The Halifax (N. S.) Sun says in a recent issue:—A noteworthy feature in the shipping on the great Canadian lakes is the rapidly increasing substitution of steamers for sailing vessels. The first craft ever launched on Lake Erie, was built by the French for the celebrated expedition of Ms Salle, so far back as 1679 (Raynal,) but it was only in 1797 that the first Anglo-American vessel was launched upon the lakes. The first Steamer launched in America was built in Lower Canada, to run between Montreal and Quebec; this was about the year 1812, the Legislature of that Province having in the session of 1811, granted a monopoly of the route to one Molson. The first steamer on Lake Ontario was built at about 1813; two years previously a like event took place on Lake Erie. In 1851 the proportion of tons of steam craft to sailing craft was as 74,000 to 138,000. The whole tonnage on the lakes in 1820 amounted to only 5,200 tons; in 1840 to 70,000 and in 1850 to 167,387 tons. In five years last past the ratio of increase is stated to have been much greater; but even this hardly gives an idea of the vast commerce of which these great inland seas are destined to become the scene, even before the closing of the current century.

MALICIOUS ATTEMPT TO UPSET A TRAIN.—On Sunday evening, shortly after eight o'clock, a ballast train, between Newcastle and Port Granby on the Grand Trunk Railroad, was thrown off the track, over an embankment, some malignant wretches having placed pieces of timber across the line. The train was only going at the rate ten miles an hour, or the consequences might have been more serious than they were, some sixty men being upon it. As it was, a breaksman received some slight injuries. We understand that one of the contractors passed over that part of the road about an hour previously and found the track quite clear. No effort will be spared to discover the miscreants, who placed the obstruction; and, if they are found, it is to be hoped that the law will have penalties to impose in some degree adequate to the atrocity of their crime.—Globe.

The agents of the Montreal Ocean Steamship Company have entered into arrangements with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, by which they undertake to land goods in any place in Canada along the line, the same bill and rate, freight carrying them through to their destination. This will much facilitate the speedy and safe delivery of goods, and Upper Canada merchants should avail themselves of it.—Ex.

The influence of the French ambassador at Constantinople has been sensibly felt in the repression of outrages against the Christians, and the punishment of those who had been leaders in the recent fanatical attacks. A decree has been issued by the Sublime Porte condemning Musselmen to pay 300,000 piastres for damages committed at a Catholic church and seminary, and fifteen of the most dangerous characters have been exiled into Asia. The state of Turkey will require a vigilant watch on the part of the representatives of Christian powers, and it will be necessary strongly to insist on the Porte fulfilling the many promises of reform with sincerity.

The Mount Clemens Advocate, Michigan, mentions a remarkable explosion of subterranean gas from the bottom of a well seventy-five feet deep. The men engaged in boring it were fortunately at dinner when the explosion took place. Sand and gravel were thrown up with immense force, covering the ground an acre in extent, a stone weighing sixteen pounds was thrown up about 150 feet in the air, and the augur was found 150 feet from the well. The gas is said to burn beautifully.—Ex.

A WARNING TO BAKERS.—On Monday morning the City Police seized three hundred loaves, the property of five different bakers, in this city, which were under weight, and distributed them to various charitable institutions. We are informed that some of the loaves were half a pound under weight.—Mont. Pilot.

QUEER REASON FOR KISSING.—A gentleman, on parting with a lady, gave and received—as he supposed—a kiss of friendship. After the door was closed, he overheard the following: "Why, Lucy, aint you ashamed to kiss a man, all alone with him?" "No, ma, I am not," answered Lucy; "for I only kissed him to smell his breath, to see if he hadn't been drinking."

At the horse show in Manchester, N. H., on Wednesday last, the mare 'Lady Sutherland' made a mile in 2 2-23, and took the purse of $75.

TORONTO Oct. 27.

Owing to the disagreeable weather this morning the supply of produce on the market was exceedingly small.

Wheat to the extent of about 3,000 bushels was bought at prices ranging from 7s to 7s 4d—the ruling figure for the day being 7s 3d. The demand was not so active, waggons moved off freely at these quotations. Farmers who can bring in their wheat conveniently during the present week had better do so, as it is altogether likely that the demand will become inactive after the first of next month.

Flour is not active. We quote No 1 superfine 30s 6d a 31s, fancy 31s 3d a 32s and extra 33s 9d.

We notice no shange in other articles.

GEO. BULLOCK,
Sec.-Tr. E. B. S.

To the Electors of the Counties of Essex and Kent. Western Division.

GENTLEMEN,

I have been this day lawfully DECLARED the successful candidate in the late contest, and you have conferred upon me the highest honour in your power to bestow—a seat in the Legislative Council of this Province. For your noble support of me during the severe struggle just ended, I beg you to accept my best and warmest thanks; and I repeat the assurance I have so often given, that I will serve you faithfully, zealously, and honestly; and my chief object shall ever be to promote the welfare and prosperity of this my adopted country, according to the best of my judgment ability and power.

Believe me to remain,
Gentlemen,
your obliged and faithful

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE is hereby given, that on Wednesday, the 5th day of November next the following property will be offered for sale by Public Auction, at the office of the ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY, in the Town of Sandwich, at 3 P. M., the said property being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale contained in a certain mortgage thereof, dated the 6th day of October, 1855, from WILLIAM A. RITCHIE to the President and Treasurer of the said Society, registered in the Essex Registrar Office, and a certain Chattel Mortgage thereof, between the same parties, dated the 10th day of October, 1855, filed in the office of the Clerk of the County Court of the County of Essex, at Sandwich, to wit:

The term of years' estate and interest of the said W. A. Ritchie, of and in part of Lot No. 71 in the first Concession of the Township of Sandwich in the County of Essex, together with the buildings erected thereon for a planing machine and office, and the engine, boiler and machinery thereon, and the dock or wharf built thereon, and all improvements and erections on the said premises.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,
TORONTO, 25th July, 1856.

To Emigrants & Others Seeking LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD,

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Ferral's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," (leading to the Lake Muskako, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskako, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country under Dr. French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 35 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence North to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order, The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings The Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed; after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from the obligation of building and of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot. The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as can be put up in four days by five men, The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the erection is small: the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, are, in sections of Canada West, capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land—some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care and covered from wet—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £6 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settlers at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labor.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords material for good roads during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the earth, not only facilitates communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the mere lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River—an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of eight millions of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the Shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken and will be completed in the present year: its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean, These projected works are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

AYER'S PILLS

Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

JULES HAUEL, Esq., the well known perfumer, of Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, whose choice products are found at almost every toilet, says:

"I am happy to say of your CATHARTIC PILLS, that I have found them a better family medicine, for common use, than any other within my knowledge. Many of my friends have realized marked benefits from them, and coincide with me in believing that they possess extraordinary virtues for driving out diseases and curing the sick. They are not only effectual, but safe and pleasant to be taken—qualities which must make them valued by the public when they are known."

The venerable Chancellor WARDLAW writes from Baltimore, 15th April, 1854:

"DR. J. C. AYER—Sir: I have taken your Pills with great benefit, for the listlessness, languor, loss of appetite, and Bilious headache, which has of late years overtaken me in the spring. A few doses of your Pills cured me. I have used your Cherry Pectoral many years in my family for coughs and colds with unfailing success. You make medicines which cure; and I feel it a pleasure to commend you for the good you have done and are doing."

JOHN F. BEATTY, Esq., Sec. of the Penn. Railroad Co. says:

"Sir: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicines, having derived very material benefit from the use of both your Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. I am never without them in my family, nor shall I ever consent to be, while my means will procure them."

The widely renowned S. S. STEVENS, M. D., of Wentworth, N. H., writes:

"Having used your CATHARTIC PILLS in my practice, I certify from experience that they are an invaluable purgative. In cases of disordered functions of the liver, causing headache, indigestion, costiveness, and the great variety of diseases that follow, they are a surer remedy than any other. In all cases where a purgative remedy is required, I confidently recommend these Pills to the public, as superior to any other I have ever found. They are sure in their operation, and perfectly safe—qualities which make them an invaluable article for public use. I have for many years known your Cherry Pectoral as the best Cough medicine in the world; and these Pills are in no wise inferior to that admirable preparation for the treatment of diseases."

"Acton, Me., Nov. 25, 1853.

"DR. J. C. AYER—Dear Sir: I have been afflicted from my birth with scrofula in its worst form, and now, after twenty years' trial, and an untold of amount of suffering, have been completely cured in a few weeks by your Pills. With what feelings of rejoicing I write can only be imagined when you realize what I have suffered, and how long.

"Never until now have I been free from this loathsome disease in some shape. At times it attacked my eyes, and made me almost blind, besides the unendurable pain; at others it settled in the scalp of my head, and destroyed my hair, and has kept me partly bald all my days; sometimes it came out in my face, and kept it for months a raw sore.

"About nine weeks ago I commenced taking your Cathartic Pills, and now am entirely free from the complaint. My eyes are well, my skin is fair, and my hair has commenced a healthy growth; all of which makes me feel already a new person.

"Hoping this statement may be the means of conveying information that shall do good to others, I am, with every sentiment of gratitude, Yours, &c., MARIA RICKER."

"I have known the above named Maria Ricker from her childhood, and her statement is strictly true.

ANDREW J. MESERVE,
Overseer of the Portsmouth Manufacturing Co."

CAPT. JOEL PRATT, of the ship Marion, writes from Boston, 20th April, 1854:

"Your Pills have cured me from a bilious attack which arose from derangement of the Liver, which had become very serious. I had failed of any relief by my Physician, and from every remedy I could try; but a few doses of your Pills have completely restored me to health. I have given them to my children for worms, with the best effects. They were promptly cured. I recommended them to a friend for costiveness, which had troubled him for months; he told me in a few days they had cured him. You make the best medicine in the world; and I am free to say so."

Read this from the distinguished Solicitor of the Supreme Court, whose brilliant abilities have made him well known, not only in this but the neighboring States.

"New Orleans, 5th April, 1854.

"Sir: I have great satisfaction in assuring you that myself and family have been very much benefited by your medicines. My wife was cured, two years since, of a severe and dangerous cough, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then has enjoyed perfect health. My children have several times been cured from attacks of the Influenza and Croup by it. It is an invaluable remedy for these complaints. Your CATHARTIC PILLS have entirely cured me from a dyspepsia and costiveness, which has grown upon me for some years,—indeed, this cure is much more important, from the fact that I had failed to get relief from the best Physicians which this section of the country affords, and from any of the numerous remedies I had taken.

"You seem to us, Doctor, like a providential blessing to our family, and you may well suppose we are not unmindful of it. Yours respectfully,

LEAVITT THAXTER."

"Senate Chamber, Ohio, April 5th, 1854.

"DR. J. C. AYER—Honored Sir: I have made a thorough trial of the CATHARTIC PILLS, left me by your agent, and have been cured by them of the dreadful Rheumatism under which he found me suffering. The first dose relieved me, and a few subsequent doses have entirely removed the disease. I feel in better health now than for some years before, which I attribute entirely to the effects of your CATHARTIC PILLS. Yours with great respect,

LUCIUS B. METCALF."

The above are all from persons who are publicly known where they reside, and who would not make these statements without a thorough conviction that they were true.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass.

And sold by Geo. & Geo. A. Bullock, Sandwich; D. Ouellette, Windsor.

SOWING WHEAT ON CLOVER SOD.—In one of the back volumes of the Ohio Cultivator, (vol. 2, 175, an experienced farmer, "as the result of repeated experiments," recommends the following mode of preparing clover sod for wheat. We should like to hear from any of our readers who have tried this plan. In this region, unless the land is very clean, we should stand a chance to get more grass than either wheat or clover:

"If I had a good clover sod, (not bine grass,) I would not feed a man and his horses to plow it more than once for me.—My mode is, to mow the first crop of clover, then let the second crop grow up, and as soon one-third of it get ripe, put the plow in and sow the wheat immediately. In plowing, I do not want my ground 'cut and covered,' but all of it stirred. By this mode of turning in half-ripened clover, I have my ground well seeded with clover—better than where I have sown the seed in the spring. I cannot be persuaded to plow ground before harvest, and then stir it several times before seeding. Even if the crop of wheat may be better, I believe it is injurious to the ground."

WHEAT ON OAT STUBBLE.—An experienced farmer says he has had very good wheat after oats by adopting the following mode of preparation of crops: Manure each ground well in the spring, which he believes is the best time to apply manure, plow it in deep; work the corn shallow, so as not to disturb the manure; plow shallow the next spring for oats; and in the fall plow deep, so as to bring up the manure, (which has now become fully rotten,) for wheat. Let the oat stubble lie thick enough, and and dry enough, burn it off; which will make the ground in first rate order for plowing, and kills the seeds of noxious weeds. If the seeds of weeds get in with the manure by putting it on the corn ground, there is a better chance of killing them than when plowed in with stubble for a crop of grain.

LOOK OUT FOR EARLY FROSTS.—Tender flowers for green houses and parlors must be removed from the earth by the last of September, that they may begin their season fresh and free from discoloration or weakness from early frosts. Hardy and half-hardy annuals, that are yet blooming in open beds in the time of the first frosts, will be much longer in flower, by throwing a light covering over them nights, as netting or sheets, supported by chairs, or props, or branches, from breaking the stems. Those plants suffer first from frosts, that have most succulent (juicy) stems, (except those naturally tender,) and those in the damp est ground. This why Dahlonni and professional gardeners drain the subsoil of their parterres, and use light, dry upper soils, and build rockeries from which water naturally escapes. Some herbaceous plants may be kept along many weeks later than usual in flower by protecting them as above; and lawns can more nights, and strewing a little leaves, or straw, to retain heat, and throw off water. These protectors, or sand, or ashes laid carefully over the roots and about the collars of delicate ligneous plants, will preserve them from year to year, through ordinary winters.

CATHARTIC PILLS

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and, by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive field for their virtues, by all classes, Physicians, and Patients, has shown cures of dangerous diseases almost beyond belief, were they not substantiated by evidence of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give Directions for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

FOR COSTIVENESS.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as to gently move the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure of one complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while under a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, which is sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take small doses — from one to four — to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do, and the Sanothaxy, Sodyhorn, and soudown of dyspepsia will rapidly disappear. When it has gone, don't forget what cured you.

FOR A FOUL STOMACH, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength is restored to the system.

FOR NERVOUSNESS, SICK HEADACHE, NAUSEA, Pain in the Stomach, Bad or Sick, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until the above complaints disappear.

FOR SCROFULA, ERYSIPELAS, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the bowels open. The eruptions and sores usually soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many discarded ulcers and sores have been healed up by the purifying and searching effect of these Pills, and some disgusting diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have been completely yielded to their influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health. Patients! your duty to society and to God requires you to shield yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the endless diseases of the skin, when your own system wants cleansing.

TO PURIFY THE BLOOD, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which now the seeds of horrible diseases will be completely yielded to the influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health. Patients! your duty to society and to God requires you to shield yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the endless diseases of the skin, when your own system wants cleansing.

TO PURIFY THE BLOOD, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which now the seeds of horrible diseases will be completely yielded to the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement — either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the Liver. Torpidity and congestion vitiate the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is disastrous to the whole system, because the food remains in the stomach undigested by no other cause. Indigestion is the symptom. Obstruction of the duct which empties the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. This produces Jaundice, with a long and dangerous train of evils. Costiveness, or alternately costiveness and diarrhœa, prevails. Feverish symptoms, languor, low spirits, weariness, restlessness, and melancholy, with sometimes inability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness; sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become a greenish yellow; the stomach acid; the bowels sore to the touch; the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious diarrhœa, dysentery, or cholera. A medicine or two or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove in most cases all these troubles. It is unwise to bear such pains when you can cure them for 25 cents.

REMEMBER, GENTLE, and all Infallibleatory Pills are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of those Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, to move the bowels gently, but regular.

AS A DINNER PILL, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be made more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

No. 1, CHEAP HOUSE.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square foot of ground, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1856. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. KNIGHT, JAMES SCOWDEN and R. W. RAY.

TERMS: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.— Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the ILLUSTRATED HORTICULTURIST for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE

AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogism from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE

Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the Editorial Department of the same, this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to render the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING,

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this now roughest and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire cover a routine of accounts as embodied in ac.ual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Actbe study, rather than more routine and retail formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results by principles, so his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTEND COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of Reading Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentleman, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.
N.B.—For particulars send for Catalogues and Circulars by mail.

Paddy Aroon---A ballad.

(From Godey's Lady's Book.)

"Now don't you now, Paddy! be easy Aroon!
My mother will scold me for staying,
We met in the daylight and yonder's the moon,
And the faries will soon be a playing,
So don't you now Paddy Aroon!

Now don't you now, Paddy! keep coaxing me so,
I'll have to do penace for staying,
'Twas so the last time that I met you, you know,
For a week I went fasting and praying.
So don't you now, Paddy Aroon!

So don't you now, Paddy, my own Bouchal dear,
For the bridal be keeping a bother,
Sure you've been my own boy, for a day and a year,
And won't be constant another?
So don't you now, Paddy Aroon?

Good night to you, Paddy; don't trouble your mind,
For the bridal; the more is the sorrow,
We've a cow --and a cabin---and all things to find?
And the money's not easy to borrow,
So don't you now, Paddy Aroon?

Terrific Balloon Adventure.

"You are about to witness Monsieur G's ascension," said a gentleman to me as I entered the enclosure devoted to the aeronatic display. He was an entire stranger to me but not being superstitious in matters of etiquette, we might suppose "a gentleman of distinction" to be, I did not object to this brusque mode of introduction, and so civilly answered "Yes."

"But, I shall go farther to see in than you will, continued the gentleman; "I intend to ascend with Monsieur G."

"You may go farther and fare worse," said I.

"You are pleased to be witty," said he; "But I intend to make some examination of these upper regions for myself—to ascertain whether stars celestial are on duty during the day, or whether theirs is as much a sinecure as the office of our terrestrial stars' terrestrial. Would you like to ascend with us?"

"No thank you kindly," said I; "In getting into the clouds one might lose oneself—the way is likely to be mist! Every one to his taste, the earth has such charms for me that I would not change a spaleful of it for cubic miles of the blue emphyreon. I'm no poet."

Vain declaration! How little did I imagine the horrors that awaited me! How little did I forsee my dreadful fate in hanging between the heavens and the earth a spectacle to laughing men, giggling women, and hooping boys!

We entered the enclosure. There was the vast silken bubble, puffing out its hollow cheeks like the face of a fat clown when laughing, and rising and tugging away at the ropes as if impatient to leave our society.

"You will not accompany me said my friend; to which I replied in the negative.

"Perhaps the gentleman would assist in cutting the ropes said the aeronaut, in French which similarly enough I understood at that moment, though I never before or since ventured to exhibit my knowledge."

"Certainly," said I" with pleasure."

"Thank you" said the aeronaut; "please take your station."

He and my friend entered the car. I grasped one of the ropes and awaited the order. In a moment more it came.

"Cut," said one voice. "No hold on," said another.

I was bewildered, and did both. When the others cut I did the same, and with the direction to hold on, I grasped the end of the rope still near me, and "held on." In a moment more I was fifty feet from the ground.

Imagine my "suspense!" There was I, like a freshly caught fish, dangling as the end of the line, with the balloon representing the float. I cried out to my friend and the aeronaut but in vain. The spectators below thinking I was some aerial acrobat, who was about to turn fifty double somersets and then alight upon his feet before them, cheered sufficiently to drown my voice. The parties in the car could not see me. But, by the last that swung occasionally over the side, I knew they were bowing to the crowd below. Meanwhile I was swinging like a pendulum below them with only ten fingers to sustain the weight of one hundred and eighty pounds (I'm rather stout) and to preserve me from being thinly spread over the ground beneath, from "hailing the lean earth" with my human form divine. What an age of terror! The dome of St. Paul's became a parcel; men became nine pins; and fine gothic churches began to look like so many chicken-coops.

In the meantime my fingers stiffened but I clutched the rope with the energy of despair. I had long ceased calling; I had exhausted myself. Suddenly a cold perspiration broke out upon me; I knew my hour had come. My fingers were slowly slipping down the rope! Oh! these agonizing moments! inch by inch I approached my doom. First the left hand lost its hold; and then as I felt the end slipping by the little finger of the right, I gave a brief prayer and fell——OUT OF BED!

Being as I before observed, a corpulent man, my fall had shaken the whole house and the alarmed inmates aroused from "sweet slumbers" were violently knocking at the door, which had the effect of restoring me to consciousness, when I discovered that my "very terrific balloon ascent" was nothing more than a nightmare, superinduced, I am led to believe by the festivities usual on Christmas day, in which I may say I indulged somewhat on Monday last, in——No! I will not betray my friends; but allow me to tell you, dear reader, that such a Christmas dinner as they gave is not to be sneezed at.

Mahometan Honesty.

Mahometan honesty strikes the Christian in the East more forcibly than any other trait of character. There seems to be no distress so deep, and no temptation so great as to induce a follower of the Prophet to take want does not belong to him, or in any pecuniary way to wrong friend or foe.—The history of human society does not show an instance where the teachings of any one man has made such lasting impressions as Mahomet's in this particular. Centuries have passed since he has gone, but his standard of honesty has not been lowered among his followers—and no Christian community in Europe or America, can in this begin to compare with them. Theft is a crime unknown to them; and but one single instance of robbery has happened in Turkey for twenty years. A recent writer, speaking on this point says:

"While traveling, it is not uncommon to see a Janissary enter the Cafine, heave several bags of gold in the corner and go out to sleep with his horse! A merchant returning from Smyrna, traveling early in the morning, saw a horse tied to an olive tree, and several bags lying on the ground. Curiously led him to examine them—he found that they all contained gold and that several pieces had nearly worked through the cloth. On looking around he saw a Janissary at some distance in a profound sleep. 'Friend,' said the Merchant, on waking him, 'whose gold is that?' 'I have charge of it,' was the reply. 'But are you not afraid to leave it there?' 'No,' said the Janissary, 'it can't run away.' 'But travelers may steal it,' said the Frank. They can't steal it!' replied the Turk, 'for it belongs to a man in Smyrna.

Singular Bottle Stories.

Capt. Beecher, editor of the English Nautical Magazine, has compiled, within the last ten years, the following curious voyages of bottles thrown into the sea by unfortunate navigators: A good many bottles thrown into the sea next to the African coast, found their way to Europe. The bottle seems to have anticipated the Austral Panama route, having travelled from the Panama Isthmus to the Irish coast. Another crossed the Atlantic from the Canaries to Nova Scotia. Three or four bottles, thrown into the sea by Greenland mariners on Davis's Strait, landed on the Northwest coast of Ireland. Another one made a very curious trip; it swam from the South Atlantic Ocean to the West coast of Africa and passed Gibraltar, where long the Portuguese of France, passing Brest, and was finally picked up on Jersey Island; the direct line touches at least all these places, and make it more than probable that it took this route. One bottle was only found after sixteen years swimming; one after fourteen, and two after ten years. A few only traveled more than one year, and one only five years.—This last was sent off by the captain of Race Horse, on the 17th of April, in the Carribbean Sea, and was found on the 22d, after having gone through three degrees of longitude in a Western direction. Capt. McClure, of the Investigator, well known since his discovery of the Northwest Strait, threw a bottle into the sea in 1850 on his way to Behring's Strait. It swam 3,600 miles in 209 days, and was picked up on the Honduras coast. A work like that of Capt. Beecher's must fail to throw some light on the many different observations of the current of the sea.

Miscellany.

LOVE TO US.—Love is the great principle of Christianity, and the peculiar strength of it lies in this, that it is love to us. It is not merely that our feelings are excited towards a lovely being, but that they are excited in us through experiences of his having first loved us.

SKULLS IN COPPER KETTLES.—A correspondent informs us that, one day last week, on the Coldwater Road, in North Simcoe, a pit was discovered by two men who were walking through the woods. Having come to a hollow place in the ground which attracted their attention, and which, upon further examination, turned out to be a bed of human bones, they procured spades, and the men went to work in right earnest, and exhumed, after digging about five feet deep, fifteen copper kettles, or pots, in a good state of preservation. One of the kettles contained twelve skulls, and in another was found a conch shell. Quantities of bun an hair, parts of Indian dresses, wampum, and other crues of the aborigines, were also dug out—besides part of a dress, which indicated the possessor to have been a French man. The hole was about ten feet in circumference, and five feet deep.—Leader.

"Little boys should be seen and not heard," as the boy said when he could not reach the cake.

The reason that the organ in Dr. S——'s church did not "play," last Sabbath, says a Boston paper, was caused we learned, by its having a new "stop" put to it. It was added, we believe, by the deputy sheriff.

A man died of apoplexy, the other day, in Michigan. The next morning the coroner held an inquest, when the following verdict was returned: "Died from a visitation of one bedstead, eight cold potatoes, and a fried pie." Sensible jury that.

A PUZZLE—I tied a knot in a cord of wood, ‖ I caused the wood to grow, ‖ I now would like to see the man, ‖ That made a hay-cock crow.

MEETING HIS MATCH.—Huntington, the great forger, now in the Tombs in New York was placed in the cell with another prisoner a day or two since. The chap succeeded in robbing him of $200, and was detected in the act of counting it in a letter. When discovered he threw the letter and money into the Croton water pipe in the cell, from which it was recovered. The thief was locked up in another cell, and will be tried for this larceny.

ARRIVAL OF MONSTER SNAKES.—The brig Planet, just arrived from Africa, the Boston Traveller says, brought to Salem, Mass., several monster snakes—anacondas; one eighteen feet long, and another thirty-five feet in length. These snakes, when at liberty, are ravenous and dangerous, and will seize animals of large size, and after crushing them so as to break all their bones, will swallow them whole. The crew of the Planet report that the largest of these snakes had devoured a woman and a child before it was taken. On Saturday they were preparing to feed it with a good sized dog.

MRS. King near Kingston (N. Y.) was recently taken sick, and her husband seized the opportunity to elope with a handsome servant girl named Miss Martin. Arrived in Albany, Miss M. eloped with a young man named Cornelius, and Mr. King's money.—Mr. King being penitent, returned home and found that his wife had eloped with a dry goods clerk named Jeffers, and all the moveable articles in the house. Whereupon Mr. K. started off in pursuit, considering himself a deeply injured man. We don't know about that. [So says the Oswego Times].

MORE ARRIVALS OF PURE BREEDS.—On Saturday last our enterprising townsmen, F. W. Stone, Esq., had another arrival of Stock, purchased by him in England, viz: 1 Durham Bull; 2 Durham Cows and Calf; 1 pure-bred Cotswold Shearling Rams; 21 Shearling Southdown Ewes, and 2 do. do. Rams and 14 pure-bred Berkshire Pigs.—Galt Reporter.

"Don't act so, Isaac, dear," said Mrs Partington, as Ike was raising particular fuss about the kitchen, and throwing everything into confusion in a vain attempt to find his hat. "People won't by will say you are a non pompous mentis, as they did about poor Mr. Smith—the doctor says you are of the rebellious sanguinary temperature, and heaven knows what you would do if it should have a tendency to the head—per, haps you'd die of a suggestion of the brain."

IMMENSE ENGINE CRANE.—At the Mersey Steel and Iron Works, at Liverpool, there has been made the largest double-throw or locomotive crank ever forged, which, when complete, will weigh some seventeen tons. It consists of masses of wrought iron welded together, and completed by steam hammer of nine tons weight. The forging of the crank in detail—each end of it being subject to operation separately. The masses of iron were suspended by a crane, and the portion to be wrought was inserted in an immense furnace and completely surrounded by a fierce heat.—The glowing metal was then moved by a crane, and guided by thirty-five men to the anvil beneath the steam hammer, the ponderous strokes of which brought it by degrees to the required solidity and structure.

We find the following notice of changes of Bank officers in the Brantford Courier:—

We understand that the following changes will shortly take place in the Commercial Bank. Mr. Campbell, Cashier of the office at Montreal, will receive the appointment of Inspector of Agencies; Mr. Kerby succeeds him as Cashier, Mr. McKinstry retires from the Cashiership at Hamilton, and Mr. Park takes his place. Mr. Finley, Agent at Belleville, is to be transferred to Brockville, and the present Agent there goes to Belleville.

It is rumored that important changes are about to take place in the Bank of Upper Canada. It is said that Mr. Ridout, the Cashier, will retire on the 1st of January next, and that Mr. Hinds, the Cashier of the Kingston office, will take his place.

DEATH OF LADY O'BRIEN.—The Irish press announce the decease of the Dowager Lady O'Brien, at an advanced age. By this event Mr. William Smith O'Brien receives an increase to his already large patrimonial possessions. And should he survive his brother, Lord Inchiquin, the inheritance of him would also come into his possession. Lady O'Brien, we are happy to add, saw, before her death, that son, for the commutation of whose punishment she supplicated, in '48, at the very foot of the British throne, restored to his native country, and to his family.

A ragged individual was saluted by a little urchin thus, "I say, you sir, don't you belong to the army?" "No!" was the indignant reply." "Well," said the boy," I thought you did as you are out under arms.

We learn in the Echo Universal, published at the Hague: "Correspondence from London informs us that our manifest plenipotentiary at the English Court has received instructions from the Hague to make overtures of a project of marriage between the heir presumptive of the crown of Holland —the Prince of Orange—with a princess, daughter of the Queen and Prince Albert. This project is connected in people's minds with the excursion recently made by the Prince of Orange in England.

CENTRAL AMERICA.—The San Francisco Bulletin gives an account of a returned Filibuster:—"The personal appearance of our informant is probably the most truthful representation that could be given of the country and its effects upon the Anglo-Saxon race. He is the very picture of death itself, and has escaped from the country barely with his life, which a majority of his comrades will never be able to do. He says that of the 125 who went down with him only 61 are now living." The filibuster admits:—"The course pursued by Walker and his army has engendered a most deadly hatred in the minds of all classes of natives, and they entertain the worst of feelings toward all Americans, and desire opportunities to seek revenge, and wreak their vengeance upon all they can get hold of."

"Sir," said a lady to the Rev. Wm. Romaine of London, "I like the doctrine you preach, and think I can give up everything but one." What is that, madam?" "Cards, sir." "You think you could not be happy without them?" "No, sir, I could not." "Then, madam, they are your God, and to them you must look for salvation." This pointed and faithful reply is said to have led to her conversion.

A CHARITABLE MAN.—Rev. Mr Siggens said, "I am a charitable man, and think every one entitled to his opinion—and never cherish malice against Mr. Mulberry, who has indirectly called me a sinner; but, sir, if the Lord has a thunderbolt to spare, I think it would be well bestowed upon dear brother Mulberry's head."

Life passes imperceptibly; you see not that it approaches to its limit; and yet it is approaching. The night cometh. Let it pass; but let not the steps of time be swifter than the steps of our obedience; let not moments succeed more quickly than generous and kind affections shall spring up in our hearts; let us be diligent in proportion as the time is short; let our life, brief as it is in duration, frail as it is in tenure, be strong in its bold of virtue—belong to the series of good deeds—and long endure in the remembrance of the good and the just.

The Boston Post says that a young man a member of an evangelical church, advertises for board in a pious family where his christian example would be considered a sufficient compensation.

An old lady in Pensylvania had a great aversion to rye, and never could eat it in any form. "Till of late," said she, "they got to making it into whiskey, and I find that I can now and then worry down a little."

THE NEW YORK FORGERIES.—Every day, literally, adds to the amount of Huntington's forgeries brought to light in New York. The total, up to Wednesday inclusive, was $544,361 57c.; nor was this all, for the papers promise "stupendous developments" for the next day, to swell the sum. The New York Times says:—

"The sufferers by this great fraud—the parties who discounted the notes—are not known to the public, and probably will not be, as they refuse to prosecute in their own names, fearing that by so doing they would injure their financial standing. The spurious notes are all poorly executed, and scarcely any of the signatures resemble the genuine, but so well was Huntington's position regarded, and so shrewd did he manage, that a doubt did not for a moment pass the minds of his victims. Some are evidently very heavy losers, but so far we have heard of no embarrassments occasioned thereby."

The California Mining Journal says, that the Gold fields of Australia are producing more gold than ever, and that California is likewise adding considerably to her former products of precious metal.

UP OR DOWN.—In going on board a Mississippi steamboat the other day, Mr. Jones met Mr. Smith. "Which way are you going, Smith—up or down?" "That depends on circumstances. If I sleep over the boiler, up—if in the cabin, down."

BEAT THIS WHO CAN!—We have now in our possession a sample of Wheat, which we venture to affirm cannot be beat in this Province. It is of the bluestem variety, and weighs over 68 lbs to the bushel. The kernel is plump, and in fact, the whole appearance of the grain is par excellence. It was grown by Mr. John Rose, near Glenmorris, who informed us the other day that the yield of wheat on his farm this season averaged over thirty bushels per acre. We invite our agricultural friends to bring in their samples of wheat and compare them with what we have in our office.—Ayr Observer.

Imperial Decorations.

From the Montreal Transcript.)

It may not perhaps be generally known that Lord Clarendon has declined to permit the jurors and exhibitors who received from Louis Napoleon the decoration of the Legion of Honour, permission to wear the order. Such, however, is the case. A memorial was presented to his Lordship, signed by thirty-two of the Legionaries, and among others by Sir W. E. Logan, and T. S. Hunt, Esq., enclosing copies of three decrees of his Majesty, appointing the subscribers and other members of the Imperial Order. The memorialists also represented that this was in recognition to the public services they had rendered to science and industry; that there was no order of merit established in Great Britain for the reward of civil services of persons who are not the immediate servants of the Crown; and that the acceptance of the Queen's approval, shown by her granting permission to the recipients to wear the insignia of the order conferred upon them, would much enhance the approval of their services so honourably acknowledged by her august ally—by acknowledging the memorial, and declining to accede to its prayer, Lord Clarendon refers the subscribers to the established regulations respecting foreign orders. According to these, no British subject can be allowed to accept or wear the insignia of a foreign order, unless they shall have been conferred for active and distinguished service before the enemy, either at sea or in the field, or unless such British subjects shall have been actually and entirely employed beyond her Majesty's dominions in the service of the foreign sovereign by whom the order was conferred. These regulations, Lord Clarendon says, admit of no exception, and he regrets that it is not in his power to comply with the wishes of the memorialists.

The same rule holds good in regard to the Italian Orders conferred by the Pope upon Mr. Viger and Mr. Wilson: and these Orders they are thus not entitled to wear. Mr. Hunt, too, must relinquish "the little bit of red," which is attached to the breast of his coat, and excited so much attention at Albany in September last.

But the fact of this refusal on the part of the Home authorities, for reasons of etiquette, to recognise the appointments, has directed public attention more firmly to the subject of the want of an English Order of Merit. This must be felt more strongly than ever; and institutions which have logic and State necessity in their favour, must sooner or later answer to the need. We cannot believe that men will have to wait in vain for the order of Victoria.

Census of Ireland

The sixth and concluding part of the Census of Ireland for 1851, has just been issued from the Registrar-General's Office. We find a careful abstract of the tables in the Irish correspondence of the Morning Herald. The report gives a picture of the present condition of the people, notwithstanding that it purports to relate to the census of 1851; and we learn that, instead of a recovery of the population from some of the loss by the dire famine of 1848-9, the number of people in this year, 1850 is lower by nearly half a million than it was in 1851. There is no speculation in this. On the first of March 1851, the population amounted to 6,552,385, and on the 1st of January last it numbered but 6,065,783—The falling off is attributed, to a certain extent, to emigration, but there are other causes as well. The estimated number of births far exceeds the number of deaths, and more than this difference is accounted for by emigration. In reference to the increase of English and Scotch residents in Ireland, between the years 1841 and 1851, the Census Commissioners say "of those born in England and Wales, there were resident in Ireland in 1841, 21,552 persons, whilst in 1851, the numbers were 84,454. Of natives of Scotland there were in Ireland 5,884 persons in 1841, whilst in 1851 numbers were 23,209. The greatest number of English was found in the city of Dublin, which contained 7,582 persons in 1851, who had been born in England, whilst in 1841 there were only 4,264; in the town of Belfast the number of English increased from 888 in 1841, to 2,226 in 1851; in the town of Drogheda it increased from 95 in 1841 to 269 in 1851; in the city of Cork from 923 in 1841 to 1556 in 1851; and in the county of Cork from 1468 to 3653 in the same period; an increase having taken place in 1851 in the number of English residents in Ireland in every county, city, and large town. The greatest number of Scotch was found in 1851; the city of Dublin contained the largest amount in 1841. The following places show a decrease in the number of Scotch in 1851 compared with 1841: Carrickfergus town, Drogheda town, and the counties of Carlow, Dublin, Galway, Kilkenny, Kings, Louth, Mayo, Monaghan, Roscommon, Tipperary, Waterford, Wexford, Wicklow. The number of persons born in foreign countries resident in Ireland in 1841 was 4471; in 1851, 5583. In four of the counties the number of persons living in them, who were natives of foreign countries, decreased between 1841 and 1851; these were Cavan, Meitrim, Longford, and Sligo. The report embraces some interesting statistical facts relating to the number of military serving in Ireland in the time of taking the Census, the occupations of the men before they joined the army, and the religion of each individual; it also contains tables relating to the farm stock, houses of the people, education, &c.; and in concluding observations, addressed to his excellency the Lord Lieutenant, it is dwelt upon as a gratifying fact, that although the population had been diminished in so remarkable a manner by famine, disease and emigration between 1841 and 1851, and had been since decreasing, the result of the Irish census of 1852 are, on the whole, satisfactory, demonstrating as they do the general advancement of the country—that the extent of arable land and the value of farm stock have increased since 1841—that the worst class of houses is being replaced by better—that a smaller proportion of families is dependent on their own manual labor for support—and that the education of the people has favourably progressed.

Alarming State of Paris.

Each day brings forth its fresh alarm; and reports, some of of them founded on appearance alone, others possessing no foundation whatever, have been rife throughout the city during the whole week. On Thursday last, it was ascertained that the Faubourg St. Antoine had given tokens of uneasiness during the whole day, and that the police were on the alert. Towards evening it was reported that groups of workmen had been dispersed upon the Place de la Bastille, that they had disappeared in the most mysterious manner, and that the police, with all its tact and cleverness, had not been able to learn why the Faubourg St. Antoine was completely deserted that evening, scarcely any of the workmen having returned home, although the ateliers were well attended as usual, the next day. The only thing known in relation to this fact those drives from the Place de la Bastille look to the Barriere du Trone, and thence the road to Vincennes.—The next morning, in spite of the vigilance which had been exercised during the night, the walls were found placarded with inflammatory appeals, such as—A bas l'Empereur! Mort aux Spectateurs! Le pain a deux sous! and other propositions of the same unpleasant nature. On Saturday the woods of Vincennes were all alive with merriment—groups seated on the grass were singing, in every direction, the song of "Gilligeh," which is the one forbidden song of the hour. At last as the gendarmes approached a particular group, the strains became low and was taken up by another at a little distance, in the midst of much laughter and jeering at this ridiculous aspect under which authority was displaying itself. The day passed away thus, but at night the merry-makers laughed no longer. The whole 460 of the number were marched off to the various prisons, whence to be despatched we cannot tell. It is evidently against the workmen and students that the choler of Indefatigable One is mostly directed, for in the case above-mentioned the singers of the offensive poem were arrested, while its author, although well known to all Paris, goes scatheless and unharmed. At nights the Boulevard muttering to himself snatches of treasonable melodies—and from the pockets of his paletote may be seen sticking corners of papers upon which is written rebellion enough to condemn a whole legion of jolly carpenters and sailors. The measure of Sunday last is condemned by all—even by the Bonapartists themselves—and it is looked upon as equivalent to an acknowledgment on the part of the Government that the lists are open and the combat begun.—It is, indeed, regarded as the myst impolitic step which has yet been taken, and as proof that it has already brought forth its bitter fruits, it is whispered about town this morning that few if any of the cabinet-makers of the Faubourg St. Antoine had appeared at their work this morning. Many things are bruited about concerning this desertion of the ateliers, each trade as it were by turns—the carpenters first, then the tailors, and now the cabinet-makers. Some say the masters know well enough where to find their truant workmen, all the while they are pretending such consternation and dismay at their defection and the loss to trade which it causes.—Paris Correspondent of the Atlas.

Storm on the Lake—Loss of the Steam Tug O. N. Chaplin.

(From the London Free Press, 3rd)

On Friday afternoon another disaster took place at Port Stanley, which resulted in the loss of the steam tug O. N. Chaplin which has been employed in hauling out the small fleet on the Lake. It appears that the tug, with a crew of nine men, went out as usual, when by some accident a chain connected with the machinery became entangled in one of the wheels and deranged the rudder so that the tug became unmanageable. A heavy sea running at the time swept over her and put out the fires, so that it was left entirely at the mercy of the waves. The distress of the vessel having been noticed from the shore, Captain Barrow put off in the Telegraph to render assistance, accompanied by Captain Kinney, of the Empress, Captain Varner, of the Everett, and Captain Goodeve, of the Frontenac. They were delayed some time in consequence of the obstruction offered by the wreck of the Royal Oak, which was sunk at the mouth of the harbour on Wednesday night, and which had to be nearly cut through before the Telegraph could get out. On getting to sea, Captain Barrow found it running very high, but proceeded on his search with fearless and praiseworthy manner. After cruising about for some hours they were unable to see anything of the tug, and returned to Port Stanley, when to his great satisfaction, as well as that of those with him, he found that the crew of the O. N. Chaplin had got safe and sound to Port Stanley. It seems that after the tug had been taken out to a considerable distance in the Lake she began to drift in shore, and eventually went aground at a place four miles east of the harbour, and against a bank about fifty feet high. Here all the crew jumped out and managed to scramble up the cliff, and so reached home. The steam tug was now dashed violently against the shore and has become a complete wreck. It was valued at $7,000 and was owned by Captain Forbier, of Buffalo, who has a partial insurance to that amount. So great has been the stress of weather on Lake Erie that the Telegraph had been detained in port during six days, and though she is uninsured, and was placed in considerable danger by leaving the harbour in the manner stated, Captain Barrow did not hesitate to imperil his vessel and his life in the attempt to save those of the tug. The other men who accompanied him also displayed very praiseworthy conduct.

Arrival of the Canadian.

QUEBEC, Nov. 3, 1856.

The screw steamship Canadian arrived here this morning, bringing Liverpool dates to the 22nd ult.

The steamship Catradian arrived out on 19th ult.

News, commercially speaking, is of considerable importance.

Breadstuffs declining.

Excitement in the Liverpool cotton market.

The Paris Conference was to reassemble on the 15th of November.

NAPLES.—A German paper states that the King of Naples has urged the cabinets of St. Petersburg, Vienna and Berlin, to conclude in favor of the integrity of the kingdom.

Latest advices state that the preparations for the defence of Naples redoubled. No modification of the ministry has taken place, all remain zealously looking for the allied fleet.

The French squadron was anchored in the roads at Toulon ready to depart. Four Sardinian ships are also ready at Genoa.

An English steamer arrived at Yarcio on the 12th with orders to Admiral Dumas to sail on the 13th. Accordingly 2 steam frigates put to sea the next morning and the remainder of the squadron sailed in the evening.

The decrees which appoint the other members are countersigned by Marshal Narvarrez. The decree declares, as is usual on such occasions in Spain, that the Queen is well satisfied with the distinguished and extraordinary services, zeal, intelligence and devotion of late minister O'Donnell.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, NOVEMBER 6, 1856.

A number of the supporters of the Hon. John Prince met at Amherstburg, for the purpose of celebrating the victory which they had gained, in the contest just closed, by roasting an Ox. A splendid animal had been procured; and had the weather proved favorable, would have been roasted in splendid style. The day was, unfortunately, most disagreeable, but for all that, the assemblage was very large—larger than could be expected, for there were not less than five hundred persons collected, for the purpose of showing how much they rejoiced in their victory. A number of excellent speeches were made, and the Colonel, in his usual happy manner, addressed those of his supporters present. It being impossible to remain long in the open air, as it was intended had the weather been more propitious, as many as could find room, adjourned to the SAYMOUR HOUSE, where an excellent dinner was prepared—for which, by the way, the gentlemanly proprietor is fully competent to provide—every thing that could be wished for to satisfy the inner man, was spread with a liberal hand, and the arrangements connected with the day's rejoicing went off with the very best of feeling, and if we may judge from the tone of the speeches, the hearty cheers that made the house ring again, after each toast, and the jovial songs—the assembly must have enjoyed themselves to their heart's content. Among those present were, Edwin Larwill, Esq., M. P. P., and a number of gentlemen from Kent. Upon the whole there could not have been a pleasanter or more enthusiastic meeting than was witnessed on that day.

The trial of George Brogden, of Port Hope, for the murder of Thomas Henderson, came off before Chief Justice Sir J. B. Robinson, on the 31st October, at the Cobourg Assizes. The circumstances connected with the whole matter created quite an interest in the trial, and no small degree of sympathy for the prisoner Brogden. He has been tried and acquitted by a jury of the country. This verdict will be regarded with general satisfaction, not from the fact of the country being in favor of parties redressing their own wrongs, but from the circumstance that there is no penalty attached to the crime of which the deceased Henderson was guilty. And can it be wondered at, that Brogden, after having his happiness destroyed and his home made desolate, and seeing the object that was the cause of it going unpunished, that he should take the law in his own hands when the law of the land failed to give him the redress which the nature of the circumstances demanded. Such was undoubtedly the position which Brogden was placed in with regard to Henderson.

The application of steam to produce musical sounds, is destined at no distant day, to operate in a manner that will greatly increase the pleasures of the Railway-Travelling community. Nothing can be more grateful to the ears of that class, than to hear that Locomotives can be supplied with a Musical Calliope, which will discourse sweet notes, instead of the very unpleasant rumbling sounds to which they are obliged at present to listen, when travelling by rail. We learn by one of our Exchanges that,

"An engine with the musical calliope attached, passed over the Union Railroad a day or two ago. The arrangement by which the sounds are produced consists of a series of dummy bells, varying in size and length according to the depth or tone of the sound desired to be produced, and running to four or five octaves. The steam is admitted to the interior surface of these bells by a series of slender corresponding tubes, which have been inserted in a small cylinder connected with the boiler. A small wire connects the valve in each of these tubes with a key on the finger board in a small car in the rear of the tender of the engine. This fingerboard resembles that of a piano forte or an organ, and is operated in the same manner."

We are happy to state that a subscription is on foot, for the purpose of procuring some suitable reward for the active services of Samuel Post, Philip Knight, and J. B. Ryan, in detecting and bringing to justice the gang of burglars who have been the terror of the village of Windsor and neighborhood. Subscriptions will be received by Jas. A. Ford, John McCrae and J. H. Wilkinson.

We hope that the public will come forward liberally with their subscriptions, and show that the services of those persons have been appreciated, in ridding the country of a great pest.

From English papers we learn, that rumor says, that James Sadlier is still in Ireland and is daily gaining belief.

"A writ of certiorari has issued from the Court of Queen's Bench, directing the ill formations, &c., upon which a bill of indictment was found at the last assizes by the grand jury as well as the indictment itself, to be forwarded to Dublin the first day of term, Monday, the 3rd of November. This has given rise to the report that it is the intention of Mr. Sadlier to surrender and stand his trial before a metropolitan jury, for conspiring to defraud."

We have noticed in many of our exchanges that Robert Cooper, Esquire, of London is to be appointed to the Judgeship of Huron and Bruce, vacated by the death of Mr. Strachan. Mr. Cooper is known to many in this neighbourhood, who will no doubt be highly pleased when they hear of the selection made by government in this instance. The very best feelings are entertained by the inhabitants of those Counties towards that gentleman, and we learn, have petitioned the government for his appointment to that high office. The Clear Grit journals have, as a matter of course, made a great hubbub at the appointment of a conservative to the Bench, but from the thorough want of principle in that class of journals, we are not at all surprised, that so good a selection should be condemned by them, and particularly as that gentleman has exposed through the columns of the Herald Clear Gritism in its true light.

An Exchange says that there is good sleighing in Oswego, there being from six to eight inches of snow.

The Montreal Herald says that the Governor General has accepted an invitation from the Montreal Railway celebration Committee.

We learn by the Kingston (Jamaica) Colonial Standard of the 8th inst., that it was reported shortly after the arrival of the Parana yesterday, that a revolution had broken out in Hayti against the Emperor Soulouque, which was likely to result in the latter's deposition. No particulars had transpired.

☞ At the Bazaar recently held at Windsor, in aid of the new Episcopal Church, being built there, the very handsome sum of nine hundred dollars was realized, over and above all expenses.

FIRST SNOW.—On Tuesday evening last, snow fell in this neighborhood, for the first time this season.

White Fish have commenced to run, within the last few days, and are being caught at the numerous fisheries upon the Detroit River in great numbers.

BOYDELL'S ENDLESS RAILWAY ENGINE.—A trial of Mr. Boydell's patent endless railway traction engine was made on Tuesday, the 14th instant, in Woolwich Marshes, in the presence of a large body of gentlemen.—Colonel Tulloch, Royal Artillery, directed the experiments on behalf of Government one of the heaviest guns, a 98 pounder weighing 113 cwt 14lb. having been mounted on a wagon, to which were attached eighteen artillery horses, was conveyed to the proposed machine. The traction engine having picked up a gun of equal calibre which, together with the engine and carriages weighed 20 tons 5 cwt., followed and proceeded steadily for some distance; when, from the soft state of the roads, and the small power of the engine—being only eight horses' power—the experiment could not be completed. It was, however, considered that the object of the experiment had been sufficiently realised. The difficulty had been considerably increased by the passage of the preceding wagon, drawn by eighteen, and occasionalle twenty-four horses. This was accompanied by a number of labourers carrying handspikes, with which they assisted in lifting the wheels. It was stated that the Russian Government were prepared to enter into a contract with the patentee to supply them with a large number of these engines.

TELEGRAPHIC IMPROVEMENTS.—Mr. G. H. Ingall, of London, has made some improvements in telegraphic apparatus and communication, which are favourably noted in that city. The action of the apparatus is described by the inventor as follows:—Upon the train leaving the terminus, a wheel is lowered sufficiently to strike a boss placed near the rails on its passing over it, and on the boss being struck, a copper plate on the top of a spring is depressed sufficiently low to break the electric current, which is passing through certain wires; and the circuit being broken, the magnet in a dial apparatus is moved, a tooth wheel thus released, and a needle moved one division, thus indicating the passage of the train.

Great Western Railway.

At a recent meeting of the Shareholders of the Great Western Railway, in London, England, resolutions were passed unanimously pledging upon Mr. Harris the President, and Mr. Radcliffe, the Vice-President, to resign. Great dissatisfaction exists among the English shareholders at the doings of the Canadian Board to the running expenses of the Road, and the application of the earnings to purposes where the capital of the company should be employed. An effort is to be made to transfer the head quarters of the Company to England. The Hon. J. H. Cameron, of Toronto, was present, and advised the shareholders to transfer the Sarnia Branch either to the Grand Trunk, or unite with them in the construction of a line which should be a rival line. We hope to have more full information by this week's steamer.—Herald

Death of Judge Strachan

We regret to have to chronicle the decease of John Strachan Esq., Judge of the County and Division Courts of Huron and Bruce, which after a lengthened and painful illness took place in his father's residence in the city of Toronto on Wednesday the 22nd inst. Mr. Strachan, was the second surviving son of a Bishop of the Episcopal Church of Canada. He was bred to the Law and settled in Goderich several years ago, where besides being Solicitor to the Canada Company and to the Agency of the Bank of Upper Canada, he commanded a very respectable practice in his profession. He was what is called a hard worker, and by industry and assiduous attention to business, gained a very general confidence as a sound Lawyer. Mr. Strachan was appointed Judge of the United Counties of Huron and Bruce in 1855, but a disease of the brain with which he had been afflicted for a number of years, was gradually getting worse, and the death of his eldest son, a fine boy of about nine years old, which occurred a few months ago, seems to have broken his spirit and aggravated that careless malady that was hastening him to the grave. He was only forty-one years of age and leaves a wife and two fine little girls, besides a numerous circle of relatives and acquaintances to lament his death.—Huron Signal.

An Important Produce Case.

The Assize Court yesterday was occupied with an action for damages, of much interest to produce dealers. The case was instituted by Mr. Thos. Brunskill against Mr. R. L. Goodenough of Dundas, an extensive flour dealer, and the latter a broker. The facts of the case elicited were, that in April Mr. Goodenough offered on change 10,000 barrels of flour at $4.75, which was purchased by Mr. Brunskill, through Mr. Grier, of the firm of Heward & Grier, brokers. The conditions of contract were, that the flour was to pass inspection at the usual surprime in Montreal, Boston and New York, and was to be delivered f. o. b. (free on board) at Hamilton, July 1st. These were the original conditions, but as soon as Mr. Goodenough learned that the purchaser was the plaintiff, he said his principal was not satisfied that delivery will occur, and offered to pay for the flour on delivery and accordingly demanded a dollar per barrel down at the time of the making of the contract; this Mr. Brunskill refused to accede to. The contract was not fulfilled, and Mr. Brunskill demanded of Mr. Goodenough damages to the extent of one dollar and a quarter per barrel—12,500. It was proved that the contract might have been fulfilled, as flour from western wheat could be had at Detroit at $4 and $4½, and might have been laid down at Hamilton with profit, at $4.3. The price of Canadian flour at the time of the sale, and the maturity of the contract, was $6 per barrel. A verdict of $4000 was given in favour of the plaintiff Brunskill.—Globe.

We beg to call attention to the letter from Mr. Evans, and to remind those favourable to the application of the Lay endowment for this western portion of Canada, that the adjourned meeting will be held in London on 20th inst. When it is hoped a large number of Laymen will attend.—The Election of Bishop will depend upon a two-third vote of the Clergy and a two-third vote of the laity, that is, suppose there were 90 Clergymen qualified to vote, it would require 60 to vote for the successful candidate, and if there were 300 Laymen qualified to vote, it would require 200 of them to vote also to ensure the success of their candidate. It would not be at all likely to elected if every one of the 90 clergymen voted for him, unless the 200 laity above referred to voted for him, so whoever is bishop, he must be elected by both Clergy and Laity conjointly. In the list of subscriptions to the endowment fund we are surprised to see the very large proportion of the laymen's contributions bear to that of the Laity, knowing how scanty their incomes generally are.—Herald.

CHILD CARRIED OFF BY A BEAR.—One of those fearful incidents occurred near the village of Newboro, on Saturday week, which go so far as to create the thrilling interest in written romance of pioneer's life. Just before sunset, a child five years old was seized in presence of its mother, by a full grown bear, and in spite of its screams, and the frantic efforts of its mother, was borne into the thicket. The alarm was given, and the men, with clubs and fire-arms, commenced searching the woods, but up to Tuesday nothing had been found of it, upon which to base a conjecture with reference to its fate. Bears are quite plenty in this neighborhood, but this is the first instance where human life has been sacrificed by them, though they have frequently carried off stock from the farmers, coming up as in this case, to the door of the house.—Mashtowoc (Wis.) Tribune.

A despatch from Washington says:—Jerome Bonaparte, of Baltimore, cousin to the present Emperor of France, has been stopping at Willard's for several days. It is understood here that he is pressing some propositions upon Secretary Davis, by which he wishes sufficient inducements to be held out to his (Bonaparte's) son to induce him to re-enter the American army.—Leader.

AMONG the arrivals at New York on Wednesday last, were thirty-six soldiers of the British Foreign Legion, who had served in the Crimea. The Tribune says:—"They came in uniform and landed with their knapsacks on their back. At Castle Garden they were received by Mr. Webb of the British Consulate, who accompanied them by way of Troy and Montreal, to the bounty lands in Canada granted to them by the British Government.—Globe.

THE CONNAUGHT RANGERS.—At the grand review of the British troops in Turkey, previous to their embarkation to the Crimea, the Sultan asked Lord Raglan to point him out some particular regiment. His Lordship immediately called attention to the "Guards," I mean a fighting regiment." Lord Raglan, rather a little nettled replied that all British regiments were fighting ones; "But," said he, "if you want to see a regiment very remarkable in that way, please ride this way, and I shall let you see the Connaught Rangers."

ADVICE GRATIS.—Be civil to the woman who bites the end of her gloves. In a balloon don't sit opposite a man with long legs. Take care of your pockets when you go to Exeter Hall! The loan at a loss Office had better be let alone. Tell a woman nothing but what you wish to be told again. Those who live in glass houses had better pull the blinds down. Before washing see that there is a towel at hand. If you have a lawyer for a next door neighbor, you had better not throw your weeds over into his garden.

On Monday evening three large Schooners the Elk, Antelope, and Arcadian, which had been loading wheat off Bayfield entered our harbour being compelled to seek shelter from a strong South westerly gale that sprung up. The first deeply laden, on entering, struck near the north pier and for a few moments seemed in great danger, but succeeded in gaining the harbour in fine style.—Signal.

THE PROVINCIAL SHOW FOR 1857.—At a meeting held at Hamilton, on Wednesday, to make some preliminary arrangements in reference to the provincial exhibition of 1857, it was stated that the County of Brant would contribute to the expenses of the show, £1,000, and the Town of Brantford from £500 to £750.

THE MURDERER MCGARRIE.—The Fergus Freholder, of Saturday says:—The murderer McGarrie was brought to town last evening. He was caught after a good deal of difficulty, near Caledonia. After he was caught, many offered to swear that he was not McGarrie at all; but that his name was Johnson. He tells the story of the murder, with the same unconcern as he would narrate the particulars of a fishing excursion. He appears totally thoughtless of consequence; but does not attempt to deny his guilt. He has been committed to jail to await his trial.

From the Chicago Business Directory recently published, it appears that there are in that city, 62 schools, public and private; 10 daily newspapers, 12 weeklies, 4 monthlies; 22 printing offices; 70 clergymen, 151 physicians, and 273 attorneys.

FIGHTING ON EQUAL TERMS.—Judge A. a celebrated duelist, who had lost his leg, and who was known to be a dead shot, challenged Colonel D., a gentleman humor and attainments. The friends tried to prevent the meeting but to no effect. The parties met on the ground, when Col. D. was asked was he ready.

'No,' he replied.

'What are you waiting for, then?' inquired Judge A's second.

'Why, sir,' said Col. D. 'I have sent my boy into the woods to hunt a bee gum to put my leg in, for I don't intend to give the Judge any advantage over me. You see he has got a wooden leg!'

The whole party roared with laughter, and the thing was so ridiculous that it broke up the fight.

Col. D. was afterwards told that it would sink his reputation.

'Well,' he replied, 'it can't sink it lower than a bullet can.'

'But,' urged his friends, 'the papers will find about it.'

'Well,' said he, 'I would rather fill fifty papers than one coffin.'

No one ever troubled the Colonel after that.

CUNARD LINE TO CANADA.—The Quebec Colonist mentions a rumor that Capt. Lang, of the Cunard steamer, Canada, has been in that city to make arrangements for the purchase of property, to build a warf for the line of steamers to be sent there by the Cunard Company next year.

A GOOD RULE.—The practice of promoting colonial governors appears to be becoming general. Governor Darling of Newfoundland will be the successor at Jamaica, of Sir Henry Barkley, appointed Governor of Victoria.

GOVERNMENT LAND FOR SALE.—The Official Gazette announces that a large number of town and park lots in Southampton, township of Saugeen, will be offered for sale by auction, by the resident Crown Lands agent, A. McNab Esq., at Southampton, on and after the 20th of November.—Also a sale by Auction of two lots in Holland township, County of Grey, by the resident agent, William Jackson, Esq., at Durham, on the same day.

The young man who was crossed in love last week, says if it were not for getting wet he would drown himself.—He probably compromises the matter by shooting himself in a looking glass.

To Nervous Sufferers.

The invigorating action of Sir Astley Cooper's Pills on the constitution is really marvellous, and a single trial will convince the most sceptical of their power to restore the most feeble and debilitated to full health and strength, and no language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change, produced by making use of this wonderful medicine in the enervated, debilitated and shattered nervous system; the relaxed and debilitated body is at once relieved, restored, enlivened and built up; the mental and physical symptoms of disease vanish under their influence, the stooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man; he stands erect, he moves with a firm step, his mind which was previously sunk in gloom, becomes bright, buoyant, active, and he goes forth refreshed regenerated, and conscious of new vigor to his accustomed occupations; and the effect is not temporary, on the contrary the relief is permanent, for the cordial properties of the medicine reach the constitution itself, and restores it in the first instance in all diseases of the stomach and digestive organs they never fail. They also remove depression, excitement, restlessness, want of sleep, dislike to society, incapacity for business, loss of memory, confusion, giddiness, blood in the head, melancholy, mental debility; they increase and restore the appetite, purify the blood, strengthen the tone of the stomach, and give such energy and vigor to the constitution as must be felt to be believed.

To elderly persons, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are invaluable; strengthening the system against the attacks of age; they cause a continued cheerfulness and prolong life to the latest possible period.

Beware of Spurious Imitations.—None are genuine without the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail and Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York, on each box and on the directions. The Genuine Pills have also a correct likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box. Without these marks of authenticity, they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thomas, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

To Emigrants & Others Seeking

LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out some great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD.

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Forrat's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," leading to the Lake of Nipissing, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskako, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.

To reach the Section of Country under Dr. French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL, up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St. Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs due North to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 38 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are nearly surveyed and is ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massaroka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence to Perth to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of 40 miles, is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Land Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of it within the succeeding three months, build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed; after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from the obligation of building, and of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot. The non-performance of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode are hereof been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built of each description as the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care and covered from wet—will give a potash, worth from £20 to £30 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settlers at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establisments he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labour.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords much of the best travelling during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the earth, not only facilitates communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—from the village of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

With regard to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the more large of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part, of the great Ottawa Region stretching from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of eight millions of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the Shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken and will be completed in the present year: its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These projected works are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

P. M. VANKOUGHNET,
Minister of Agriculture, &c.

The "Clevelander" is the size of this paper, is printed on minion and agate type, and contains nearly, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the same amount of reading matter as the Daily Tribune, Herald or Times, and will furnish every information to the intending Settler. Buffalo, and Oswego reports are furnished by the N. Y. associated press, and will be correctly rendered. As a newspaper the "Clevelander" is perhaps equal to any daily in the State. Recollect, only $3.50 forthe "Daily Clevelander" and the "Commercial Gazette" for one year. Parts of a dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Five or more dollars the two papers will be sent six months.

I William Crosby, for twelve months past residing at the Village of Windsor, in the County of Essex, at present a prisoner in the close custody of the Sheriff of the County of Essex, and being a Baker by trade do hereby give notice that I intend to present a petition to Alexander Chewett Esquire Judge of the County Court of Essex, praying to be examined touching my debts, estates, and effects, and to be protected from all process upon making a full disclosure and surrender of such estate and effects, for payment of my full and lawful debts, and I hereby further give notice, that the time when the matter of the said petition shall be heard is to be advertised in the Canada Gazette and in the Maple Leaf Newspaper, one month at the least after date hereof.

As witness my hand this first day of Oct. in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty six.

AYER'S PILLS

Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

JULIUS HALLEY, Esq., of the Tobacco Factory, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, whose choice products are found at almost every toilet, says:

"I have used your CATHARTIC PILLS, this, I have found them a better family medicine, for common ills, than any other with which my knowledge. They and my friends have realized marked benefits from them, and cheerfully join with me in recommending them to community virtues for driving out diseases and curing the sick. They are the only physical pills I have ever found to be taken as qualities which must make them valued by the public. Yours, JULIUS HALLEY."

The venerable Chancellor WARDLAW writes from Columbia, 15th April, 1854:

"DR. J. C. AYER.—Sir: I have taken your Pills with great benefit, for the listlessness, languor, loss of appetite, and bilious headache, which are the effects of overtaken me in the spring. A few doses of your Pills cured me, and I have since found that they keep me free from my family for couple and colds with unfailing success. You make the best pill I am acquainted with, and it is a pleasure to commend you for the good you have done and are doing."

JOHN F. BEATTY, Esq., the well known Penn. Railroad Conductor, says:

"PHILA. R. R. OFFICE, Philadelphia, Dec. 13, 1853.

"SIR: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicines, having derived great benefit from the use of your Cherry Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. I am never without them in my family, nor shall ever consent to do so while my means enable me to procure them."

The widely renowned S. S. STEVENS, M. D., of Went worth, N. H., writes:

"Having used your CATHARTIC PILLS in my practice, I certify that I consider them a superior family purgative. In cases of disordered functions of the liver, causing headache, indigestion, costiveness, and the great variety of diseases that follow, they are a sure remedy; they are other. In all cases where a purgative remedy is required, I confidently recommend these Pills to the public, as superior to any other I have ever used. They may be relied on in their operation, and perfectly safe—qualities which make them an invaluable article for public use. I have found for many years, and still find, your Cherry Pectoral the best remedy for colds that administered in time, checks the threatened progress of disease."

"Acton, Me., Nov. 25, 1853.

"DR. J. C. AYER.—Dear Sir: I have been afflicted from my birth with scrofula in the worst form, and now, after twenty years' trial, and an untold of amount of suffering, have been entirely cured by the use of your Sarsaparilla. With what feelings of rejoicing I write can only be appreciated by those who have suffered, and now feel long."

"Never until now have I been free from this loathsome disease in some shape. At times it attacked my eyes, and I was for months shut out from the light of day; sometimes it appeared on my limbs, and then settled upon my face. About nine weeks ago I commenced taking your Sarsaparilla, and from that time entirely free from the complaint. My eyes are well, my skin is fair, and my hair has come out a beautiful growth. In short, all scrofula symptoms are fled already a new person.

"To those this statement may be the means of conveying information that shall do good to others, I am, with every sentiment of gratitude, Yours, &c.,

MARIA RICKER."

"I have known the above named Maria Ricker from her childhood, and her statement is strictly true.

ANDREW J. SHERVE,
Overseer of the Portsmouth Manufacturing Co."

CAPT. JOEL PRATT, of the ship BARNES, writes from Boston, 20th April, 1854:

"Your Pills have cured me from a bilious attack which none else could relieve. They are the best physic for the liver, which had become very serious. I had failed of any relief by my Physician, and from every family I could try; but a few doses of your Pills have completely restored me to health. I have given them to my children, with the best of effects. They were promptly cured. I recommended them to a friend for costiveness, which had troubled him for months; he told me in a few days they had cured him. I have got them into use on board my ship, and I am ready to say so."

Read this from the distinguished Solicitor of the Supreme Court, whose brilliant abilities have made him well known, not only in this but the neighboring States.

"New Orleans, 5th April, 1854.

"SIR: I have great satisfaction in assuring you that myself and many friends have derived great benefit from your medicines. My wife was cured, two years since, of a severe and dangerous cough, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then has enjoyed perfect health. My children have several times been cured from attacks of the Influenza and Croup by it. It is an invaluable remedy for these complaints. Your CATHARTIC PILLS have entirely cured me from a dyspepsia and costiveness, which has grown upon me for many years—indeed, the cure is much more important, from the fact that I had failed to get relief from any of the Physicians in this city, and in the country offices, and from any of the numerous remedies I had taken.

"You will, I am sure, excuse me, Doctor, like a providential blessing to our family, and you may well suppose we are not unmindful of it. Yours respectfully,

HEZEKIAH THAYXTER."

"Senate Chamber, Olive, April 5th, 1854.

"DR. J. C. AYER—Honored Sir: I have made a fair copy and of the first, of my letter to you, which you have and have been cured by them of the dreadful Rheumatism under which I had been suffering for years. The first one relieved me, and a few subsequent doses have entirely removed the disease. I had been afflicted with it for some years before, which I attribute entirely to the effects of your CATHARTIC PILLS. I remain yours respectfully,

LUCIUS B. METCALF."

The above are all from persons who are publicly known and whose every word and act would not make these statements without a thorough conviction that they were true.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass.

To RENEW AN INDIGO DYE.—After much use an Indigo dye becomes dead and will color only a dingy blue. To remedy this—take a quart of ashes, spread upon a thin cloth over a vessel, pour the dye upon it and allow it to drain through. Squeeze it all out, and never mind if some of the finer part of the ashes pass through with it.—Slice up a large onion and throw in; put in a suitable quantity of Indigo in a close bag, and a few ounces of madder on another, and you will have a bright lively blue. It will color faster if kept moderately warm.—Ohio Cultivator.

To MAKE FRUIT PIES.—No under-crust should be made to apple or any fruit pies. It is always heavy and not fit to eat. Place a narrow rim of paste around the edge of the plate, and fill with the fruit either raw or stewed, and cover it. The juices will be retained much better, and it will save a sight of butter and flour, which is no trifling consideration in these days, and what is of more consequence, save dyspepsia, which costs more. After cutting, they are taken out with a spoon.

PRESERVING EGGS.—The North-Western Farmer has tried the following method of preserving eggs, and recommends it:

Take a seive, and cover the bottom with eggs; then pour boiling water upon them, sufficient to give them a thorough wetting, permitting the water to pass off through the seive. Take them out and dry them; then pack them in bran, the small end down, and your eggs will keep tender.

CLEANING STOVES.—Stove lustre when mixed with turpentine and applied in the usual manner, is blacker, more glossy and durable than if put on with any other liquid. The turpentine prevents rust—and when put on any old rusty stove will make it look as well as new. The odor of the turpentine passes off quickly.

TO DESTROY MITES IN CHEESE.—A piece of woollen cloth should be dipped in sweet oil, which should be well rubbed on the cheese. If one application is not sufficient to destroy the mites, the remedy may be used as often as they appear. The cheese shelves should be washed with soap and water.

VEGETABLE SEASONERS.—Parsley, celery sage, thyme, onions, garlic, and other seasoners, should not be put into soups or stews until the soup is nearly done; chop fine, and put in five minutes before the soup is taken from the fire.

MOULDINESS.—Fruit jellies may be preserved from mouldiness, by covering the surface one fourth of an inch deep with finely pulverized loaf sugar.

SODA CAKE.—One pound of flour, four ounces of butter, six ounces of sugar, three eggs, one spoonful sour cream, with one of saleratus, spices and fruit to taste. Bake in a very slow oven at first.

Sandwich Parsonage, June 18th.

CATHARTIC PILLS

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and restoring their energy to action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors, Physicians, and Patients, has shown cures of dangerous diseases beyond belief, when such have substantiated by persons of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all inquirers.

Annexed we give Directions for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

FOR COSTIVENESS.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as to gently move the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure of one complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while under a costive habit of body. Hence it should, if it can be, promptly relieved.

FOR INDIGESTION, which sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take mild doses—from one to four—to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and the heartburn, sinkdown, and sourbreath of dyspepsia will rapidly disappear. When it has gone, don't forget what cured you.

FOR A FOUL STOMACH, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength is restored to the system.

FOR NEURALGIA, SICK HEADACHE, NAUSEA, Pain in the Stomach, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Fevers, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles, Rheumatism, Gout, and all Derangements of the Stomach and Liver, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the bowels open. The emptions will generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many dreadful diseases are here beset nipped up by the purging and purifying effect of these Pills, and some disgusting diseases which seem to torture the whole system have completely yielded to their influence, having the sufferer in perfect health. Purified blood will always forbid disease, and you should parade yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all array of the unclean diseases of the skin, because your system wants cleansing.

To PREVENT THE RISING, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which are the seeds of incurable diseases will be swept out of the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good to prevent sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or inflammation of the liver. Torpidity and congestion vitiate the bile and render it acrid and poisonous. This is disastrous to the health, and the constitution is frequently undermined by no other cause. Indigestion is the symptom. Obstruction is the fact which causes the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. This produces Jaundice with a long and dangerous train of evils. Costiveness, or alternately costiveness and diarrhœa, prevails. Feverish symptoms, languor, low spirits, weariness, restlessness, and melancholy, with sometimes fitful ability to sleep, and sometimes great restlessness, sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become a greenish yellow; the stomach acids; the bowels are to be touched; the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious dysentery, &c. A medium dose of three or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is wicked to suffer such pains when you can cure them for 25 cents.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT, and all Inflammatory Fevers are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, to move the bowels gently, but freely.

AS A DINNER PILL, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be made more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

No. 1, CHEAP HOUSE.

Sandwich, 16th July 1856.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who feel an interest in the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded: together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following eminent, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. KNIGHT, JAMES SCOWDEN and D. W. RAY.

TERMS: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the ILLUSTRATED HORTICULTURIST for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, as well as portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the position of Agriculture here this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on FOLSOM'S NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is established a proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of conditions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such by arbitrary and infallible rules, unrecognized by the nations; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of management in cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition to the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.
Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for the benefit of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Insurance, Forwarding, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Courtship and Matrimony.

From Punch.

CANTO I.—COURTSHIP.

Fairest of earth if thou wilt hear my vow,
Let at thy feet I swear to love thee ever;
And by this kiss upon thy radiant brow,
Promise affection which no time can sever;
And love, which e'er shall burn as bright as now
To be extinguished—never, dearest, never;
Wilt thou that naughty flutt'ring heart resign?
Thou shalt have pearls to deck thy raven hair—
Thou shalt have all this world of ours can bring,
And we will live in solitude, nor care
For ought save for each other. We will fling
Away all sorrow—Eden shall be here!
And thou shalt be my queen and I thy king!
Still coy, and reluctant? Sweetheart, say,
When shall we mourchs be, and which the day?

CANTO II.—MATRIMONY.

Now, Mrs. Pringle, once for all I say,
I will not such extravagance allow!
Bills upon bills, and larger every day,
Enough to drive a man to drink, I vow!
Bonnets, gloves, frippery, and trash—
Nay, nay, nay.
Tears, Mrs. Pringle, will not gull me now.
I say I must allow ten pounds a week.
I can't afford it; madam, do not speak?

In wedding you I thought I had a treasure,
I find myself most miserably mistaken?
You rise at ten, then spend the day in pleasure;
In fact, my confidence is slightly shaken.
Ha! what's that uproar? This ma'am is my leisure
Sufficient noise the slumb'ring dead to waken.
Seek retirement, and I find—a riot;
Confound those children, but I'll make them quiet.

Elective Governors.

From the Quebec Mercury.

The Spartans used to make the Helots drunk, to teach their youth to loathe and despise a vice which, in robbing man of reason, places him somewhere below the brute creation. Just so we intend to use the present contest for the Presidential Election in the United States, as a warning to those Canadians who may dream of such an addition to our constitutional fabric as an Elective Governor. The election of a new President every four years, is the occasion of a continual strife, and electoral agitation. No sooner is one contest terminated—hardly is a candidate installed, before factions begin to look round for his successor. Nay, the President himself, who should be solely occupied with the measures of State demanded of the ruler of a vast, and now populous empire is involved in the schemes and manœuvres of statesmen, and his character very frequently goes to wreck in the war of intrigues, which is, as it were, forced upon every public man in the States.

We can hardly conceive it possible that any one in these Provinces can be insensate enough to wish to copy this part of the "institutions" of the United States; even Americans themselves look upon this particular feature in their constitution as its great blemish. But there are Canadians, and we regret to add, French Canadians, who make this idea part of their political creed. We invite simply the attention of these men to what is now passing in the United States—we have recently copied one or two extracts from speeches of some of the contending parties in which alarming threats of disunion, violence, and bloodshed abound.—Serious riots, accompanied with loss of life, organised engagements of rival parties, arrayed to the teeth, mark the progress of electioneering excitement, and in all human probability the contest will not close without efforts and convulsions which will be downright civil war. From any intimation of such a state of things, heaven defend us! But before appealing to heaven for help, it may be well to examine the nature, feasibility, and objects of an Elective Governor for Canada, or if any change in the present system be desirable. We presume the proposition contemplates an election for a brief period, say 4 or 5 years. Now, in what respect would this be more advantageous than the present plan of a Governor appointed by the Queen, for the same period? Can it be urged that an elective system would produce a man better suited for such a high post, or whose views and political life would be more in accordance with those of the inhabitants of Canada If this be the plea, we have every reason to believe it unsound. Why should it be so? Let us suppose that after a contest some Canadian be elected to the high position of Governor, probably by a bare majority, is he likely to represent truly the feelings and opinions of the country—at least it must be allowed that he will not represent those of the minority who opposed him. His will carry into his high station a bitter remembrance of the opposition, with all its excitement, taunts, cavils and insults a candidate is liable to be exposed to; is this likely to make him a better arbiter of the lives and fortunes of the people committed to his charge? Can a more pure and unbiassed view of the decision of justice be expected from a successful candidate? And will his power to appoint to office and posts in the state not be used for the support of the party whose influence has brought him to power? No—entirely the reverse of all this. There would be then but one mode of obviating these objections, and that would be by electing a Governor for life. But would this be a step forward in the democratic race? Far from it, it would invest an individual with an almost arbitrary and irresponsible power. Besides, what becomes of the prerogative of the Sovereign of the mother country? Such an act as a life elective Governor, is "ipso facto" Independence, and in any case we are long way from that. There might, however, be a mode of improving the present tenure of the office of Governer, and reconciling both the views of the Canadians and the rights of the crown. Complaint has been made in almost every British colony of the brief tenure office which every Governor is permitted to enjoy. People say that no sooner does a man so appointed begin to know the country, the people, and the peculiarities of the distant colony he rules over, than he is forthwith removed to some other in every way different, and that he has to begin as it were, a new course of political schooling The question is also asked, could not this course of things be remedied? We think it could by the appointment of Governors of Provinces and Colonies by Her Majesty for life, and as a guard against anything like misconduct or oppression, there should be granted to the people governed the right of addressing the crown for a removal of the obnoxious Governor by a vote of say two-thirds of the Legislature, with which the Crown should undertake to comply. We believe that men so appointed would be found the best safe guard of the interests and welfare of the people and dominions entrusted to their rule, all their sympathies, hopes, and interest being bound up with theirs; their legislative and administrative acts being a life long work would be zealously and heartily prosecuted; and they, their families and their descendants, looking on the country as theirs by adoption, would have their hearts bound up in its prospects, happiness and welfare.

For such a proposition as this all classes might agitate, and we think with every prospect of success.

Big Brindle.

In Nashville, many years ago, there resided a gentleman of great hospitality, large fortune, and though uneducated, possessed of hard knot sense. Col. W. had been elected to the Legislature and had also been judge of the county court.

His elevation, however, had made him somewhat pompous, and he became very fond of using big words, On his farm he had a large mischievous ox, called "Big Brindle," which frequently broke down his neighbor's fences, and committed other depredations much to the Colonel's annoyance.

One morning, after breakfast, in presence of some large gentlemen who had staid with him over the night, and were on their way to town, he called the overseer, and said to him:

"Mr. Allen, I desire you to impound Big Brindle, in order that I may hear no more animadversions on his eternal depredations."

Allen bowed and walked off, sorely puzzled to know what the Colonel meant.

So after Colonel W. left for town, he went to his wife and asked her what Col. W. meant by telling him to "impound" the ox.

"Why," said she, "the Col. meant to tell you to put him in pen."

Allen left to perform the feat, for it was no inconsiderable one, as the animal was very wild and vicious, and after a great deal of trouble and vexation he succeeded.

"Well," said he, wiping the perspiration from his brow, and rolloquizing, "this is impounding, is it? Now I'm dead sure the old Colonel will ask me if I have impounded Big Brindle, and I'll bet I'll puzzle him as bad as he did me."

The next day the Colonel gave a dinner party, and as he was not aristocratic Allen, the overseer, sat down with the company. After the second or third glass was discussed, the Colonel turned to the overseer, and said:

"Eh, Mr. Allen, did you impound Big Brindle, sir?"

Allen straightened himself, and looking around at the company, said:

"Yes, I did; but old Brindle transcended the impanel of the impound, and scatterlo phisticated all over the equanimity of the forest."

The company burst into an immoderate fit of laughter, while the Colonel's face reddened with discomfiture.

"What do you mean by that, sir," said he."

"Why, I mean, Colonel," said Allen, "that old Brindle being drognosticated with an idea of the cholery, ripped and raved, snorted and pawed, jumped the fence, tuck to the woods, and would not be impounded no how."

This was too much; the company roared again, in which the Colonel was forced to join, and in the midst of the laughter, Allen left the table, saying to himself as he went "I reckon the Col. won't ask me to impound any more oxen."

Jilts.

The extermination of this class of females would be a most useful work. The coquette is bad enough, but the jilt is abominable; the heart of the former is bent on admiring herself and giving false hopes to others; but the latter, not content with exhibiting a coquettish amiableness, must add to that advantage a certain delight in being in full expectation of success, the jilt meets him with sudden indifference, and wonder in her face at his being surprised that he is received like a stranger, and a cast of her head another way with pleasant scorn of the fellow's insolence.

The lover goes home utterly astonished and dejected, sits down to his desk, sends her word, in the most abject terms, that he knows not what he has done, that all which was so desirable in this life should so suddenly vanish from him—that the charm or life of his soul should withdraw the vital heat from the heart which pants for her. He continues a mournful absence for some times, pining in secret, and out of humor with all things that he meets with. At length he takes a resolution to try his fate, and resolutely to seek an explanation with her upon her unaccountable behavior. He walks up to her apartment with a thousand inquietudes, and doubts in what manner he shall meet the first glance of her eye; when immediately on his appearance she flies towards him, wonders where he has been, accuses him of his absence, and treats him with familiarity surprising as her former coldness. This pleasant intercourse continues until the lady observes the lover grow happy in it, and then she interrupts it with some new inconsistency of behavior; for (as we have said) the happiness of a jilt consists only in the power of making others uneasy.

A Curious Case.

We frequently read accounts of the strange freaks of animals and fowls, but nothing like the following, which occurred on a farm a few miles from this town, has ever met our eye. A goose had, after a great deal of labor and trouble, hatched and partially reared a brood of goslings, when one day some reprobate dogs put an end to her existence by biting off her head. The goslings being left in this desperate and orph an state placed themselves under the protection of a pig, who at once assumed the responsibility of raising the whole breed, and every day the goslings could be seen paddling about in the adjacent water places, their porcine friend grunting satisfaction close by; keeping strict watch over the poor orphans. They all eat out of the same trough, and at night the goslings would nestle down to sleep in the most cosy manner imaginable beside their friend. The goslings are now full-grown matured geese, but they do not forget their old friend and the friend of their youth, and occasionally they can be seen holding a friendly conversation in their own peculiar language.—How they manage to understand each other without the assistance of an interpreter is something beyond our ken, and which we will leave the learned to determine.—Post.

Miscellany.

A great subject of conversation in the military circles of Berlin is a new kind of small field piece, capable of carrying correctly a thousand yards, mounted on wheels, and so light that it can be manœuvered by a single man. The infantry and the guards are to be provided with them as soon practicable.

A Chaplain was once preaching to a class of collegians about the formation of bad habits, 'Gentlemen,' said he, 'close your ears against bad discourses.' The scholars immediately clapped their hands to their ears, and the chaplain looked rather funny at so practical a demonstration.

It is reported that an English Earl, who was engaged in the Crimean war, is about to lead to the hymenial altar the noble hearted and self-sacrificing Florence Nightingale.

The soldiers of the Zouave regiments who gave theatrical performances during the siege of Sebastopol, having obtained their discharge from the army, have formed a theatrical troupe into a company, with intention of giving their Crimean performances in London and Paris.

SOMETHING CURIOUS.—An American paper gives a curious incident of a late thunder storm;—"A little girl was standing at a window before which was a young maple tree. After a brilliant flash, a complete image of the tree was found imprinted on her body. This is not the first instance of the kind, but it is a singular phenomenon."

On election day the 4th, at Baltimore, there was considerable rioting in the various wards, and pistols were freely used. Several persons were shot, and one, it is reported, fatally.

The Montreal Gazette, notes another triumph of our Canadian line of steamers, viz: The Indian, of the Canadian line, and the Baltic, of the Collins line, left this side on the same day. The Indian reached Liverpool at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 22nd ult., the Baltic not until 5 P. M.

HEADS AND TAILS.—An Irish soldier passing through a meadow near Cork a large mastiff ran at him, and he stabbed the dog with a spear he had in his hand. The master of the dog brought him before the magistrate, who asked him why he had not rather struck the dog with the butt end of his weapon. 'So I should,' said the soldier, 'if he has run at me with his tail.'

AN OLD ONE.—The Newburyport Herald says: "Mr. Solomon P. Felker, in cutting a stick of white-oak timber the other day, opened upon a tree toad that had "come down to us from former generations," as Webster said to his fish. Over him had grown sixty-seven grains or rings of the oak, indicating that that had been his home for sixty-seven years at least, where he had existed without air, food, or water. At first he paid no attention to being turned out in the world again and remained perfectly torpid. But, after lying in the sun a few moments, he marched off 'hopping mad,' and just as fresh and vigorous as a new one."

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.—The amount exported of the products of the forest in Canada in 1854, was $10,000,000 in value: of mineral products in the same year, $400,000; of the sea in 1855, $500,000; of animals and their products, about $1,600,000: of agricultural products about $13,000,000; of manufactures $500,000; and other articles, $70,000. Making in all nearly $27,000,000, in one year. The amount of goods imported into Canada in the year 1854 was $40,000,000, of which $4,500,000, was imported through the United States in fund nearly $1,000,000, purchased in the United States in bond and nearly $17,000,000; the produce of the United States. The balance being the growth and manufacture of their countries imported direct into the United States.

AN AWFUL SUPPOSITION.—Some editor says that the destiny of the world often hangs on the smallest trifles. A little miff between Charles Bonaparte and his love Letitia might have broken off a marriage which gave birth to Napoleon and the battle of Waterloo. The Chicago Advertiser says—"Yes, that is the fact. Suppose a 'little miff' had taken place between Adam and Eve! What then?"

PARITY OF REASONING.—Lately, at a distribution of prizes in a German village, a little girl seven years old, whose parents had just been turned out of their lodgings, because they had failed to pay their rent, was asked by the rector:

"Have you studied sacred history, my child?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you know the history of the creation?"

"I know that God made all."

"Why were Adam and Eve turned out of Paradise?"

The child hesitated a moment, and then fixing her eyes on the examiner, replied—"Probably they were turned out because they could not pay their rent!"

A Bremen journal contains the following advertisement:—"A young gentleman on the point of getting married, is desirous of meeting a man of experience who will dissuade him from such a step.—Address, &c."

"Madam," said an old Roger to his boarding house keeper, "in primitive countries, beef is often legal tender; but, madam, said he, empha ically, thrusing his fork into the steak, "all the laws in Christendom couldn't make this beef tender."

COUNTERFEITER CAUGHT.—The Prescott Telegraph says that on last Monday morning a tall smart looking man passed a $10 counterfeit bill of the Commercial Bank of M. D., on Mr. Mundle, a tailor of that place. Not liking the bill, Mr. Mundle took it to the Bank where it was pronounced counterfeit. The gentlemanly operator was accordingly, nabbed and over $100 in base money were found concealed in a woodpile where he had concealed it. From papers found on his person he is supposed to be Peter Branch, of the big Rapids, Michigan. He was to be tried at the assize then in session at Brockville.

ORIGINAL ANECDOTE.—W. L. MacKenzie was asked by an elector, what he was worth. "Time was," said little Mac, "that I was worth a thousand pounds—at all events that sum was offered for me but it being in my opinion below the value of the article I kept out of the way." (Great Laughter.)

A TRUTH.—The homeliest female in the world may render herself more attrctive, by the exhibition of delicacy and refinement, than the prettiest vulgarian that ever smiled.

Without decision of character, no man or woman is ever worth a button, nor ever can be. Without it a man becomes at once a good natured nobody, the poverty-stricken professor of but one solitary principle—that of obliging every body under the sun, merely for the asking.

Beggar—Can ye help a poor man to-day, yer "onor?" Shopman—"I'll remember you next time, Beggar—" Sure, sir, I never trust; I'd be ruined entirely if I did."

An old bachelor geologist was boasting that every rock was as familiar to him as the alphabet. A lady, who was present, declared that she knew a rock of which he was totally ignorant. Named it, madam, cried Cœtebus, in a rage. It is rock the cradle replied the lady.

AUTHORS.—Hood, in an article of singular humor, states that the phrase "republic of letters" was hit upon to indicate that taking the whole lot of authors together, they had not got a sovereign amongst them.

Japan.

We read in the Moniteur de la Flotte—"Our last accounts from the China Seas mention a highly interesting fact. The Emperor of Japan, being anxious to adjust various questions connected with the recent treaties he has concluded with the several Governments of Europe and America, held on the 22nd of June, at Jeddo, the capital of his Empire, a solemn assembly of the principal lords and most influential personages of his court. It was decided at the meeting that two ports of the empire, those of Nangasaki and Bakodadi, should be open to the vessels of all nations. There they might repair, take in provisions, establish depots of coal, &c. The other ports of the empire, however, are to be accessible to vessels in distress, which may take refuge in them, but which will have to put to sea the moment the danger is over. No foreigner is to be allowed to penetrate into the interior of the country without a special permission of the Chief of the State. No decision had yet been come to with regard to the Commercial question. The right of trading with Japan is still maintained in favor of the Dutch and Chinese, who have long possessed it on very onerous terms, having but one market open to them, that of Nangasaki. This new policy adopted by the Government of Japan will be productive of incalculable results. Hitherto no foreign vessel could enter the ports of the country to refit or take in provisions. The last decision of the Court of Jeddo accordingly constitutes a great progress. Should China, Cochin China, the Empire of Siam, and all other neighboring States follow the example of Japan, the intercourse between the extreme East and the rest of the world would be competely changed."

The correspondent of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser thus speaks of the state of affairs in Paris:

The financial panic of Paris arrived at its apogee on Saturday last. On that day all sorts of rumours were afloat, and at the close of the Bourse the excitement was intense. A revolution on Sunday would have astonished nobody, for to this excitement of the financial world must be joined the griefs of the poor, whose quarter's term of rent came due yesterday, and who found all their rents advanced for the next term to a figure beyond their means. Many of these poor families have been unable to find any residence within their means, and have made no provision whatever for moving day. A large police force was stationed yesterday and to-day in the populous quarters, but no disturbance occurred. But the rent day crisis is not yet passed. Under any circumstances the question of rents is a grave one for the Government, and is still unsolved. The Government receives a tax of eleven per cent. on all the rents paid in the city. These very rents are one of its best sources of revenue, and the higher they are maintained the better financially for the Government. The proprietors hold the wealth of the country in their hands, and are thus all powerful either for or against a Government. As there can be no interference of the Government with this class or with the prices they fix upon their property, no resources are left the Government in its management of the poor, but conciliation and force. Direct means of relief it has none. As I have before stated, a quantity of cheap houses are to be built by Government, to be let at low rates to the poor, but it is not anticipated, so far as I can learn, that this system can be extended to a point to effect much good. Great hopes are held out, but this is only a conciliatory scheme.

An English paper record the odd replies forwarded by some of the depositors in the Royal British Bank to the circulars sent out requesting the "name, residence and description" (meaning occupation) of each depositor, with the amount of claim and the composition which would be accepted. One gentleman, it appears, lives in "railway carriages, but has a friend in London whose address is——." In the column headed "Description" we have the following replies: "Nothing particular." "I am a maiden lady," "fair but muscular," "Out of health, and not likely to be better for receipt of your—circular." "Five feet seven," "Dark, of gentlemanly appearance," "aged 28, rather corpulent." "I am surprised at such question." Among the answers to the question, What composition would be accepted? it is reported that the following were read amid much laughter:—"What composition do you mean?" "I don't want any composition rub bish! I want my money."

The Czar's Naval Foresight.—On Saturday we pointed out the ingenious scheme by which the Czar expects to obtain a well arranged steam fleet in the Euxine; and what renders the project still more alluring, at the expense of his late opponents. By offering subsidies to the amount of between £400,000 and £500,000 per annum, he hopes that the capitalists of France and England may be induced to take shares in a variety of Steam Navigation Companies in the Black Sea—the single condition being that all vessels engaged should be so constructed as to be able to carry guns; or in other words, they should be vessels of war without the armaments, which could, however, be added on short notice, whenever it suited the Autocrat to cast aside the mask, and to press into his own service the navy so considerately provided for him by the enemy. It is true that few if any of these companies could hope to pay the mere working expenses, to say nothing of a dividend on the capital embarked. But the liberal Czar provides for all that. He offers a subsidy of nearly half a million per annum—25 per cent on the two millions required—so that the pecuniary interests of the shareholders will be secured, so far as they can be by a Muscovite guarantee. A judiciously contrived excitement which, by various contrivances well known in the city, has run the quotations up to 10 premium, and the object of the Autocrat may be regarded as accomplished, for no amount of Capel Court protection could resist so tempting a prize.—London Sun, Oct, 6.

The Bessemer Process.—It is computed that on every ton of malleable iron produced the saving will amount to 50s.; or bar iron, for example, now costing £8 10. a ton, will be sold a £6. Now as the whole quantity of malleable iron at present produced is considered to exceed one half of all the iron, that is, to exceed 2,000,000 of tons, the annual saving to the nation will come to not less than £5,000,000, equal to the amount of the tea or malt duties. The invention will do far more than this for steel, for it will reduce its price to the level of that of iron, or bring it down from £20 to £6 a ton, enabling us to apply it to uses for which its high cost forbids it to be at present employed; as, for example, in railway sleepers. Mr. Bessemer's lordship is 10s. a ton, and his invention has already made considerable progress in Scotland and South Wales. The iron lords of Staffordshire, more incredulous than the Spanish grandees who had the grace to admit that an egg might be made to stand on its end when they saw it standing alone resist, but they too will in due time become believers, unless they desire to be undersold by some 40s. a ton. Mr. Bessemer is a native of London, by profession a civil engineer; and although known among men of science as an ingenious mechanician, heretofore little known to the world at large. He is now in possession of a well earned reputation, dating from the day on which he read to a section of the British association at Cheltenham a lucid account of his simple, ingenious, and most useful discovery.—Examiner.

Earthquake at Malta.

Malta, Oct. 15, 1856.

On Sunday, the 12th of October, at precisely 11 minutes before 1 a. m. the Islands of Malta and Gozo were visited by shocks of an earthquake, so voilent in their nature, and so long in their duration, that the oldest inhabitants do not remember ever to have experienced anything so severe. The first shock made itself perceptible by a tremulous motion similar to that caused by the passing of a heavy gun carriage, a thousand times repeated, accompanied by a rumbling noise as it were of distant thunder, which rapidly increased in violence, until every building shook and trembled. Scarcely a minute had elapsed when a second and still more violent shock, accompanied by a louder noise, occurred. The alarm occasioned was general throughout the town and country. Men, women and children, of all classes, suddenly aroused from their slumbers, issued from every house, some in their night dresses, others enveloped in a sheet or blanket, and others in the first articles of clothing they could hurriedly catch up, and rushing into the streets made the best of their way to the squares, the line walls, and other open spaces, which soon became full of people who had quitted their dwellings fearing to be included in a general destruction. The sentry at the Treasury left his post and ran to the main guard, which he turned out, under the impression that shells were being thrown into the town by an enemy, from some steam fleet. The two shocks, the interval between them being so brief as to be incalculable, lasted fully two minutes. In the city of Valeta scarcely a building has escaped injury, and all corner structures have more particularly suffered from having no support on one side.

Sunday Bands.

A Parliamentary return has been issued showing the number of memorials to the Queen for the stoppage of the Sunday bands It appears that there were 111,309 signatures to 542 memorials, seven only of which came from public meetings, and but two from "associations." From different varieties of kirks in Scotland, assembly, free, synod seceder, and presbyter, there were twenty-six memorials. While the Wesleyan Methodists sent no less than ninety-eight memorials the Primitive Methodists sent but one. The Church seems unrepresented in the list, unless that be done by two memorials from "clergy;" and from "clergy and others" twenty-eight memorials. The "female inhabitants" of various places sent 377 different memorials. London, it might be supposed, would be largely represented, but twenty-eight memorials, with under 8,000 signatures out of the 111,309, are all that stand to the account of London. The report show that forty-two memorials, while asking for the stoppage of the military music on Sunday, ask also that the museums and Crystal Palace may be kept closed. Five only of these forty-two memorials come from London and its neighbourhood, and two out of the five are described from "mothers at Camberwell." There are some twenty-seven memorials which pray her Majesty not only to withhold her sanction from the Sunday opening of the Museum, &c., but also "to put a stop to the assemblage of the higher classes in their equipages in the parks on Sunday." For some unexplained reason, the "drive" in Hyde Park seems peculiarly interesting to the county of Derby, for of the twenty-seven memorials on the subject, over twenty are from various places in that county; the rest, strangely enough, are from Scotland. Only thirty four memorials add to their prayer for the stoppage of military bands on Sunday one for the closing of New Gardens; and two of these emanate from the pleasure-loving city of Bath, one with 3,639 signatures; the thirty two others come from all other parts of Suffolk.

Queen Victoria Coming to Canada.

(From the Daily News)

Canada has yet a large and useful part to play in the politics of America—larger in all probability with its now free and settled institutions, its rapid prosperity, and above all its confirmed monarchical dispositions, then we can yet properly estimate. Her Majesty will, it is said, at no very distant day pay a visit in person, accompanied by some of her family, to this, the greatest and most populous of her transmarine possessions. The Queen could do no more useful or patriotic act; and richly does Canada merit the compliment of a Royal visit. It has outlived all the calumnies of its Tory detractors, and has demonstrated that colonial self government is far more compatible with the provocative of loyalty than the rule of a family compact or government from Downing Street. Canada, we cannot doubt whether it continue its present connexion with England—and there is now no reason why it should not—or resolve itself into an independent monarchy, is destined to have large influences over North America. In either contingency, nothing is more desirable than that the influence of English civilization should continue to prevail in Canada, and through Canada diffuse itself more generally over the [illegible]; and a visit from Queen Victoria, surrounded by her family, would do more to promote that influence and secure all its blessings, than any other step that could be suggested. Why, then, should it not at some early and convenient time be taken? That, indeed, would be a visit worth recording.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, NOVEMBER 13, 1856.

Mr. Rankin, through his paper, still persists in heaping the most vulgar, low and silly abuse upon Col. Prince, although the electors of this constituency have decided by their votes in electing that gentleman to the Council, over the head of Mr. Rankin, that of the two, the Col. is far before him.—Now, if Col. Prince is made out to be so very bad, how low indeed must Mr. Rankin be, for with all the evil deeds laid to the door of the Colonel, the electors have decided that he is better than Mr. Rankin. No person can read the foolish articles that are continually being brought forth to injure the Colonel, without perceiving that they are the fruits of a sore disappointment, engendered by the defeat of Mr. Rankin in the late contest—a sore that burns to the very quick, and, no doubt, has been the cause of many uneasy and uncomfortable moments. Mr. Rankin, seeing that he has lost the confidence of the electors, now tries to gain popularity by the abuse of another. This policy, instead of serving the end that he designs it for, will only tend to make him appear more ridiculous and narrow-minded in his views. He placed himself before the public in opposition to that gentleman, for the purpose of obtaining a popular verdict—and that verdict has been most unmistakeably rendered against him. This should have been sufficient to convince any man of only ordinary reason, that the vile and slanderous accusations which have been concocted and published against him have only tended to heap burning coals upon his (Rankin's) head.

The Presidential Etection has resulted in favor of Mr. James Buchanan, the Democratic candidate, over Col. Fremont, the Republican one. What the foreign policy of Mr. Buchanan will be, it is difficult at present to say. Some are of opinion, from the course pursued by that gentleman, in signing the Ostend Manifesto, and its favorable reception by the party which has placed him in the high position which he now occupies, may be taken as an example of what his future policy will be. There are many, no doubt, in that party who are unprincipled enough to wish for the adoption of a line of policy which would inevitably involve the States in a war; yet we are inclined to believe that the experience gained by Mr. Buchanan as Minister to the Court of St. James, and from the length of time that he has occupied prominent positions in the Government, will have sufficiently tempered his mind as to prevent him from carrying out those doctrines which are unfavorable to the enlightened portions of the States.

The following was clipped from a letter of a correspondent at the Indiana State Fair, and if the machine spoken of is capable of being applied to so many uses, it is certainly a most useful one, and should be in the possession of every farmer:—

The somewhat novel machine of a Corn Sheller and an Apple Mill combined, to which I have already alluded, collects crowds of people, and is considered one of the greatest novelties on the ground. It has already taken two premiums, (at Paris, Kentucky, and Carthage, Ohio,) and the experiments performed with it here show that it will crush apples or shell corn thoroughly and with most remarkable rapidity. The change from one mill to the other is very simple, and can be very quickly made. It is accompanied by a press, which renders the machine controvertible into a wine, lard, or cheese press, apple mill, potato, turnip or carrot crusher or corn sheller! It is certainly an ingenious affair, and seems likely to come into very general use. Mr. Samuel Miles, 93 Everett Street, Cincinnati, is the proprietor. The Hall devoted to machinery presents a good collection for a State whose manufacturing interests are in an early stage of development."

We take great pleasure in publishing the following letter from the Rev. E. H. Dewar, Rector of Sandwich, in relation to the establishment of a new Bishoprick, in answer to an article copied by us from the London Herald, which we supposed would not have been published by that journal without authority. We are, however, happy to have this opportunity of correcting the error.

The Western Bishoprick.

Sir,—The last Maple Leaf contains an article from the London Herald, respecting the future Western Bishoprick, which may lead your readers, and especially subscribers to the Episcopal Endowment Fund, to two erroneous conclusions. The first is that the future Bishop is to be elected on the 20th inst. A meeting is to be held in London on that day for the purpose of receiving the report of the three clergymen, Mr. Evans, Mr. Boomer and myself, who were charged with the duty of raising the Endowment Fund. If, as I hope, a sufficient amount has been raised, we shall then formally seek the sanction of the Government to our proceeding to an election. But some weeks and probably months, will elapse before it can take place.

The second erroneous conclusion to which the article in question is likely to lead, is that the person to be elected must obtain two-thirds of the votes of both clergy and laity. Whereas the fact is that nothing at all has yet been decided respecting the mode of election. When the clergy and lay-Delegates assemble for the purpose of holding an election, then, and not until then, they will themselves decide upon the manner in which that election shall be conducted. At the same time it appears to be the general impression, that some such rule, as that which the Herald takes for granted, will be adopted.

I have the honour to be,
Yours &c.
Edward H. Dewar, M. A.

We clip from the Michigan Argus, the following spicy piece of Electioneering wit:—

Michigan Erect

But wrong end up.

The result of the election in Michigan is a

"GLORIOUS VICTORY"

of Fusionism.

The Democracy Triumphant!!!!

OUR ROOSTER WONT CROW

WE HAVE MET THE ENEMY.

and are theirs.

We are not disposed to comment at length on the result of the Tuesday election. The unterrified Democracy of the Peninsular State are nowhere. Reason has been dethorned from her accustomed seat, and fanaticism "rules the roost." Fremont carries the State by a majority of 10,000, or more. The demogogue Bingham is re elected, and the State Administration is to be continued in the hands of the Philistines yet another while. Lothrop, Barry, Luttlejohn and Peck have all gone up Salt River; the Legislature will be largely fusion,—and we, the Democracy of Washtenaw County are "whipped to death." We confess our disappointment and yet our Republican friends are as much disappointed at their success as are the Democracy. It is useless to speculate upon the causes. There was "a nigger in the fence," and hereafter we may designate the location of the "colored gentleman.

Married,—In the city of Detroit, on Thursday last, the 6th inst., Mr. John Hill, to Mrs. Elizabeth De Gau both of this place.

Folsom's Mercantile College

On perusing the new Catalogue just issued, one cannot fail to be impressed with the growing and increasing importance of this Institution. Its big list of students the past year, the present large array of able Professors and Lecturers, and many marked features of improvement in the Course of Study, all bespeak rare and ample faculties, as well as energy and a progressive spirit. on the part of the Principal.

Among its list of Lecturers, we notice some of our first literary and legal men, as well as several of the first clergymen of the city.

We learn that several of our prominent bankers, railroad men and others have consented to contribute to enhance the interest and importance of a thorough and practical commercial education.

In addition to a thorough elementary theoretical training, this College has introduced an extended Course of Practical Sets of Accounts, direct from the more important business houses, which sets are not only composed by business men from actual records of their own routine of affairs, but explained by them and embracing the more prominent features of their peculiar departments of trade.

Among the new sets about to be introduced into the course of study, is one composed by E. L. Jones, Cashier Commercial Branch Bank, who has been long conversant with banking institutions. It is designed to illustrate cleariy and fully, every kind of transaction and its proper record that is known in Banking operations, and embraces all the books in use, such as ledgers, journals, discount and collection registers, domestic and foreign bill books, &c.—Mr. Jones will explain to the students the set, as well as lecture on the customs and usages of banking houses.

A set on Manufacturing has heen arranged by Mr, T. Dwight Eells, an experienced and accomplished accountant. The set is a complete illustration of the best form of keeping all manufacturing accounts, embracing all the principal and auxiliary books, some ten in number.

The set of Railroading is prepared by Mr. W. W. Harder, an accomplished teacher, and practical accountant. It is taken in a condensed form from copies of actual records of one of our first railroad companies, and embraces all the principal and auxiliary books, and accompanied with the original forms from the various sources from which they spring, being carried through their proper channels, until they arrive at the general ledger.

As railroad book-keeping is giving thousands of young men lucrative employment, this new set will afford rare advantages, especially as Mr. Harder is to lecture before the class on Railroad book-keeping, and give a general detail of this gigantic department of commerce.

These are a few of the many sets of accounts and other improvements being constantly introduced into this College, as it is the oldest in Northern Ohio, its Principal is resolved that its age and experience shall not be outdone in the length and thoroughness of the course taught, nor in numbers attendance.

Eating Fast.—Napoleon was a very fast eater. At a grand concert at the Tuileries, from the moment he and his guests sat down, till coffee was served, not more than forty-three or four minutes elasped. They were then bowed out. With Napoleon the moment appetite was felt, it was necessary that it should be satisfied; and his establishment was so arranged, that in all places, and at all hours, chicken, cutlets, and coffee might be forthcoming at a word. This habit of eating fast and carelessly is supposed to have paralyzed Nopoleon on two of the most critical events of his life—the battles of Borodino and Leipsic, which he might have converted into decisive and influential victories, by pushing his advantages as he went.—On each of these occasions, he is known to have been suffering from indigestion. On the third day of Dresden, too, the German novelist, Hoffman, who was present in the town, asserts that the Emperor would have done much more than he did but for the effect of a shoulder of mutton stuffed with onions.

Arrival of the Baltic.

New York, Nov. 9th.

The steamer Baltic arrived at her deck at 9 o'clock. She left Liverpool at 10 A. M. on the 29th.

The Africa arrived on the morning of the 28th.

The features of news which has excited most attention is an official paragraph in the Montieur that the English press publish calumnies against the French Corts, and holding out a measure that a continuance of this conduct will break up the Anglo French Alliance.

This paragraph has caused excitement in England and France having even affected the Bourse and it is reported that the English government will ask an explanation of the threat of dissolving the alliance.

Respecting the Neapolitan difficulty the only additional progress that the French Embassy as also the English left Naples on the 26th.

Count Walewski's official correspondence with the Neapolitan Govt is published.

The English fleet is at Malta and the French at Toulon.

German papers state Synudron will go to Naples in three weeks if the matter is not settled.

There is nothing really new in respect to the complicated relations of the Danubian principalities.

It is denied from Vienna but re-asserted from France that the Porte has summoned the Austrians to quit, In this connection are two reports: First, that the Congress of Paris is not likely to meet soon owing to the non assent of England. Secondly, the Russia inspired, but suspicious of a secret understanding between England and Austria respecting the principalities demands a Russian squandon to enter the Black sea upon the same terms as the English fleet now in those waters.

The entire Turkish ministry have resigned. The event is attributed to the intrigues of Lord Stratford to bring in Redschild Pacha as Vizier.

No news from Spain, except a contemplated increase of the aamy.

Letters from France are not satisfactory, the demand for money containuing unabated.

The Circular of Richardson, Spence & Co., dated Liverpool, Oct. 28th, says: The grain trade has been dull since Friday, but at to-day's market there was an improved demand for wheat, which, however, was checked by the advance in prices generally asked there.

Buyers mors unwilling to pay and business was only moderate at 1d a 2d per bushel over the prices of Friday on prime wheat. Flour was at slow sale and rather easier.

Suicide at a Gaming Table.—A letter from Wiesbaden of the 1st inst., says:

"About two o'clock to-day when players and lookers on were ranged round the roulette table of the Kursaal, at this place, the report of a firearm was suddenly heard, and one of the persons standing at the table was seen to stagger and fall dead on the ground. It was a melancholy spectacle, and rendered still more so by the gloom and obscurity of the place, caused by a violent thunder storm which was raging at the time. The deceased, who was a man in the prime of life, evidently belonged to the higher ranks of society.—His identity has not yet been ascertained, but he is supposed to be a native of Holland, as he wore a decoration of the country. He had recently arrived, and a few moments before that fatal act, he had staked and lost his five florin note. Some of the players at the table appeared much affected by the scene, and left, while others resumed their play in another room, and in an hour afterwards a military band struck up, and everything was life and gaiety."

The Journal de Frankfort tells the following rather improbable story:—"A few days since a foreigner presented himself at the office of a merchant at Hamburg to receive cash for bill of 2,000 double Louis, and received 10,000 francs too much. He did not perceive the mistake until he learned to the fact. The merchant looked at him, and then said, 'It is impossible.' The foreigner persisted, and said, 'Your cashier has certainly made a mistake.'—'That is not possible,' replied the merchant in a decided tone. 'Take your money—no mistakes are made at my office.' The stranger then pocketed the money and left the place, when the merchant turning to the bookkeeper, told him to enter 10,000 francs to the account of profit and loss, adding that the cashier would never hear a word of reproach from him on the subject, but that he would not allow any one to imagine that a mistake could occur in his office."

Mr. Buchanan's family circle consists, for their present of Mr. and Miss Lane, (his nephew and neice,) Mrs George Pitt, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Appleton, his late secretary of Legation in London. Colonel Ramsey is also on a visit with him. Miss Lane, a beautiful and highly accomplished young lady, does the honors of the mansion with the same grace and affability which gained her so much popularity at the head of her uncle's establishment at London.

Terrific Hurricane at Montreal.—Montreal, Nov. 5.—A terrific hurricane passed over this city last night, tearing down chimneys and fences and doing great damage to buildings. The steamer Prince Albert, from St. Lambert, was driven on St. Helen's Island by the violence of the wind. The passengers received every hospitality from the garrison stationed there. Much damage has been done in exposed parts of the country.

Statistics of Divorce in France.—The Minister of Justice has addressed to the Emperor a report on the administration of Justiee in 1854. The following statistics of divorce are of interest:—The suits for separation de corps by married couples fell from 1722 in 1853 to 1681 in 1854. Of these 1681, 1510 were brought by women, and 171 by men, and 45 were based on the fact of a condemnation to what the French calls a peine infamiante; 1410 were founded on ill-treatment 116 on the adultery of the wife, and 109 on that of the husband. On the whole number, the tribunal granted 1242 rejected 174, and the remainder were abandoned by the reconcilation of of the parties. The number of demands for a Separation de bien disposed of was 4293 or 10 per cent more than in the preceding year, and all were granted except 128.

Splended Investment: Wise Scottish Caution.—"Russia has resolved on the formation of 3,000 miles of railway, which are conceded to an Anglo French company, with a capital of of five millions sterling.—Upon this sum the Czar guarantees five per cent." Who guarantees the Czar is not stated, nor what security is to be tendered that double or trebie the amount be not called for, seeing that £1,666 13s. 6d. per mile would scarcely in this country pay the rails—but this we will ourselves warrant that if the profits do not equal the promised interest, the Czar's guarantee before five years will not be worth the paper 'tis written on. We trust our countrymen will steer as clear of this juggle as they did of the Royal British Bank, a scheme, by the way, which the English papers take great trouble to inform their readers was founded on "the Scotch system," omitting to add—as they well might—that the most powerful and successful banking establishments now in London are formed upon precisely the same iniquitous mismanagement always excepted.—Alan's Circular.

Special Notices

To Nervous Sufferers.

The invigorating action of Sir Astley Cooper's Pills on the constitution is really marvellous, and a single trial will convince the most sceptical of their power to restore the most feeble and debilitated to full health and strength, and no language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change, produced by making use of this wonderful medicine in the diseased, debilitated and shattered nervous system; the relaxed and debilitated body is at once relieved, restored, enlivened and built up; the mental and physical symptoms of disease vanish under their influence, the stooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man; he stands erect, he moves with a firm step, his mind which was previously sunk in gloom, becomes bright, buoyant, active, and he goes forth refreshed regenerated, and conscious of new vigor to his accustomed occupations; and the effect is not temporary, on the contrary the relief is permanent, for the cordial properties of the medicine reach the constitution itself, and restores it to its first condition. In all diseases of the stomach and digestive organs they never fail. They also remove depression, excitement, restlessness, want of sleep, dislike to society, incapacity for business, loss of memory, confusion, giddiness, blood in the head, melancholy, mental debility; they increase and restore the appetite, purify the blood, strengthen the tone of the stomach, and give such energy and vigor to the constitution as must be felt to be believed.

To elderly persons, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are invaluable; strengthening the system against the attacks of age; they cause a continued cheerfulness and prolong life to the latest possible period.

Beware of Spurious Imitations.—None are genuine without the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail and Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York, on each box and on the directions. The Genuine Pills have also a correct likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box. Without these marks of authenticity, they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

To Emigrants & Others Seeking

LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settlers, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD,

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Ferrall's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part, of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," between Lake Muskaka, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskaka, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country under Dr. French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 36 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Masanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence North to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely settled Madoc, about 25 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Section, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads in this section, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler or he eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in two of the four years—build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed, after which are multiplication of the Settler shall be entitled to obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from obligation to build a house and of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live provided that the required clearing or the lands be made on each lot, and the other conditions of those conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

Roads having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSES required by the Government to be built in each section of land can be put up in four days by five men. The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the erection is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The Roads thus opened up and offered for settlement, are, in sections of Canada West, capable of producing about Cliff. 1 of grain during abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best districts of the Province, and districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land —some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber, such as maple, birch hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres will produce a barrel of pearl, from wot will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £6 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is easy and simple of working.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settlers at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments, can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labor.

The climate throughout these Districts is genial. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords material for good roads during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the earth, not only facilitates communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settler.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the more lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land specified for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of eight millions of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken and will be completed in the present year; its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These important works are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

AYER'S

PILLS

Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

JULES HAUSE, Esq., the well known perfumer, of Philadelphia, whose Cheveux Jessamin Pomade are found at almost every toilet, says:

"I can bear testimony to your CATHARTIC PILLS, that I have found them a better family medicine, for removing one, than any other I have ever known. Many of them have realized marked benefits from them, and no incide with me in believing that they possess extraordinary virtues for driving out diseases and curing the sick. They are not only effectual, but safe and pleasant to take. I recommend them, and shall use them myself as my physician when they are known."

The Reverend Alexander WARDLAW writes from Baltimore, 19th April, 1854:

"Dr. J. C. AYER—Sir: I have taken your Pills with great benefit, for the listlessness, languor, loss of appetite, and bilious derangement which has of late overtaken me in the spring. A few doses of your Pills cured me. I have used your Cherry Pectoral with my family for coughs and colds with unfailing success. You make medicines which cure and I feel it a pleasure to commend you for the good you have done and are doing."

JOHN F. HEATTY, Esq., of the Penn. Railroad Co. says:

"Sir: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicines, having derived very materia benefit from the use of both your Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. I am never without them in my family, nor shall I hesitate to do so, while the means of procuring them are accessible."

The widely renowned S. S. STEVENS, M. D., of Wentworth, N. H., writes:

"Having used your CATHARTIC PILLS in my practice, I certify that I have found them to be an invaluable purgative. In cases of disordered functions of the liver, causing headache, indigestion, and bilious cases, and generally in all of diseases that follow, they are a surer remedy than any other. In all cases where a purgative remedy is required, I unhesitatingly recommend your Pills to the public, as superior to any other I have ever found. They are sure in their operation, and safe in all cases—qualities which make them an invaluable article for public use. I have used for many years Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, as the best Cough medicine in the world, and these Pills are in no wise inferior to that unfortunately well known and efficacious preparation."

"Akron, Me., Nov. 26, 1853.

"Dr. J. C. AYER—Dear Sir: I have been afflicted from my birth with sore eyes, which in worst form, and now, about twenty years' trial, and an untold of amount of suffering, have been completely cured in a few weeks by your Pills. With what feelings of rejoicing I write can only be understood by those who have suffered from blindness as long.

"Never until now have I been free from this loathsome disease in some shape. At times it attacked my eyes, and made me as blind as a mole, and unbearable pain; at others it settled in the scalp of my head, and destroyed my hair, and kept me partly bald all my days, sometimes it came out in my face, and kept it for months a raw sore.

"About nine weeks ago I commenced taking your Pills. In that time I was entirely free from the complaint. My eyes are well, my skin is fair, and my hair has already restored to it a handsome head. Truly, health makes me feel already a new person.

"Hoping this statement may be the means of conveying information that shall do good to others, I am, with many favors, dear Sir, Yours, &c., MARIA RICKER."

CAPT. ELIJAH FRATHER'S CASE.—Capt. Frather from Boston, 20th April, 1854:

"Your Pills have cured me from a bilious attack which arose from derangement of the Liver, which had become very serious. After trying many things, I was induced, and from every remedy I could try; but a few doses of your Pills have restored me once more to health. I have given them to my children for worms, with the best of effect. Their mild operation makes them a favorite with me. I am much more impressed, from the fact that I had failed in my relief which had been of the same kind, and much used in the country affords, and from my of the numerous remedies I had taken.

"You seem to me, Doctor, like a providential blessing to your family, and I will express who are not in the immediate of it. Yours respectfully,

LUCIUS B. METCALF."

The above are all from persons who are personally known to us, and who would not make these statements without a thorough conviction that they were true.

SANDWICH, CANADA WEST

Make your Hens Lay.

As we are social beings, let us talk about poultry a few moments. Now my caption First make a house 8 by 10 feet; put in a window on the south side; a double door on the west; a ventilator 8 inches square on the top, let in run up two and a half feet above the ridge board; line the inside of the building with boards, leaving a space of four inches and fill it with sawdust; let the room be six feet between joints, lath, plaster and whitewash it: bank it up on the outside with horse manure five feet high.—Now you have a room that will not freeze. This room is sufficiently large for twenty-five hens and one cock, put in the corners a box one foot square, with five partitions for nests; place the box on the end, let the front be open except a four inch trap for protection of each nest. Let the roosts be in the shape of a ladder—your house is finished.

Keep two inches of sand upon the floor, put in a box of ashes, another with slacked lime, one with gravel, one with old lime mortar. Occasionally throw upon the floor dry muck, plaster, ashes, and lime dust, sparingly.

Feed as nature requires, corn, oats, buckwheat, cabbage, screenings, boiled potatoes, Indian meal ground with cob, apples, cut hay, wash feeding with a little sulphur mixed with it, and "many other things too numerous to mention."

Fresh water or milk always, as well as feed on hand, Give them fresh boiled meat three times a week; fail not at your peril.

In cold days let them stay in. In warm days "spin street yarn." Follow these directions and your hens will lay in winter as well as in summer. I have fifteen early pullets kept as per directions. The 14th of December I found the first egg, and the 14th of March, three months, we have have sold five hundred and fifty-two eggs, for ten dollars, minus two cents, and the hens continue laying.

Hens kept in this way will lay in the summer as well as if they lay idle in the winter, but they can well use up a hen's diet then sell the old and keep the young. I have kept from three hundred to five hundred hens for years, and if rightly managed they are profitable, if not vice, versa.—Rural American.

Compost for Fruit Trees

Fruit trees must be fed, if we would have them thrive and bear. Decaying leaves or the scrapings from the forest form one of the best ingredients for compost designed for any kind of fruit trees. Mr. Downing, a distinguished fruit culturist and the editor of the Horticulturist, gives it as his opinion that the best compost adapted for general use, with fruit trees, is that composed of swamp muck, or the black, decayed vegetable matter to be obtained from low grounds, mixed with wood ashes, at the rate of five bushels of fresh ashes or twice that quantity of leached ashes to a waggon load. This furnishes not only the requisite vegetable matter, but also those mineral manures which are essential to the production of fine fruit. This compost he would modify as follows, to adapt it to the different kind of fruit trees:

For Apple Trees.—To every cart load of the muck and lime mixture, after it has lain a fortnight, add two bushels of air slacked lime.

Pear Trees.—To every cart load of the muck and ashes mixture, add a bushel of ground or dissolved bones, and two bushels of leached ashes.

Plum Trees.—To every cart load of the muck and ashes mixture, add half a bushel of lime, half a bushel of ashes, and a peck of salt

Grape Vines.—To every cart load of the muck and ashes mixture, add a bushel of lime, a bushel of ashes, and a half bushel of gypsum or plaster.—Maine Farmer.

The best Cow feed. — The vegetable we wish to recommend, all things considered for milch cows in the winter, is white flat turnips. Some persons will object to turnips because they will affect the taste of the milk and butter. So they will if fed raw; this can be avoided by boiling. For each cow boil a half bushel of turnips soft: while hot, add five or six quarts of shorts, which will swell, and you will get the worth of it. A mess like this to a cow once a day, will produce more milk of a good quality, and better feed at the same cost. Turnips fed in this way, do not taint either milk or butter.

One thing in favor of turnips, as feed for cows is, that they can be sown in August, as late as September. We sowed some as late as September, which were very fine. Turnips are also very profitable food for pigs boiled in the same way as for cows.

Chilblains.—To cure chilblains, simply bathe the parts affected in the liquor in which potatoes have been boiled, at as high a temperature as can be borne. On the first appearance of the inflamed, indicated by its inflammation and irritation, this bath affords almost immediate relief. In the more advanced stages, repetition prevents breaking out, followed by a certain cure; and an occasional adoption will operate against a return, even during the severest frost.

Bread from Spring Wheat. — One great difficulty with our ladies in changing from winter to spring wheat flour, requires more labor; the dough should be made stiff or harder, worked longer, and a little more care taken to keep the dough from rising, and baked a little longer in an even evenly heated by hard seasoned wood.

Æration of the Soil.—This is one of the most important principles involved in hoeing. It is an undoubted fact that the roots increase their fibres every time the earth is stirred about them, and, consequently, the plants themselves grow faster, provided, of course, fair judgment is exercised in directing the operation. This manifest advantage can only be rightly appreciated in the supply of food thus communicated to the plants by promoting the admission of atmospheric influences into the soil and by minute disintegration of the soil, its subdivision and repeated stirring; makes a new and plentiful "internal supply" to it.

"I dont believe it is any use to vaccinate for small pox," said a back-woods Kentuckian, "for I had a child vaccinated, and he fell out of the wagon and broke his neck."

AYER'S
CATHARTIC PILLS

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and, by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors, Physicians, and Patients, has shown that the most dangerous diseases almost beyond belief, were they not too inveterately rooted, yield to their combined power and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we publish a few of those in use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

For Costiveness.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as will operate like benefit. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the best of cure complaints is more or less of both. No person can feel well while under a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it may be easily relieved.

For Dyspepsia, which is sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, small doses — from one to four — to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and relieve the heartburn, headache, and gloom of dyspepsia will rapidly disappear. When this has gone, don't forget what cured you.

For a Foul Stomach, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and loss of appetite, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength are restored to the system.

For Nervousness, Sick Headache, Nausea, Pain in the Stomach, Bath, or Side, take from four to eight Pills on going to bed. If they do not operate sufficiently, take more the next day until they do. These complaints will be found to arise from the system. Don't wear these and their kindred disorders because your stomach is foul.

For Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the blood pure. The eruptions will presently soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many dreadful ulcers and sores have been healed up by the purifying and powerful influence of these Pills, and some disgusting diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have entirely yielded to their influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health. Patients, your duty to society forbids that you should any longer parade the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the many diseases of the skin, for which these pills system wants cleansing.

To Purify the Blood, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which sow the seeds of scrofula in the system will be swept out of the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the immediate cures which they are making every where.

For Complaint, Jaundi e, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement—either torpidity, excitement, inflammation, or obstruction of the liver. Forcible congestion vitiate the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is disastrous to the health, and the consequences will be frequently remembered by no other cause. Indigestion is the symptom. Obstruction of the bowels, which engorge the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. This produces Jaundice, with a long and distressing train of evils. Costiveness, or alternately costiveness and diarrhœa, prevails. Feverish symptoms, hungor, low spirits, wretchedness, confusion, and melancholy, with sometimes inability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness; sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become a greenish yellow; the stomach, and the bowels next to the bowels, the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious diarrhœa, dysentery, &c. A medium dose of three or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is wicked to suffer such pains when you can cure them for 25 cents.

Rheumatism, Gout, and all Inflammatory Fevers are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in full doses, as they operate more gently, but freely.

As Dinner Pill, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be made more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

No. 1, CHEAP HOUSE.
Sandwich, 18th July 1856.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,
AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs of eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a spot of ground, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is affordgeb, placed within the reach of every subscription, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. Knight, James Snowden and D. W. Ray.

Terms: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.— Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the Illustrated Horticulturist for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.
THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar institution in the UNITED STATES.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on FOLSOM'S NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS OF Cleveland.
THE METHOD OF TEACHING.
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.
THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.
THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, &c., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.
THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.
PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-Keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

She Smiled as I Passed Her.

She smiled as I passed her
So sweet and benign,
That I almost could fancy
Her features divine;
As that sunbeam of gladness
Played merrily there,
An angel could scarcely
Be pictured as fair.

She smiled as I passed her,
But still I could see
That her look was averted
In coldness for me;
Can coldness and pleasure
Thus blend in a smile?
Or can love its own death-blow
Thus soon reconcile?

She smiled as I passed her,
But can I believe
That her smile was intended
My heart to relieve?
She ranks with the highest
In wealth and esteem,
Whilst I am but lowly
And glide with the stream.

She smiled as I passed her;
And if 'twas in scorn.
Such slights have by others
Been frequently borne;
And shall I surrender
Ere yet well begun?
I'll woo her and win her,
As others have won!

INCOGNITO.

Reconciliation.

I.

'Tis true that you and I fell out,
Yesterday!
I've no idea what about,
Johnnie Gray!
I only know the sun shines on,
Though sweet May be dead and gone,
And through the trellis at the door
The light comes dancing as before—
Johnnie Gray!

II.

The evening follow'd glowing now,
Yesterday!
And driving clouds obscured the moon
Johnnie Gray!
But night is past and morn is here—
The fields are green—the sky is clear—
The rose and lily gleam with dew—
And I've two loving lips for you,
Johnnie Gray!

Don't Waste Your Time.

An Anecdote for Persons seeking their Fortunes.

This caption is applicable to all, but more especially to young men; and the incident we are about to relate is one of so forcible a character, that we think it will be productive of good.

Two young clerks in a large American and French house in Pearl Street, were particularly intimate, so much so, that although they boarded in different houses, yet they were constantly together during the hours of recreation from business.

One of them had been presented with a little French poodle, and he at once set about instructing it to perform all those little tricks for which the breed is famed.

For some days his companion witnessed his persevering efforts to make 'Grotto' bring his handkerchief, catch pennies, stand upon his hind legs, and do many other trifling but amusing tricks. At length he got tired of being a looker on at so much waste of time, and resolved that while his friend was being the tutor of Grotto, he himself would be a pupil to a French teacher, and endeavor to master the French language by the time Grotto's education was completed.

Without saying a word to his friend, he commenced his studies, and being diligent, fast acquired a knowledge of the language; he also improved from hearing a good deal of French spoken in the store, though he carefully avoided uttering a word. At length Grotto was finished, and had very truly acquired a knowledge of an infinite number of amusing games, and his owner pride him no little on his acquirements.

The owner of Grotto was a little the senior in the store, of the other, and of course ranked him in promotions. One morning he came out of the private room of the principal members of the firm, and, looking very much downcast, approached his friend.

"Tom," said he, "the firm want to send one of the clerks this summer to France to buy goods, and they have offered the chance to me, provided I could speak French, but as 'Oui' is about the extent of my French it is no go for this child. What a fool I was in not studying it when I was a boy."

"Well," said Tom, "whose chance is next?"

"Why, yours, of course. Ha, ha, ha! they will put the question all around, out of politeness, and as none of us can parley vous—ha, ha, ha—why somebody will be engaged, and all of us headed off."

In the course of the morning Tom was called before the firm, and in glowing terms were the advantages set forth, if he could only have spoken the language of the country they wished him to go to. Tom listened with delight and inwardly chuckled at the surprise he would give them.

"Of course," said one of the firm, "you should have the situation if you could only speak French; but as you cannot we shall have to employ some one else. Very sorry, great pity," &c.

"Well," said Tom "it can't be helped, and there is no time, I suppose, to study now, so I must do the best I can. Mr. Toutette, shall you and I have a little chat and perhaps I may pass muster?"

Mr. Toutette and Tom entered into an animated conversation, very much to the surprise of all present, which having been kept up, in double quick time, for some fifteen minutes, Mr. Toutette very candidly told his partners that Tom was fully competent for the place.

Tom was a great favorite, and the firm were heartily glad that he was capable of holding the situation; and he was instructed to prepare himself for departure by the next steamer, with the privilege of peeping into the World's Fair.

Tom now returned to his friend, who met him with a right good ha, ha, ha.

"Well, Tom, no use; I told you so."

"Ah," replied Tom, "you are out this time. My French has been approved of, and I am done here—I sail in the next steamer."

"You don't say so! But, Tom, when did you learn French?"

"When you were teaching Grotto."

A new light flashed across the vision of Grotto's master.

"What," said he, "while I was fooling over that dog, you were studying!"

"Just so; and you now know with what success our time has been rewarded."

By the judicious disposal of time, one young man is in the high road to mercantile fame and fortune, whilst, by throwing away time, another, equal is abilities, is doomed to drudgery and clerkship all his days.

An Elegant Cuisine.

The following account of a splendid kitchen, is furnished by a Paris correspondent of an English paper:—

There resides in the Rue de la Chaussee d'Antin, in Paris, a worthy lady who makes a single apartment in her house more elegant than all the rest combined. This grand apartment—is the kitchen. Whenever this lady receives company, all sorts of ingenious plans are formed and every description of little artifices employed to induce the fond guests, without asking them to have a peep at this den, generally kept as much as possible in the background, for obvious reasons (Nothing is so disgusting to a true epicure as the smell of cookery.) In most houses, therefore, the kitchen is as far distant from the drawing-room as possible.

In this instance, on the contrary, the local topography is so arranged that many persons wishing to go out, mistake the door, and just as they are about hastily backing out are accosted by the most dazzling of cooks who arrives, in a smiling air, "It's the kitchen, Monsieur (or Madame,) there's no harm! Walk in, if you please!" By this time the glance of the visitor has taken in all sorts of unexpected things hung around the room, and he is induced to enter this curious boudoir-kitchen. The walls and the floor are composed of music bricks of numerous colors. The prevailing being blue and white. Gas burners issue from rare and beautiful china saucers, or burn through the artificial wicks of antique lamps.

The dressers and closets are covered with burnished copper, and contain the thousand and one utensils of the cuisine, all shining with dazzling polish; the kitchen girl being a Highland lass, who spares neither brick dust nor muscle in keeping up the proud reputation for cleanliness of her country.—What is most surprising in this model kitchen is to see the saucepans and grid irons, bright as so many new watches, hung up with rose colored ribbons. Evidently these utensils consume more ribbons than even Madame's bonnet.

A short time ago the friends of the proprietress of this simple establishment begged her to give a breakfast is this elegant kitchen She consented on one condition; the guests should, themselves, cook the breakfast they were to eat, and afterwards they were to wash the dishes and put every thing back in the same order in which they found it. The stipulations were stoically accepted. Two ladies who have four or five hundred thousand francs a year, to spend, the lady of an admiral, a duchess, and the wives of two foreign ministers, were present on the occasion and took part in the novel proceedings. The dish washing of these fashionable butterflies must have been amusing.

Extradition Under the Ashburton Treaty.

About two months since a burglary was perpetrated on the premises of Messrs. William & Thorndike, Seneca Falls, N. Y., and a considerable quantity of plated ware and other articles valued at $300 carried off. Soon afterwards a colored man offered goods to Mr. O'Donohoe, auctioneer, in this city, to dispose of for him; but that gentleman, from the appearance of the man and the quality of the articles offered him for sale, (they being all new) immediately suspected they were stolen. After some conversation with the man, Mr. O'Donohoe took the articles and desired him to call next morning for payment. The fellow was most urgent to get some cash, but notwithstanding his plausible stories, he was unsuccessful In the meantime Mr. O'Donohoe waited upon Mr. Hutson and told him he suspected that the goods offered to him were the fruits of a robbery. His surmises proved correct, as the Deputy Chief had shortly before received a telegraphic despatch giving particulars of a burglary effected in New York State, and also a description of the stolen goods. When the coloured man, whose name is Daniel Drayton, called next morning, he was arrested by Mr. Hutson.—Several of the articles were found by the Deputy Chief in the house where Drayton boarded, in Centre street. Subsequently Mr. Williams (the firm having offered a reward of $50 for the recovery of the goods or $25 for the apprehension of the thief,) came over and identified the goods as the property of their house. The prisoner Drayton was committed to gaol by Mr. Gurnett, to await an application from the United States Government for his surrender under the Ashburton Treaty. On Thursday last the Sheriff of Seneca county arrived in this City with a writ of extradition from his Government to ours, and the prisoner will be delivered up to his custody on Monday next. There were several difficulties in this case which caused a little delay, the chief of which was that the prisoner being coloured, due precaution had to be used by our Government that his extradition might not subject him to the provisions of the Fugitive Slave Bill.

Moscow Fetes.

THE ROAST BEEF OF OLD ENGLAND.

The newspaper correspondents at Moscow continue to supply long letters describing the balls, reviews, and other entertainments that followed the coronation. At one of the reviews 40,000 soldiers defended and 60,000 attacked Moscow. The weather was to the last degree unfavorable, and the troops —all bedecked in finery for exhibition—were wet to the skin. The protracted gayeties of the coronation had fatigued everybody, including the Emperor.

But amidst this lassitude says the Daily News correspondent, writing on the 15th ult., "the British Ambassador keeps standing on the even tenor of his hospitable way, and greatly dines, or merrily dances, or courteously receives, with that unflinching pluck and bottom which are the proud characteristics of his race and nation. I think I mentioned in a former letter the anticipations of the St. Petersburg English, that at Moscow Lord Granville would overtake his French competitor in the festive race, and in the long run maintain for the "roast beef of Old England" its traditional supremacy; and they have not been disappointed. The Count de Morny has been distanced in the race, fairly dined and danced down; and to Lord and Lady Granville is now universally conceded the palm for dinner, for balls, for receptions, and, best of all, for unflagging graciousness and courtesy of demeanor.

I do not say this in any ungenerous spirit towards the French Embassy, who have well and spendidly represented both the wealth and proverbial taste of their great country; but then the Hotel de Morny is bachelor's hall, while at the British Embassy the wives and daughters of England offer a "material guarantee" to the wives and mothers of Russia, and consequently the latter find themselves as much at home there as in their own domestic circles. This, I can assure you, is no exaggeration. The Provincial nobility of Russia the great boyards of the rich and fertile South are primitive, almost patriarchal, in their habits; their empires; and the warmth of affection exhibited by the different members of a family for each other is quite touching and refreshing to the English stranger. The old princesses cluster their fair daughters about them "as the hen gathereth her chickens under her wings;" and the latter while educated to the highest pitch of modern refinement, speaking fluently "the four languages," and being well acquainted with English literature—in which, I am proud to say, they take unaffected delight—dancing, singing, and playing with lady like grace and skill—have all the freshness and modesty of deportment that foreigners so much admire in our island girls. It is not to be wondered at, then, that ladies such as I have attempted to describe find themselves emphatically "at home" with Lady Granville, and Lady Stafford, Lady Emily Peel and Lady Marleveson Gower—that they should grace the receptions, and go gladly and freely to the balls."

Miscellany.

Letters from France state that the accounts from the districts respecting the results of the crop are very contradictory. In some parts of the Bordelais the produce will be indifferent, while in others, and particularly in the direction of Blaye, it will exceed by one third that of last year. Near Cannes the yield will be double the quantity expected, and the quality excellent. In the Maconnais some districts have been completely ravaged, but in other the vintage promises well. In Burgundy and champagne the result will be satisfactory.

WIT DEFINED, OR THE PENSION ASKED —In a private conversation, the late Earl of Chatham asked Dr. Hentiker, among other questions, how he defined wit? The Doctor replied: "My Lord, wit is like what a pension would be, given by your Lordship to your humble servant—a good thing well applied."

AN INTELLIGENT ECHO.—What must be done to conduct a newspaper right?—Write. What is necessary for a farmer to assist him?—System. What would give a bride the greatest delight?—Light. What the best counsel of the peace?—Peace. Who commit the greatest abominations?—Nations. What cry is the greatest terrifier?—Fire.

A jury out west, commiserating the case of a poor woman who was charged with a very trifling theft, agreed to the following sagacious verdict:—"Not guilty; but we hope she won't do so again."

SENTENCE OF DEATH.—At the Wentworth Assizes, on Tuesday last, Dennis Sullivan, was convicted of the murder of his wife, about 5 miles from Hamilton, on the line of the Toronto Railway, on the 16th of May. He has been sentenced to be hanged on the 29th instant, and no hope of mercy held out to him.—Freeholder.

On a recent trial for murder in Watson county (Mo.) a boy who was instigated by his father to fire the gun which caused the death of the victim, was acquitted, and the father and an adult accomplice convicted of murder in the second degree, and sentenced to ten years, imprisonment in the Penitentiary. The rationale of this verdict is, that these parties, being of mature years, induced the boy to commit the murder, but that a greater punishment than that of murder in the second degree could not go against them.—Advertiser

The Troy Times wants to know why ladies who play the coquette to perfection, seldom play the fiddle? Our devil at his considering cap on his head, and after due reflection comes to the conclusion that the reason why ladies do not play the fiddle is owing to the want of a beau.

Ex Judge Haliburton, author of Sam Slick the clock pedlar, has taken a final farewell to Nova Scotia as a place of residence. Clifton, his beautiful seat at Windsor, was sold some weeks since, and the old judge has taken his passage for Liverpool to make his home in Great Britain for the remainder of his days.

APHORISMS.—The more true merit a man has the more does he applaud it in others.—As daylight can be seen through small holes, so by little thing show a person's character. The end of learning is to know God, and out of that knowledge to love him, and to imitate Him, as we may the nearest, by possessing our souls of true virtue.—Milton.

PAPER FROM SUNFLOWERS.—Near Erith a crop is about to be gathered of about four acres of sunflowers. The seeds will be used for oil, and to feed cattle and poultry, as in the South of France; but the chief object is to obtain the fibre of the stalks for paper-making. If the cultivation succeeds, it will supply abundant materials for fine writing and printing papers, as well as fine and coarse for paper hanging.

Such is the encouragement given to flattery in the present times, that it is made to sit in the parlor, while honesty is turned out of doors. Flattery is never so agreeable as to our blind side; commend a fool for his wit, and a knave for his honesty, and they will receive you into their bosom.—Fielding.

NOTHING TO SPEAK OF!—Old Gent—"Pray, my good man what is the matter? Constant individual—"Matter, sir! genuine ass run away with a broom, sir! Never see anything like it in all my born days! Down he comes the 'ill with the sharves a-dangling all about his leg—knocks a butcher's cart in to a linendraper's shop—bangs again a carriage and pair, and smashes the panuel all to bits—upsets a drayton, and if he hadn't a-run up again this here cab and dashed it right over, and stopped himself, blowed if I don't think there'd a bin some accident.—Punch.

ANTS.—Take a large sponge and wash it well and after it is dry lay it near any spot frequented by ants, and sprinkle fine white sugar over it. In a short time the meshes will be nearly filled with the minute insects, which can be destroyed by dipping the sponge into hot water, and after washing and drying it may be replaced again. Thousands are often destroyed at a time, and by repeating the process the locality will soon be free from them.

A correspondent of the N. Y. Evening Post writing from Rome, Oct. 13th, says that Colonel Hiram Pearson of San Francisco, was fined one thousand piasters for seating himself on the throne of the Pope.

An eminent teetotaller being requested by "a few of his admirers" to sit for his portrait, consented, on condition, that it should be taken in water colors.—Punch.

The bill of fare of a Chinese Saloon at San Francisco, is as follows: Grimalkin steaks 25 cents; bow wow soup, 12 cents; roasted bow wow, 18 cents; bow wow pie, 6 cents; stews ratified, 6 cents. The latter dish rather bothers us. What is meant by stews rat-ified? Let us paws.

MARINE DISASTERS.—The Mohawk had a narrow escape of being lost on her last trip from Buffalo to Port Stanley. She lay beating about, and quite at the mercy of the waves for twelve hours, and a part of her cargo, including several hogsheads of sugar, had to be cast overboard. She is now lying for repairs at the Port. So great was the violence of the storm on Friday last that as many as twelve vessels were ashore at the mouth of the Grand River at one time. The Isaac Buchanan, which was reported yesterday to have been ashore at Presque Isle, has been heard from; a letter from Capt. Williams states that, after discharging a portion of her cargo only, he expects to get her afloat. He does not anticipate any damage to either vessel or cargo.—Free Press.

It is estimated that the loss of property by the recent gale on Lake Ontario was at least $150,000.

GRAND TRUNK CELEBRATION AT MONTREAL.

All available space in this week occupied with the proceedings of the celebration just closed, and which was got up and carried through with so much eclat! Involving so many considerations in the prosperity of this Province, as does the subject from which these rejoicings originated, and so interested must every member of the community feel in the accomplishment of this great and national undertaking, that too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the energy and patriotism which have been displayed in bringing this noble work, which will be a lasting monument in after generations, as exhibiting the progressive spirit of this age, to its present state.

The Grand Trunk Railway is a work of such magnitude that many older countries than Canada could hall boldly entering upon so great an undertaking. And when we consider the vast benefits that will result from its completion, when we trace its huge length up on the map, extending from one extremity of the Province to the other, and reducing to hours, where formerly it required as many days to accomplish the same extent of travel, we cannot but feel proud when contemplating this vast iron chain of over 850 miles in extent, which will carry the incalculable resources of the fertile interior to the sea board. The following is from the Globe and Leader.

Wednesday's Proceedings: The Procession.

The whole city was alive this morning with preparations for the first event of the day. At half past eight o'clock the tradesmen, mechanics, firemen, members of public bodies, &c., who were to take part in the grand procession to which the early part of the day was devoted, began to assemble in the Haymarket Square. While order was being brought out of confusion, and the committee men and officials were engaged in arranging the vast mass into the places and ranks prescribed in the programme, the Square presented a most interesting spectacle. Precisely at 10 o'clock the procession began to move, proceeding out of Commissioners Square, through Great St. James Street, round Place d'Armes, through Notre Dame Street to Dalhousie Square; down St. Paul Street to Jacques Cartier Square, into Commissioners Street to McGill Street, up McGill Street to St. Joseph, through St. Joseph to Mountain, up Mountain to St. Antoine Street, down St. Antoine Street; and back to the point of starting in Commissioners Square, where it dispersed. The spirit with which the citizens entered into this portion of the proceedings, and the extensive scale on which the procession was got up, may be understood when we say that the time occupied in passing any point in its progress, at a somewhat rapid pace, was not less than fifty-five minutes. We should say that the number who took part in it amounted to at least 4,000.

Captain Hays, with a body of mounted police, led the way, followed by a division of the City police on foot. Next came a body of upwards of fifty Caughnawaga Indians, whose gaudy caps, painted faces, and other symbols of aboriginal barbarism, some relics of which still exist in spite of their contact with the white man, formed one of the most interesting features in the procession. They were accompanied by a number of their squaws, attired in their characteristic costume. Next in order came the several companies of firemen, under the direction of Capt Bertram, Chief Engineer, with their bands, engines, hose, waggons, &c.—The turn out of the firemen, as regards number, accoutrements, and general appearance, was in the highest degree creditable to the City of Montreal.

Following the firemen came the Horticultural Society, with a banner representing our first parents in the Garden of Eden, and bearing the motto, "The First Occupation of Man," and a waggon, displaying a great variety of fruits and vegetables, tastefully decorated with evergreens.

Hardy's band came next, heading procession of the various trades; the department of FINE ARTS taking the lead. Three or four cars were filled with MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, Melodeons, Pianos, &c., from T. D. Hood; Seeholl, Manby &co.; Abner Brown; and S. R. Warren. The PAINTERS next claimed attention, with a four horse waggon displaying a large surface of canvass, with suitable inscriptions—one of them putting the pertinent question—"What would the procession to-day be, only for our Art?"

The MONTREAL INDIA RUBBER FACTORY made a great show; four horses drew a waggon bearing an enormous boat, that seemed to have been made expressly to order for the leg of Brobdignag. Behind the waggon marched some hundred and twenty of the workmen in the factory, each wearing a sample of goods they produce, in the shape of weather proof capes and caps.

The CANADA SUGAR REFINERY COMPANY had a large Model of their Works—the miniature chimney smoking away as vigorously as if it were really engaged in some bona fide useful employment. The workmen walked behind, presenting a clean, tidy appearance, in their white cotton caps and pants, and white silk sashes.

The SONS OF ST. CRISPIN next came along in great force; nearly a score of the elite of the profession occupied a monstrous waggon, and, being supplied with suitable materials and implements, worked during the whole time at the several branches of their business, with an industrious activity that was pleasant to look upon. The Sewing Machines, not long since coming into fashion, where in busy operation. Following the waggon, marched some hundreds of workers in leather, each wearing a badge.

The next section was that of the SOAP and OIL Dealers, under the marshalship of P. M. Clerihs, Esq. Messrs. John Mathewson & Son had two waggons from W. Christie's St. Lawrence soap and candle factory.

The fourth section in the Trades' procession was that of the COTTON AND WOOLLEN MANUFACTURERS.—J. Galbraith, Esq., Marshal. Mr. S. R. Scott, of the Canada SHIRT AND COLLAR Factory, filled the first carriage, with some of his workmen. F. W. Harris, of the ST. LAWRENCE MILLS, had a waggon filled up with the inscription, "Cotton for Ever!" The TAILORS turned out in good numbers—a banner being carried in front commemorative of the profession in which their art was called into requisition. It bore the Latin inscription. "Consuetudinem sequitur, qui fortem vestes sibi?" A magnificent display of a considerable variety of FURS, tastefully arranged on a waggon by G. W. Reed.

The fifth section was that of the WORKERS IN LEAS—one peculiarly appropriate to the day. It was under the charge of W. P. Bardley, Esq. A small LOCOMOTIVE, drawn on a waggon by six horses, headed this part of the procession, followed by a CONDENSOR from G. W. Reed. The BOOKBINDERS, under charge of Bartley & Dunbar. Some hundred workers in iron marched in the rear, each wearing a badge. Rogers & King came next, with a specimen of CAST IRON RAILING.—The workmen of R. Mitchell & Co., BRASS FOUNDERS, turned out in strength, each carrying a specimen of their handiwork. And there was a waggon laden with ENGRAVINGS and displaying the quaint inscription "We Sharpen everything except people's consciences." Mr. W. H. Rice followed with goods from the WIRE CLOTH factory.

After the Iron department, came the CANADIAN INDEPENDENT BAND, led by Mr. J. McPherson. Then followed the workers in WOOD, marshalled by A. Larose, Esq.—Two waggons were filled with LUMBER, &c., from Brewster's Steam Saw and Planing Mills. Mr. J. Smith, St. Gabriel Locks, and Messrs. Johnson & Co., Cazaretti &c., united in filling a gigantic waggon with the PLANING MACHINE and a WOOD-CUTTER'S MACHINE, all in actual operation by horse power. There were exhibited a NAIL CUTTING MACHINE from Bigelow's city nail and spike works, and working models of BLACKSMITHS' BELLOWS, by Mr. Lindley. The Carriage department was well represented by vehicles, and workmen from the establishments of J. Tees & Eusebe Guimet. The mysteries of planing, turning and other branches of the trade were all displayed in active operation. The Banners of the Carpenters made a grand appearance.

Section seventh was that of the WORKERS IN STONE, and like the Joiners and Carpenters, they made a good display. A. Wand, Esq., had charge of this section.—The MASONS had a number of stalwart fellows engaged with mallet and chisel on a large block of stone. Messrs. W. C. Hyatt & Co. and W. Gorman, exhibited specimens of working in marble. A waggon filled with bricks displayed a pretentious motto in verse, claiming for the bricklayer greater usefulness to society than either the carpenter or mason could boast of. The MASONS followed the procession as far as No. 90, Reed and Rayner and a number of men at work in a way, whose planing mill was made a splendid turn out, having a large Steam Engine, working a number of machines in a long shed, drawn by two horses.

The PRINTERS and BOOKBINDERS came next, under the care of A. A. Stevenson, Esq. The Printers had a waggon with presses at work, and boys distributing the printed bills, as they came out, amongst the crowd. They displayed a number of inscriptions, claiming a high rank for their art, such as "We Rule the World." "Monarch's Power in fetle when compared with this," &c. The number in their procession was not very great. The BOOKBINDERS had a van, displaying ladgers, &c., in various styles of binding.

The last section of the Trades' Procession was composed of a variety of different pursuits. S. P. Tilton, Esq., Marshal. Mr. C. Fitts, Baker, had a van of BISCUITS. The Messrs. Lyman had three vans filled with medicines, paints and oils, followed by their employees in procession, to the number of thirty or forty. The procession of THE BUTCHERS was very effective They wore the blue aprons of their craft, and were mounted on spirited horses. They presented a dazzling appearance. They were preceded by an eight horse vehicle, which made a fine display of beef, pork, mutton, &c., and they had raised aloft on their pole, the words "We kill to keep alive!" The GLAZIERS came next, in a waggon in which several men were at work making putty, cutting glass, &c. A waggon, containing a variety of Iron Castings, followed.

The Trades' Procession was closed by the MECHANICS' INSTITUTE, under the Marshalship of Captain E. Roy and Aides. S. Desrivieres and J. B. Duhamel, Esquires. Then came the Sarsfield Band, preceding the Grand Division of the NATIONAL SOCIETIES. Each Society was marshalled under its appropriate Banners, and accompanied by a Band of Music. The NEW ENGLAND SOCIETY made a good show, having their ranks swelled by many of the guests from the United States. The ST. PATRICK'S SOCIETY turned out in great strength, each member wearing a green ribbon as badge. The procession of the ST. JEAN BAPTISTE, in its several divisions, was very numerous. It embraced, we should say, not fewer than 1500 persons, old and young. They marched, arranged under the following divisions:

St. Antoine.
St. Joseph.
St. Francois Xavier.
L'Institut Canadien.
L'Union St. Joseph.
St. Jacques Section.
St. Michel.
Temperance Society.
College de Montreal.

AND

The Officers of St. Jean Baptiste.

A large number of the scholars attending the Schools of the CHRISTIAN BROTHERS walked in front of the procession, under the charge of their instructors. The ST. ANDREW'S, ST GEORGE'S and GERMAN SOCIETY made most respectable appearances. Their numbers, however, were not very considerable.

The MERCANTILE LIBARY ASSOCIATION, the HARBOR COMMISSIONERS, BOARD OF TRADE and the MUSICAL AND CORPORATION OF MONTREAL preceded by the RIFLE BAND, closed the vast procession. Crowds were assembled along the whole of the route, in order to witness it. The windows of the different houses were filled with well-dressed and beautiful ladies, and flags and banners were displayed in every direction.

THE BANQUET!

The grand Banquet was given last evening, and was a most splendid affair. One of the great workshops of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, at Point St. Charles, was fitted up for the occasion, and a magnificent apartment of over 300 feet long by 70 feet broad, affording ample accommodation for 4,000 guests, was thus obtained. Everything that could be done to embellish this noble banquet hall was effected by the committee in their commendable profession of taste, and in which their art was called into requisition. It bore the Latin inscription. "Consuetudinem sequitur, qui fortem vestes sibi?" A magnificent display of a considerable variety of FURS, tastefully arranged on a waggon by G. W. Reed.

The fifth section was that of the WORKERS IN LEAS—one peculiarly appropriate to the day. It was under the charge of W. P. Bardley, Esq. THE RETURN TO TOWN.

The Machinery at the Wheel-house having been examined, the excursionists were conveyed back to Montreal by railway and steamboat, as they came. When the vast concourse landed at Island Wharf, a process ion was formed to Commissioner Square, where the Water Works were to be inaugurated. Some delay took place, waiting for the Governor General to grace the ceremony with his presence. His Excellency had come at the appointed hour, and finding that the city authorities were not there punctually, had departed.

INAUGURATION OF THE WATER WORKS.

A quarter of an hour having elapsed after the Mayor and the leading citizens of Montreal took their places on the platform without his Excellency again making his appearance, the proceedings were commenced at about one o'clock by an address from his Worship the Mayor.

The fountain then began to play, throwing the water to a height of at least 150 feet. A number of lesser jets, surrounding the main fountain, were opened at the same time, and other streams were thrown up by firem n with their hose. The spectacle had a striking effect, and seemed to give unbounded satisfaction to the crowd of thousands who filled the surrounding square.

THE MILITARY REVIEW!

The next spectacle of interest was the Grand Military Review, in the Champs de Mars, by General Eyre, Commander of the Forces. It commenced at half-past two, and continued for about an hour and a half.—The 39th Regiment and the Montreal Volunteer Rifles went through a number of military evolutions sham skirmishes, &c., which afforded great delight to the spectators. A number of militia officers, from a distance, were present in their uniforms. A few accidents occurred from persons being struck by the wadding of the guns, but none of them were serious.

THE FIREWORKS!

A great display of Fireworks commenced shortly after eight o'clock last night, on the Island wharf, and lasted for a couple of hours They were of great variety—some of them exceedingly beautiful.

We need hardly say that these Fireworks were witnessed by a very large crowd.—Masses of eager spectators were scattered along the wharves and perched on every height. Several balloons were sent up, apparently from the roof of the Montreal House, and soared out of sight.

The Exhibition commenced with a grand Discharge of Rocket of various garnitures, and was followed by the following demonstrations:—

Salute of Floral Shells, which burst at an altitude of several hundred feet, and dis played clusters of Coloured Stars, Showers of Gold Rain, &c.

Grand Flight of Rockets, which consisted of a simultaneous discharge of numerous Rockets, Illumination of Bengal Lights, which changed to beautiful Crimson fires. Discharge of Rockets with White Stars.

Triple Salute, which commenced with a vertical wheel of brilliant fires, decorated with crimson and green—and changed to a spendid Cross of Malta, ending with reports. Discharge of Rockets with Gold Rain.

Palm Trees, which changed from a base of three revolving wheels to three beautiful Palm Trees, filling the air with stars of various colours. Discharge of Tourbillions.

Morning Glory, composed of large revolving wheels, mingled in their evolutions with coloured reflections crimson and green, forming a gorgeous change piece. Discharge of Rockets with Serpentaus.

The Mechanics Arm, (dedicated to the Mechanics' Institute) composed of lance, work, which showed the uplifted arm, hammer, &c.—decorated with a beautiful green wreath, in imitation of Nature. Discharge of Rockets with streamers.

This design was very striking, and went off admirably. After it came:—

Telegraph Illustration.—pigeons or Courantines, which traversed lines 300 feet from various points. Discharge of Parachute Rockets, suspending in the air beautiful Colourel stars.

Grand Battery, composed of Roman Candles which filled the air with stars of various colours, and terminated with a heavy explosion of Mines, and discharged serpents in every direction. Discharge of Tourbillions.

Georgeous Ring Piece, which showed four beautiful revolving rings, and produced a magic effect. Discharge of Floral Shells.

Aurora, which commenced with a brilliant wheel and mutated to a halo of Chinese Garbs, Battery of Shells, Crimson lights, representing the Morning Sun. Discharge of Rockets and Tourbillions.

Polka Piece, which mutated from a wheel of Crimson and Green, to Double Contra Revolving Polkas, decorated with various colours. Discharge of Rockets.

Grand Battery of Shells, of heavy explosions. This produced a simultaneous discharge of numerous Shells, which filled the air with serpents, gold rain, coloured stars, &c., at an altitude of several hundred feet. Discharge of Tourbillions

Peruvian Cross. This opened with a vertical wheel of splendid colours, which mutated to brilliant diamond cross fires, decorated with coloured lights, and ended with reports. Discharge of shells.

Zenia Peruvia, which commenced with a wheel of crimson and green, spreading to variegated Saxons and Chinese sun fires, forming the Flower of Peru. Discharge of Tourbillions.

Yew Tree, which mutated from a decorated wheel to Chinese Garbs, forming a beautiful tree, and terminating with explosions. Discharge of Rockets.

But perhaps the finest of the whole exhibition (except the final one) was that described as the Emblem of Union. A novel local design, representing the City Seal, showing in their appropriate colours the Rose Shamrock, Thistle and Beaver, and flanked upon either side, enclosing in beautiful Scroll Work the initials G. T. R. and C. W., emblematic of the Union of Canada East and Canada West. The whole arched by the familiar motto, "Concordia Salus," in letters of fire, and surmounted by the English Crown. Discharge of Rockets.

The Grande Finale consisted of a magnificent Temple, composed of three beautiful Arches. The central arch bore the motto of "God save the Queen"; and below glittered the Crown of England, studded with jewels. Beneath the arch was seen a Steamship, in coloured fires, and upon the arch were the words "Montreal Ocean Steamships." The arch upon the left bore the motto, "Success to G. T. R." and beneath was seen, in coloured fires, a Locomotive.

This elaborate design emblematic of Loyalty, Commerce and Prosperity terminated amid the bursting Mines, Candles, and Flights of Rockets.

THE BALL!

The Ball last evening was with very many of the visitors the chief attraction, and was looked forward to with high anticipations by the ladies. It was held in a large Concert Room in the Bonsecour buildings—the Council Chamber and other offices of the Corporation being thrown open for the use of the guests as retiring-rooms, refreshment-rooms, wardrobe-room, &c.

The hour fixed for throwing open the doors was nine o'clock, and no sooner was this done than vast crowds began to pour in. The crush was very great Hoops suffered considerably.

In the Ball-room, except in a few clear spaces kept partially open for dancing, there was scarcely standing-room. The number present was estimated at from seven to eight thousand persons. Large numbers holding tickets turned away fromt he door, through sheer unwillingness to endure the pressure.

The Governor General entered the Ball Room with the ladies of his family about 10 o'clock, and left very shortly afterwards.

The Music was excellent, furnished by the Military, Portland and local Bands.

The Supper Room was small and much squeezing had to be undergone before it was possible to enter it; but once in, the guests received most liberal entertainment.

The time for this national courtesy is considered to be opportune in view of the settlement of the Central American question.—Globe

PLOUGHING BY STEAM.—At the recent annual exhibition of the Royal Agricultural Society in England, a field locomotive (Mr. Boydell's) dragged seven Ploughs connected together in one frame, with considerable ease and speed over quite undulating ground. The boiler, engine, wheels, &c., in short, the whole locomotive, including an endless railway on which it runs to give it a broad, firm bearing on the earth, weighs about nine tons, and with steam at sixty pounds (about the usual pressure, by the way, on English locomotive, instead of 110, as with us), works up to twelve horse power. The fuel used was coal. Two other exhibitors rivalled each other in drawing ploughs by stationary engines, employing 1inch wire ropes for the purpose. Anchors have to be placed on the opposite side of the field from the engine, and the ploughs were drawn back light by means of pulleys. One used for anchors simply heavy loaded waggons, with sharp-rimmed wheels which cut into the ground, so as to offer great resistance to being dragged sideways, while they were easily moved lengthways along the side of the field as the ploughing progressed.

Toronto, November 15.

There was a fair attendance of farmers in the market this morning, and all the produce offering moved off freely at full prices. Demand seems unusually active.

WHEAT.—The market was more buoyant and better prices were realized. For good samples 6s 10d was readily paid; while none but very inferior was purchashed below 6s 9d. Competition was more prevalent, and waggons moved off the market freely. There is also a good deal doing in the wholesale line, and we quote sales to the extent of 15,000 bushels; 10,000 on private terms, and 5,000 at 6s 10d in store.

FLOUR.—The market continues depressed, and having heard of no sales we refrain from altering our quotations which are merely nominal No. 1 28s 9d; 2nd 28s 9d; Fancy 30s; Extra 31s 3d a 32s 6d.

Special Notices.

To Nervous Sufferers.

The invigorating action of Sir Astley Cooper's Pills on the constitution is truly marvellous, and a single trial will convince the most sceptical of their power to restore the most feeble and debilitated to full health and energy. Indeed, they have given many an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change, produced by making use of this wonderful medicine in the diseased, debilitated and shattered nervous system. the relaxed and debilitated body is at once relieved, restored, enlivened and built up; the mental and physical symptoms of disease vanish under their influence, the stooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man; he stands erect, he moves with a firm step, his mind which was previously sunk in gloom, becomes bright, buoyant, active, and he goes forth refreshed regenerated, and conscious of new vigor to his accustomed occupations; and the effect is not temporary, on the contrary the relief is permanent, for the cordial properties of the medicine reach the constitution itself, and restores it to its first condition. In all diseases of the stomach and digestive organs they never fail. They also remove depression, excitement, restlessness, want of sleep, dislike to society, incapacity for business, loss of memory, confusion, giddiness, blood in the head, melancholy, mental debility; they increase and restore the appetite, purify the blood, strengthen the tone of the stomach, and give such energy and vigor to the constitution as must be felt to be believed.

To elderly persons, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are invaluable; strengthening the system against the attacks of age, they cause a continued cheerfulness and prolong life to the latest possible period.

Beware of Spurious Imitations.—None are genuine without the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail and Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York, on each box and on the directions. The Genuine Pills have also a correct likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box. Without these marks of authenticity, they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

By R. T. TRALL, M. D.

Published by FOWLER and WELLS, New York.

In the plan of the work, the wants and necessities of the People have been steadily in view. While almost every topic of interest in the departments of Anatomy, Physiology, Hygiene, Therapeutics, Dietetics is briefly presented, those of practical utility are always put prominently forward. The prevailing errors, conceits, and whims of the day and age exposed and refuted; the theories and hypothesis upon which the popular drug practice is predicated are controverted, and the why and wherefore of their fallacy briefly demonstrated. The following is a brief analysis of its contents:

History of Medicine; History of Bathing; History of Medicated Baths.

Anatomy illustrated by One, Hundred and Twenty appropriate engravings.

Physiology, illustrated, comprising the Relations of Muscular Action; Nervous Influence; Philosophy of Mind; Mesmeric Phenomena; the Special Senses; Functions of Digestion, Circulation, Respiration, Absorption, Secretion, Excretion, Retention, Calorification, Temperaments, the Races of Men, and Theory of Population.

Hygiene embracing all the relations of Air, Light, Diet, Food, Temperature, Exercise, Sleep, Clothing, Bathing, and the Passions, to the growth and development of Body and Mind, the Preservation of Health and the attainment of Longevity.

Dietetics, comprising the Bible, Anatomical, Physiological, Chemical and Experimental Evidence concerning the natural Dietetic Adaptation of Man.

Hydropathic Cookery, with Special Directions for the Preparation of Food for Dietetic Purposes.

Dietaries, containing the Therapeutic Dietaries of Diet for Invalids.

Philosophy of Water-Cure, with illustrated explanations of all the water-cure applications, a Philosophical Exposition of the modus operandi of water-treatment, and the true rationale of drug-treatment.

The Nature Symptoms and Treatment of all known Diseases are examined, the ill success of drug practice exposed, and the proper Medication recommended and specified.

The Treatment of surgical Diseases illustrated and the directions for the minor operations given.

The Management of Lying-in-Women, and the treatment of Children, &c.

The work is intended to be plain, intelligible and sufficient guide for domestic practice, or home treatment, in all ordinary diseases, embracing the whole range of subjects connected with the philosophy of life, the preservation of health, and the treatment of diseases.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,

TORONTO, 25th July, 1856

To Emigrants & Others Seeking LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Land through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities, afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD.

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Ferrall's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," (leading to the Lake Muskalo, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudenell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskalee, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country under Dr. French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St. Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Angleson, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kalada, runs almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 35 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for the purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and to be continued thence for the distance of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanokn, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Angleson, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence North to the Township of Kaladay, and to the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the Hastings Road. This road runs from beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, on the River Moira, about 22 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under the Hastings Road extends from 18 to 20 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for purchasing such articles of which they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Public Roads, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in the way of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are fully complied, after which no other payment only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preference will be made on a location, not exempted from the obligation of building and of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot.

The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

A LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as can be put up in four days by five men. The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the erection is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement are, in sections of Canada West, capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, also crops remarkable for description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land —some lots being much superior to others; but there is no unfoundness of any kind of land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighborhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with the same variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best land of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care and covered from wet—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £6 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settler and family at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be found in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labor.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords materials for sleighing during the winter season, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future.—And this very frost in the earth, not only facilitates communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the more large of cases, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Settlers of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the country from the shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken and will be completed in the present year: its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These projected works are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

A DAILY AND A WEEKLY FOR $3.50

Those of our readers of this paper who desire a daily review of the Cleveland, New York and other markets, may be accommodated on the following terms. For $3.50 we will send the "Commercial Gazette and Marine Record of the Lakes" for one year, and $4.145 more for the Daily Cleveländer for one year and send the Publisher's receipt to any address.

The "Cleveländer" is the size of this paper, is printed on minion and agate type, and on heavy white paper. The report of the home markets will be prepared by us, and we need not repeat that neither patience nor skill will be spared to make it full and correct in every particular. The New York, Buffalo, and Oswego reports are furnished by the N. Y. associated press, and will be correctly rendered. As a newspaper the "Cleveländer" is perhaps equal to any daily in the State. Recollect, only $3.50 for the "Daily Cleveländer" and the "Commercial Gazette" for one year. Parts of a dollar may be sent in postage stamps. For two dollars the two papers will be sent six months

Garden Manure Applied in Fall and Winter.

Frequent complaints are being made by those who are limited in their gardening operations, that whatever manures they apply to their gardens, burn up their crops when the heat of summer comes on. We have felt this inconvenience too, and in looking around to find a remedy have come to the conclusion that whenever a garden requires active stimulating manures, they should be applied in the fall or winter; in this way rank stable manure may be applied, and spaded or ploughed under immediately. It will have become by spring the proper food of plants, and as all manures leach upwards, the surface soil will be in fine condition for vegetables; whereas if the manure is applied in planting time, especially the crude manures generally applied here, just as vegetables are most required, they are fired by action of the sun on the manure, and the gardener has the mortification to find his labor and money thrown away. Whatever manures are applied in the spring should be well rotted, or of a cooling nature. There are many families that annually waste a barrel or two of leached ashes, when had it been applied to the garden patch, they would have had "early yorks" as well as their neighbors.

The soap suds from the wash is a manure that may be applied with safety and with profit in the spring, and yet how few ever use them except to enrich the earth around their kitchens, and make loathsome mud holes, when flowers, luscious fruit and many such vegetables, might be there made by them. We do not yet properly appreciate the importance of a garden. The bearing it has upon the happiness and health of a family is plainly perceptible whenever we find a well conducted garden; how highly important, then, that we should understand the proper food of plants. We would certainly be a mad physician who would give his fevered patients stimulants to raise the fever higher and higher, until vitality was consumed. Our garden soil can scarcely be too rich, but it must be richness restorative to moisture, and not as would be the case if the stable manure was applied in the spring, be a richness which burned every thing in contact with it. Ho then, for your waggons and wheelbarrows, load them up, and cover your gardens quickly; plough them up, turn the manure under, and when the early seed time comes you need not fear but a harvest will follow.

We copy the above from the Columbus Enquirer, and we highly approve of the advice given. Many manures have too intense an action when first applied to be used with safety; among these may be enumerated—Peruvian guano, sulphate and saltpetre, and many others. Any or all these may be applied safely in the fall or winter, and by being slightly covered, they will be carried into the soil at a season when the temperature is not sufficient to evaporate the volatile portions, and hence, they become divided before spring, so that the young spongiotes at first starting, do not come in contact with any material quantity.—Working Farmer.

Oat Fodder for Horses.

At a discussion had at a meeting of the Darlington (Eng.) Farmer's Club, December 8th, on the best and cheapest mode of keeping draught horses during the winter; Mr. Trotter said:

"I have paid some attention to the subject of draught horses during winter; for the last three years I have adopted quite a different mode to what I previously followed. "My method formerly, was to allow my horses each two bushels of beans, and as much hay as they could eat, generally oliver hay. For the last three winters I have fed them almost entirely on cut oat sheaf—cut into half inch chaff—which has been a great saving to me.

"In an oat crop of about forty stocks per acre, which might yield near sixty bushels. The field of a dressing of compost is the core of both. No person can feel well while under a coative habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

For Dyspepsia, which is sometimes the cause of drowsiness, and always uncomfortable, a mild dose—from one to four—to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and the heartburn, bodyburn, and soulburn of dyspepsia will rapidly disappear. When it has gone, don't forget what caused it.

For a Foul Stomach, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression, of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength is restored to the system.

For Nervousness, Sick Headache, Nausea, Pain in the Stomach, Back, or Side, take from four to eight pills on going to bed. If they do not operate sufficiently, take more the next day until they do. These occasional doses will be found from the system. Don't wear these and their kindred disorders because your stomach is foul.

For Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to cleanse the system. The eruptions will very generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many painful ulcers and sores have been healed up by the purging and purifying effect of these Pills, and some disgusting diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have completely yielded to their influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health. Patients of your family or society from whom you should parade yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the unclean diseases of the skin, because your system wants cleansing.

To Purify the Blood, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which sow the seeds of incurable diseases will be swept out of the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

Liver Complaint, Jaundi e, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the liver. In most cases this organ vitiates the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is disastrous to the health, and the constitution is frequently undermined by no other cause. Indigestion is the symptom. Obstructions of the liver which cause the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. The produces Jaundice, with a long and dangerous train of their attendant ills, or alternately costiveness and diarrhœa, prevails. Feverish symptoms, loss of appetite, weariness, restlessness, and melancholy, with sometimes inability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness; sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become a greenish yellow; the stomach and the bowels seem to be the bench; the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious diarrhœa, dysentery, &c. A medium dose of three or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is wicked to suffer such pains when you can cure them for 25 cents.

Rheumatism, Gout, and all Inflammatory Fevers are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, to move the bowels gently, but freely.

As a Dinner Pill, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

CATHARTIC PILLS

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and, by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors, Physicians, and Patients, has proved the dangerous diseases almost beyond belief, were they not authenticated by persons of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. These certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give a few Directions for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

For Costiveness.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as to gently move the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure of any complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while under a coative habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

For Dyspepsia, which is sometimes the cause of drowsiness, and always uncomfortable, a mild dose—from one to four—to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. A Quarterly Meeting of the Board of Public Instruction, agreeably to the Statute, will be held at Sandwich, on Thursday the Thirtieth day of September, at the hour of 12 o'clock.

PAUL JOHN SALTER
Secretary to the Board.
Sandwich, 19th Sept., 1856

NOTICE.

CAME into the enclosure of the Subscriber on or about the 10th, day of December 1855, a large brown Ox, slightly marked with white on the breast, and has small to the purging and purifying effect of these Pills, and some disgusting diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have completely yielded to their influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health. Patients of your family or society from whom you should parade yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the unclean diseases of the skin, because your system wants cleansing.

To Purify the Blood, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which sow the seeds of incurable diseases will be swept out of the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

Liver Complaint, Jaundi e, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the liver. In most cases this organ vitiates the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is disastrous to the health, and the constitution is frequently undermined by no other cause. Indigestion is the symptom. Obstructions of the liver which cause the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. The produces Jaundice, with a long and dangerous train of their attendant ills, or alternately costiveness and diarrhœa, prevails. Feverish symptoms, loss of appetite, weariness, restlessness, and melancholy, with sometimes inability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness; sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become a greenish yellow; the stomach and the bowels seem to be the bench; the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious diarrhœa, dysentery, &c. A medium dose of three or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is wicked to suffer such pains when you can cure them for 25 cents.

Rheumatism, Gout, and all Inflammatory Fevers are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, to move the bowels gently, but freely.

As a Dinner Pill, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

No. 1, CHEAP HOUSE

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tilled earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. Knight, James Sowerby and D. W. Ray.

Terms: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.— Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the Illustrated Horticulturist for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE

AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE

Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., relating to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will occasionally favor us as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Introductory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on FOLSOM'S NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is open the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property, and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the various classes in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such since by arbitrary and childlike rules, cumbrous forms and false notions; and hence enables them to commence corr ct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of mercantile cards, classified somewhat after the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and menial formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so qualifies him for his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (but graduate thoroughly) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably occupied six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, a Chirbyhographic system will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirbyhography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Speak Gently.

BY DAVID BATES.

Speak gently! It is better far
To rule by love, than fear—
Speak gently—let not harsh words mar
The good we might do here!

Speak gently! Love doth whisper low
The vows that true hearts bind;
And gently friendship's accents flow;
Affection's voice is kind.

Speak gently to the little child,
Its love be sure to gain;
Teach it in accents sweet and mild,
I may not long remain.

Speak gently to the young, for they
Will have enough to bear—
Pass through this life as best they may,
'Tis full of anxious care.

Speak gently to the aged one,
Grieve not the care worn heart;
The sands of life are nearly run,
Let such in peace depart.

Speak gently, kindly, to the poor;
Let no harsh tone be heard;
They have enough they must endure,
Without an unkind word.

Speak gently to the erring—know,
They may have toiled in vain;
Perchance unkindness made them so,
Oh! win them back again.

Speak gently! He who gave his life
To bend man's stubborn will,
When elements were in fierce strife,
Said to them, 'peace, be still.'

Speak gently! 'tis a little thing
Dropped in the heart's deep well;
The good, the joy, which it may bring,
Eternity shall tell.

From a Correspondent of the London Star.

The Mysteries, Miseries, and Delights of a Turkish Bath.

I alighted at the door of the head bathing establishment of Grand Cairo.

Behold me, now in the vestibule of a genuine Eastern hammum. Two tall Nubian slaves assist me to disrobe, and in the place of my multiplied garments attire me in a piece of loose cloth buttoned just above the hips. Thus denuded, I am mounted on a pair of clogs; or pattens about ten inches in height. I am then supported on either side while I make my way over the glassy marble floor to a bathing saloon, number one. Here I am stretched upon a plank, covered by a white cloth, and recline at an angle of forty-five. The room is then filled with vapor, and, in about ten minutes I am perspiring profusely through every pore. I grow faint, the vapor is turned off, a few buckets of tepid water is thrown over me, a cup of coffee is administered, and a few whiffs at a chibouque, and I am shrouded, and straightway conducted into bathing saloon number two.

Here sitting on the side of a marble reservoir of hot water, I am drenched with buckets of the scalding liquid. I am then laid down and scrubbed from head to foot with woollen gloves and a sort of fuller's earth. Then drenched again. I am next submitted to the operation of pealing, a process which removes all accumulation of dirt and cuticle—the latter, when, in fact seems to take off an outer skin. This peeling over I am drenched again. The next stage is that of pumice stoning—applied to the inside of the hands, the soles of the feet, and the heels, until all horny and hard parts are rubbed down to a delicate softness. Now comes a season of cooperative leisure and repose. While I am on my back the operator is cutting my finger and toe nails, and carefully extracting from every part of my body whatever is extraneous, unsightly or inconvenient.

I am next made to sit up, and in my sitting posture am shaved—the hairs are carefully pulled out of my nostrils—my ears are picked—my hair is cut—my whiskers and moustache are trimmed, and my head is, at last, declared to be finished. To these processes succeed that of shampooning; namely, moulding the flesh, cracking the joints, and loosening every integument in every socket through the frame. Then a lathering all over with a peculiar kind of emollient soap and then another drenching. The time is now come to be introduced into bathing saloon number three. The atmosphere of this is, after the temperature of the last, gratefully cool, and here I am permitted to immerse myself in a large cistern of moderately cold water. Oh! how refreshing and restoring after the sweatings, rubbings, pullings, pinchings, kneadings, crackings, hair tweakings, beatings, and pumice-stonings, of Nos. 1 and 2.

I am reluctant to quit my present quarters, but am commanded to get out. I do so, put my tender and new born infant like skin, (as susceptible as the surface of a shinned eel,) is gently wiped down, and enveloped in a sheet—then, mounted once more on my lofty pattens, and supported as at first, I am led back to the robing saloon, where laid upon a mattress on the floor, with my head raised by a pillow, and with a quilt over me, I am presented with a cup of coffee and a Persian Kullian. I sip, and puff, and dose; and dose, and puff, and sip, and am of opinion that, after all I have undergone, my present bliss has been cheaply purchased. I am roused from my reverie by a polite inquiry if I will be a second time shampooned; to which I answer—"Certainly not." In half-an-hour, or thereabouts, I rise and dress, and leave the hammam. And now I feel the benefit of my bath. I seem to have gone back to the days of my childhood. My body is lighter and more elastic than a feather. My spirits are exuberant. I am conscious of breathing the circumambient air through millions of pores. I am ready to shake hands with the donkey, and caress the boy. The external world never looked so beautiful. The future never so cheering. I am ready to do any person in the universe a good turn. So ends my Turkish bath.

Lord Norbury.

So ferocious an expositor of the law was this judge, that scarcely a line can be found to show that he had any of the better elements of humanity in him. Under such circumstances we are surprised at meeting the following anecdote, which we have never seen in print, showing, as it does, that he did not in every instance deserve the character, which his blood-thirsty demeanor towards the lamented Emmet has won for him.

During the time Norbury was on the bench in Ireland, there happened, what was by no means rare, a season of great scarcity. A man, who was one of the middling class of farmers, found himself surrounded, with a family of 8 children—no bread—no money, no employment. In such a strait he betook himself to one proprietor here, and another there; represented his situation to them, asking a loan till the pressing times were over. But in every instance he met with rejection. What was he to do? work there was none. Beggary found no success. "There is enough upon the earth," said he, "God in his mercy and love will forgive me. My children shall not die." That night he drove from the enclosure of a neighboring farm, two fat heifers—killed and packed them before morning. The next day the steward discovered the loss, which he at once reported to his master, a search was obtained, and every place in the vicinity was inspected. But no well known, and so unfortunately respected in the integrity of this man, that, though acquainted with his poverty and his necessities, his house was left unentered. The search meeting with no success, £100 reward was offered for the offender. For a time no development took place till one day by a chance the road, the man was acquainted in the neighborhood, called to light his pipe. The good woman offered him one of the stools which make the seats of the Irish cabins. In stepping back the stool fell over, and the traveller thrown upon the floor was amazed to behold the hides of two cows nicely rolled up and stowed under the bed. He recognized the brand upon the horns. Without apprizing the occupants of his discovery, he immediately proceeded to obtain the reward, and an examination of the master of the house was had before a magistrate, which resulted in his being bound over to await the Wexford assizes. But so strong was the belief in his innocence, that bail, though for a large amount, was readily obtained. His sureties paid no regard to his case, suffering him to go whither and when he chose.

Before the commencement of the term, and, notwithstanding the extreme heat of the weather, he started on foot to the assize town, determined to be there before the opening of the Court. In his way, coming to a point in the road where it was intersected by another, he met several carriages, preceded by an escort of bailiffs, police officers &c., and which were following the same direction. A personage dressed in a scarlet robe, whom he observed was the most important functionary in the procession had left his carriage, and was walking leisurely behind. This individual observing the haste with which our friend was measuring the distance, so unusual was it upon a day so intensely warm, accosted him.

"What is your haste, my good man," said he.

"I am going to Wexford to take my trial," replied our pedestrian, "don't you know there is to be an assize there. Old Norbury, the walking gallows, is coming down, and there is no hope for us, as he never lets a prisoner go if he can hang him."

"Indeed my friend, what is your crime?"

"I stole two cows."

"You stole them! Why do you admit it? By no means deny it."

"No sir, I shall not. I stole them, and I wont buy my life with a lie. I did steal them, and I'll say so. I had reasons though."

Here the honest fellow repeated the story we have given, as he left the last advice of the stranger was for him to plead not guilty. "It will go hard enough with you then," said he, "but there is no chance for you, if you confess."

Punctual to the hour, the prisoner surrendered himself to the sheriff at the opening of the Court. Conceive his astonishment when he saw upon the bench the very man he had conversed with on the road. It struck him that it made slight odds what he pleaded or what was proved. He required no great exercise of the imagination, to consider himself already a dead man. The prisoner was arraigned, and after the indictment was read, the judge, recapitulating the specifications addressed him:

"You are here charged with stealing on such a night, from such an enclosure, two cows of such a size and color, are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Oh, you big villian, why do you ask me? you know all about it your self." But jury, and spectators were amazed. Lord Norbury, Chief Justice of the King's Bench charged with connivance at a felony! But it flashed upon the ready mind of Norbury that a way to the prisoner's deliverance was Providentially opened.

"Mr. Sheriff," said he, in a voice of thunder "take that man away! Why do you bring a lunatic here! Never let such a case occur again. A lunatic brought here! If ever happens again I will have the whole county punished for the contempt of this Court."

This was at once done, so fortune were the commands of the arbitrary Judge observed; and thus did Norbury's presence of mind save the life of an honest man and furnish materials for the only story that can be told to his credit.

Miscellany.

A NATURAL ALMANACK.—By counting knuckles on the hand, with the spaces between them, all the months with thirty-one days will fall on the knuckles, and those with thirty days or less will come in the spaces. January, first knuckle; February, first space; March, second knuckle; April, second space; May, third knuckle; June, third space; July, fourth knuckle; August, first knuckle; September, first space; October, second knuckle; November second space; December, third knuckle.

George W. Johnson, one of the large sugar planters of the Mississippi below New Orleans, who died recently, has left an estate valued at not less than $7,000,000. He has, by his will, manumitted all his slaves, 200 in number. They are to be sent to Liberia 4 years from his death, and each one is to be furnished with 50 dollars.

There is more sunshine than rain, more joy than pain, more smiles than tears, in the world. Those who say to the contrary, we would not choose for our friends or companions.

MOZART AFRAID OF TRUMPETS.—Mozart's exquisite organization for music was such, that a false, rough note; was a torture to him. When a child, he had an insurmountable horror of the trumpet; the sight of this instrument produced upon him the same impression as that of a loaded pistol does upon other children, when pointed at them in sport. His father thought he could cure him of this fear, by causing the trumpet to be blown in his presence, notwithstanding his sons entreaties to be spared that torment; but at the first blast he turned pale, fell upon the floor, and would probably have been in convulsions had they not immediately ceased.

The rapid increase in the consumption of paper, especially in this country, is well known, but its whole extent may not fairly be anticipated. The amount of paper produced annually in France is about 150,000,000 pounds, of which 17,000,000 are exported. England produces about 177,000,000 pounds, of which 16,000,000 are sent abroad, and 161,000,000 used at home.—The United States consume about 270,000,000 of pounds, or an amount greater than England and France combined. A large proportion of this is manufactured at home, and the remainder imported from Europe, chiefly from France and England. The consumption of paper in England and France is about four and a half pounds for each person, while in the United States it reaches ten pounds for each individual. The rags required to make the 270,000,000 of paper consumed in the United States, amount to 337,000,000 pounds—one and a quarter of rags being required to make one pound of paper.

TERRIFIC EARTHQUAKE IN EGYPT.—At Alexandria, and throughout Egypt, earthquakes have been felt. At Cairo, 200 houses have been overthrown. 800,000 inhabitants have taken to the fields and encamped.—There are but few killed or wounded.

Smyrna and the Greek Archipelago were shaken by simultaneous shocks. The Isle of Rhodes has been devastated, and one of its largest forts rent open and thrown down.

There was a violent shock of an earthquake on the 12th at Malta, which has seriously damaged the fortifications.

At Corea, the capital of the Isle of Candia, the destruction has been enormous.—The city and mole are partially destroyed.

IMPORTANT FOR ST. CATHERINES.—The Constitutional understands that a private letter received by the Mayor, per last English Mail, from the Hon. Wm. H. Merritt, intimates that all the Stock necessary to complete the Port Dalhousie and Thorold Railroad to Port Colborne, has been subscribed, and that as soon as he returns the contracts will be let, so as to push the work through with all convenient speed.

The Russian Government intends to make Sebastopol a magnificent city. A letter from Constantinople says the attempt made to get up the fragments of the vessels sunk at the mouth of the harbor appears likely to prove successful.

The London Canadian News of the 15th ult., says:—"We understand that it is the intention of the present Ministry, as soon as the necessary arrangement and details can be completed, to propose a liberal and extensive emigration scheme which will in all probability be found more suitable for the generality of the emigrating classes in this country than the Free Land Grants; for as we have pointed out, the latter require certain physical qualities, and some practical experience, although undoubtedly there may be persons in the United Kingdom who could successfully embrace this opportunity."

During a learned lecture by a German adventurer, he illustrated the glory of mechanics as a science thus:—"See ting vat is made is more superior dan de reader. I show you how in some ting. Suppose I make the round wheel of de coach. Very, well: das wheel roll round five hundred mile, and I cannot roll one myself! Suppose I am a cooper, vat you call, no? I make de big tub to hold wine. He hold tens and gallons; and I cannot hold more than five bottle! So you see dat what is made is more superior dan de maker."

A RICH ELOPEMENT.—TWO BARRELSFUL TO ONE BABE.—A St. Joseph, Mo., correspondent writing on the 23rd of October, says: Last night our gossips were thrown into ecstacies by an elopement, which certainly was of an extraordinary character. It appears that three gentlemen were wedding a belle up town and that the smiled equally on both. Yesterday she was married to one, and last night to the other, and strange to say, she kept both engagements. At 9 a.m. one bridegroom was made happy by the pledge of hand and heart, and at 9 p.m the other was made happy by the possession o her person. They fled it dusk and were wedded at Bloomington, just twelve miles distant, and continued on their way to realms unknown.

A witty lawyer once jocosely asked a boarding house keeper the following question:—"Mr. M——if a man gives you $500 to keep for him and he dies, what do you do? Do you pray for him?"

"No sir" replied Mr. ——I pray for another like him."

ORIGIN OF THE EPITHET "TURNCOAT."—The opprobrious term turncoat took its rise from one of the first dukes of Savoy, whose dominions lying open to the incursions of the two contending houses of Spain and France, he was obliged to temporize and fall in with the power that was most likely to distress him, according to the success of their arms against one another. So being frequently obliged to change sides he humorously got a coat made that was blue on one side and white on the other, and might be indifferently worn either side out. While on the Spanish interest he wore the blue side out, and the white side was the badge of the French. From hence he was called Emmanuel, surnamed the Turncoat, by way of distinguishing him from other princes of the same name of that house.

NOT A BAD SUGGESTION.—A correspondent of the Daily News says, that as the abolishing of duty seems now pretty generally acknowledged, and as there is no doubt less many who would eschew the use of the use of the razor were it not for fear of appearing singular—a feeling which few can withstand, he would suggest to those who are in favor of wearing the beard, that on the first of January next they simultaneously give up shaving. An impulse would at once be given to the movement, and singularity be obviated.

From the Colonist we learn that the French iron Screw steamship Le Lyonnais, which sailed from New York to Havre on the first of November, was run into on the 2nd by an unknown vessel, and abandoned on the next day in a sinking condition.—Only five passengers out of forty in the cabin have been rescued, together with eleven of the crew. The remainder of the ship's company, near one hundred and fifty souls, is supposed to have been lost. They put to sea on a raft, which those who have been saved say did not possibly weather out the storm which prevailed at the time.

ANOTHER INSTANCE OF THE MUNIFICENCE OF THE QUEEN.—We are happy to be enable to announce that her Majesty, upon learning the straitened circumstances in which the two unmarried daughters of the late Mr. Salo, formerly her Majesty's musical instructor, have been left by his decease after a lengthened illness, which incapacitated him for many years from the exercise of his profession, has in the most kind manner granted them a pension of £50 a-year out of her privy purse.—London paper.

THE LIMBS.—On examination the lungs will be found full of innumerable little holes, like a sponge. These holes are the cells into which the air enters when we breathe. So great is their number that they have been calculated to amount to 170,000,000, forming a surface thirty times larger than the human body. Every one of these cells is provided with a net work of blood vessels, by which means every portion of the blood is brought into immediate contact with the air. When this great amount is taken into consideration, we shall at once feel how necessary it is to supply pure air to the lungs with every breath we breathe.—Germantown Telegraph.

In our last issue, a mischevious person some time discharged from this office reversed the Royal arms, which we did not discover till too late to remedy. A better look out in future will be observed against such malpractices. We understand he left by the cars for Hamilton, 'twixt the evening of Monday and Tuesday morning. Printers and the proprietors of newspapers had better be on the outlook, as it is supposed the same person has been guilty of the same pranks before.—London Herald

HALIFAX, Nov. 20.

The steamer Niagara from Liverpool, arrived.

The steamer Persia, from New York, reaches Liverpool at 7 p. m. on the 7th inst.

The steamer Washington sailed from Southampton, for New York, on the 5th inst.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Lord Palmerston delivered an address on Education, before a large assembly in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester. He also made two speeches in defence of his foreign policy, and then went to Liverpool, where, in an address to him by the President of the Chamber of Commerce, the following passage occurred:—

"It would not be doing justice to the commercial community of Liverpool were no mention made of that question which most deeply affected it—the late difficulties or threatened difference between this country and the United States. There is, my Lord, but one expression of feeling amongst us as to the manner in which your Lordship and her Majesty's advisers settled that question. You not only consulted the dignity of this country, but, in spirit and fact, satisfied all the interests concerned. My Lord, for this we feel deeply indebted to your Lordship and her Majesty's Government."

To this Lord Palmerston replied with considerable embarrassment of manner—

"I was sure, gentlemen, that the policy which we recently accepted in our difference with the United States, must meet with your approbation. We felt, that while on the one hand, in order to maintain the dignity of the country, it was necessary to show that even the calamities of war between their neighbouring races would be encountered if there was a necessity for it. We felt that, while it was necessary to show this, we ought to waive all minor and party considerations, which might perhaps, have justified the expression of angry feelings, that it was more dignified to look to what we believe to be the friendly feelings of the great mass of the people of the United States, than take too much notice of circumstances in a remoter sphere that might perhaps have justified feelings of irritation. The result has fully borne out, I think, the wisdom of this course. I am sure that in proportion as your enterprize is developed, in the same proportion we may look to cementing permanently those ties of friendship and good will which exist, and ought to be perpetuated between the people on the two sides of the Atlantic."

In Lord Palmerston's speech at Manchester he used the following expression, which has been the subject of much remark:—

"I hope the peace will be lasting, but its endurance must depend on the fidelity with which its conditions are fulfilled. If that power which provoked hostility, faithfully carried out the treaty, then, doubtless, peace will be long preserved."

On Thursday evening, the 6th inst, the Directors of the Bank of England held a protracted sitting, in the course of which they deliberately considered the expediency of making a further change in the rates of discount, with the view to improve the exchanges, and to arrest the continued outflow of gold to the continent. The withdrawal of a considerable amount during the last few days, and the certainty that the demand must continue unless it be interrupted by large arrivals from America, no doubt stood to have engaged the attention of the court, and the resolution not to make any change for the present was arrived at only by a majority of one.

The British Government advertises at Lloyd's, for a ship to convey some hundred emigrants to Nova Scotia, it being the intention to grant free passages to laborers and their families to that colony.

FRANCE.

The condition of the Bank of France shows no improvement.

Rumours continue of a probable modification in the Ministry.

M. Persigny's visit to the Emperor is connected with those rumors.

The event of the week is a semi-official Editorial in the Constitutional, on the question of alliance between the French and English Governments. This article speaks plainly, and says the presence of the naval squadron of England in the Black Sea, or the Austrian troops in the Principalities, are henceforth only an arbitrary and violent means of preventing a solution of the difference which Russia has been the first to propose in offering to submit the question to its natural judges. Is it decided rather to have recourse to arms? Is war again declared? Does the English Ministry itch to enter again upon hostilities without France? Not certainly to insure the execution or the treaty of Paris, but imprudently to rend it in pieces in the face of the world, with the object of satisfying an ambition that had been for the moment disguised. We repeat that it now depends upon the cabinets of London and Vienna to put an end to the pending dispute and to terminate the anxieties to which the present situation subjects. Let them consent to the reassembling of the Plenipotentiaries, without making arbitrary and inadmissable exclusions a condition—exclusions which would completely change the character, and be an additional breach of the treaties. Let us add that, if a peaceful solution is desired, this is the only proposal for that purpose which can decently be made.

It has been rumoured in Paris that the French fleet was about to proceed to the Black Sea. This, however, is not certain. The fleet may perhaps leave Toulon, but it is not probable it will go so far. Should it go to the Black Sea it is difficult to suppose that its object could be co-operation with the British squadron.

Count Kisseleff would proceed to Cam piegne, on Tuesday, to deliver to the Emperor an autograph letter from the Czar.

A good deal of discontent is prevailing in the manufacturing districts of France, owing to apprehensions of commercial reform, even without the immediate agency of legislation.

The Times (Paris) correspondent says that the tariff question is likely to add to the difficulties of the Imperial government, and the manufacturers express their dissatisfaction, and affirm that the Emperor initiated the prohibitive system, for which they voted for him for the Presidency as well as the empire.

Corn was falling, but there would be no marked difference until next year's crop was sown. At Toulon, Bordeaux and Marseilles the average price was maintained at the latest dates.

The Morning Herald (Paris) correspondent states that commercial accounts agree in admitting a greater abundance of money, and the certainty that no money crisis is to be feared through inability to meet engagements.

In the Paris corn market little was done during the past week.

Louis Napoleon continues at Campaigne, where he has had lengthened interviews with Baron Hummer, Austrian Plenipotentiary.

The Morning Post correspondent writes, on Monday evening, that Mr. Peere had arrived from Naples, and would leave on Tuesday for London. Lord Granville was in Paris and would visit Compeigne. The Neapolitan minister had not left Paris.

The funds showed some flatness, and closed quiet, the expression of feeling amongst us as to the manner in which your Lordship and her Majesty's advisers settled that question. You not only consulted the dignity of this country, but, in spirit and fact, satisfied all the interests concerned. My Lord, for this we feel deeply indebted to your Lordship and her Majesty's Government."

SPAIN.

A plan of finance will be laid before the Council of Ministers without delay.

Nothing is yet decided as to the creation of a Minister of Colonies.

The law of the Press, requiring a heavy deposit of surety money from editors, was re established.

A meeting of political notabilities had been held in the house of Gen Rom, for the purpose of re-organizing the Progressista party. Result was not known.

The Espana, a ministerial paper, decries the Anglo-French Alliance, and recommends the alliance of Spain with the Northern Powers.

It was said that despatches received by the Government from Rome represented that the negotiations about to be entered into by the Holy See would be conducted in a friendly spirit by the latter.

ITALY.

Respecting Neapolitan difficulties we have nothing more definite than the following from the Paris Patrie:—"The Neapolitan difference, if we may believe reports published by the Belgium journals are upon the point of retiring upon a better phase, and although the King of Naples, it is said, has ordered his representative in France and England to demand their passports as soon as they should be informed of the return of Baron Besnier and M Petre. It is thought an arrangement will be come to by the friendly interference of the Russian Minister at Naples. We shall soon know what we may expect on this subject, for a manifesto from the Neapolitan Government is expected, and if that document should not be of a conciliatory character, it is probable that the Neapolitan envoys will take their passports."

According to a recent agreement with the Pope, the Austrians are withdrawing their troops from several towns in the Papal dominions which they have for some time past occupied. At the same time they are making preparations for an overwhelming display of military force in Lombardy and on the frontier. The posts evacuated are immediately re-occupied by Papal and Swiss regiments. Bologne and Ancona are now the only posts held by the Austrians.

AUSTRIA.

The concession of the France Joseph Eastern Railroad is published, in addition to the lines already conceded. The company may construct a line from Urchacks to Temphenhow. The whole line must be completed within 10 years.

The commission on the navigation of the Danube is about to be re-assembled at Vienna. Turkey will send a representative.

PRUSSIA.

Letters say the relations between France and Prussia are drawing closer, there being talk of but two policies, that of France, Russia and Prussia, against England and Austria; such talk, however, is of little value.—It is also said that a new treaty of commerce is settled between Russia and Prussia, with a view to an international railroad communication. Private statements say that Prussia agrees with France and Russia in requiring that the Austrians should evacuate the Danubian Principalities and the English fleet shall leave the Black Sea.

RUSSIA.

The concession of the Russian railways to the credit Mobilier was signed Oct. 23rd. The Company undertakes the construction of 3,800 vers on 4 roads. These lines must be completed in 10 years, and the Russian Government guarantee 5 per cent. The capital of the Company is 270,000,000 of silver roubles.

By a letter from Vienna, we learn that the dispute with reference to the new Russian fortifications on the French coast, has come to an amicable settlement as far as France is concerned, but the Government is said to maintain that on these fortifications there is an evasion of the article of the treaty of peace.

THE NEAPOLITAN TROUBLE.

The Neapolitan affair remains as before. The recalled French and English Ambassadors have landed at Marseilles, and a ship or two from the fleet will occasionally visit Naples to see that all goes on quietly.

The Neapolitan Minister had not left Paris, and he held language as if he intended to remain. The same writer remarks that the advent of Rudchid Pasha secures a minister not likely to be influenced by Russian intrigue.

The Times Paris correspondent writes on Monday evening that M. Brenier had arrived from Naples.

A despatch from Toulon says the Neapolitan squadron does not stir; nevertheless it is taking on board provisions and munition of war for six months.

The Hudson's Bay Company.

The monopoly exercised by the Hudson's Bay Company is at length calling into action that antagonism of their usurped privileges, which has slumbered or been repressed for so many years. Not only is Canada being now aroused to this monstrous imposition, but in England also, we see that movements are being taken against their usurpations, and the exercise of supposed exclusive trade so contrary to every British feeling. The Hudson's Bay Company reads the signs in the lowering clouds, and are preparing to trim their sails to the coming gale, and soud above the surges. The pilot's cunning art they hope will save the barque from breakers which they dare not brave.

We understand that within a few days past, application has been made to the Crown Land Department to purchase for the Hudson's Bay Company numerous tracts of land situate within and along the coasts of Lakes Huron and Superior—tracts of land contiguous to their numerous forts and posts throughout the country, and at the mouths of the chief rivers emptying into those lakes, commanding the most important points for traffic and trade.

Will our commissioners of Crown Lands blindly accede to the application of the Hudson's Bay Company, and give to them the power to perpetuate their exclusive monopoly in Canada?

We shall have something more to say upon this subject; meanwhile we would like to know if the Hudson's Bay Company propose to pay 2s per acre, as did the Montreal Company for their 100,000; or are they to pay the same price as the poor man, namely 8s per acre, the upset price.—Globe.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, NOVEMBER 27, 1856.

European news this week is full of interest, from the fact that there appears to have been a greater intimacy of relations between France and Russia, for a short time past than is altogether consistent with the terms of the Anglo-French alliance. There can be no doubt that Russia will resort to every means within her reach to cause an estrangement between the allies. Russian diplomacy will stick fast to the object which is to be attained, and will not stop at trifles, and if by deceit and treachery she can gain her ends, they will not be left untried. It remains however to be seen if the Emperor Napoleon will sacrifice the alliance with Great Britain to obtain that of a false and treacherous power like Russia.—We believe that the sagacity of the Emperor would be underrated to suppose for a moment that his most trusty and powerful ally would be given up for one on whom no dependence whatever could be placed.

It was hoped that Russia, had been taught a lesson, which would have long been remembered; and that the disasters of the late war would have restrained her in her aggressions, but no sooner is peace restored and a treaty entered into, than she attempts to evade by quibbles, the performance of the portion which she had to fulfil. Though defeated in three battles Russia still declares that she is not vanquished, and still adheres to her traditional system of future aggrandisement. To the success, however, of this system, a break between England and France is an indispensible necessity. No effort then we repeat will be left untried to sever a union which is an impediment to Russian success. In France her agents will insinuate to the ears of the fidelity and loyalty of England, and on the other hand in England they will disclaim against the perfidy and fickleness of France; but to the wisdom of the people of England and France alone must we trust, whose instructed classes see through the Machiavelian policy of the Russian autocrat and his Cabinet, and discovering their dishonest policy and devices will guard against their dangers.

An alliance between Austria and England is likely to be concluded; and the firm and determined manner in which Lord Palmerston gave expression to his views in relation to the conduct of Russia in a speech at Manchester, in which he said, "I hope the peace will be lasting, but its endurance must depend upon the fidelity with which its conditions are fulfilled; if that power, which provoked hostility faithfully carries out the treaty, then, doubtless peace will be long preserved," is worthy of remark and shows clearly that there is a determination to compell Russia to perform her part in the treaty of peace.

The Steamer "Clifton," owned by O. Maclane, Esquire, of Chippewa, has been placed upon the route between Detroit and Sarnia. The Clifton has made a few trips this fall, and the success with which she has met, speaks well for the encouragement which the owner may expect during the next season, for his swift and staunch craft —a very model of perfection—She may be seen gliding swiftly through the water, carrying a broom with which she has so successfully swept the palm as far, as regards speed, from the boats running upon the same route, having made the run in 1½ hours less than either the Forester or Forest Queen.

So tired have the people upon the St. Clair become, with the monopoly of the Wards, that her arrival was hailed with the greatest pleasure, and nothing could have been more grateful to the ears of Mr. Maclane, that the cheers which greeted him as the Clifton passed up the River.

We hope, and have no doubt that when she commences to run in the Spring, that she will meet with a liberal support, that will enable the proprietor to continue hupon that route, and effectually destroy the monopoly which the Wards have heretofore enjoyed, and which has been so severely felt by the public.

We take from the Sarnia Observer the following in relation to a most infamous attempt to injure the Clifton, and which might have resulted in a serious loss of life, showing a recklessness in the Captain which is reprehensible in the extreme—

While on this subject, we cannot omit to notice a piece of very reprehensible conduct which occurred on Tuesday last, on the part of the Forest Queen towards the Clifton. While down the upward passage the boats happened to get very close to each other at the upper end of Lake St. Clair; and at the entrance of the River, where the channel is narrow, the Queen was steered so as, if possible, to crowd the Clifton out of the channel, and drive her on the shoals in order to prevent her from passing the Queen. The Clifton, however, kept on her course, and soon would have been out of the reach of the Queen, but just at this crisis, the wheelsman of the latter was ordered to port the wheel, so that the Queen ran into the Clifton, seriously damaging one of her paddle-boxes; the injury, however, was not sufficient to disable the Clifton, and she soon got out of the reach of her opponent. This is an evidence that the same spirit which actuated the Ward family when in the Canadian last season, still exists in a latent form, and will be exhibited towards all who dare to interfere in navigating the St. Clair, which they seem to look upon as their own especial and inalienable privilege.

They will find, however, that the system of crowding which they have followed hitherto in their success, will not enable them to remain masters of the river always. It will have a direct contrary effect. We believe the occurrence to which we now refer, has already awakened a spirit of opposition which will only increase with every additional instance of the exercise of similar despotism, and instead of effecting the object the Wards seek to accomplish, it will have an effect directly the reverse

CANADIAN TRADE WITH CHICAGO.

For the following interesting table, showing the trade that has sprung up within the last two years, we are indebted to a Chicago Journal. And under the present growing relations between this country and the United States, the character and amount of our trade in that direction become a question of considerable interest. These figures only show the trade carried on in British vessels to and from Chicago, and which are no doubt considerably increased, when we add that carried in their own vessels, which must be of some extent.

The New York Herald in writing upon the subjects of Railways, in the United States, presents rather a sad picture of their condition. The number of frauds that have been committed against many of the Railway Companies, have tended to destroy confidence in these stocks, notwithstanding the many efforts that have been made, to prevent a decline in them. The Toledo and Cleveland Railway Company, it is reported has been defrauded and a large amount in the issue of much more stock than permitted by their charter. This has enabled the company to declare large dividends, and put the public to suppose that they are in a prosperous condition, when in reality they areon the brink of ruin, the Herald says:—

It is the belief of the highest financial authority that not one, but several of the enterprises which are classed as prosperous, and whose scrip is dealt in at the board of Brokers on Change, are in fact rotten to the core, and that, like bloated beer-drinkers, they owe their flush of seeming health and soundness to the very canker that is devouring them within. We need be no pains to designate instances. Every business man's experience will point out to him enterprises which, for years past, have been paying regular dividends of six, eight and twelve per cent per annum, when it is mathematically demonstrable that no such profits can have been earned; when a close analysis of the receipts and expenditures (not the public accounts, but the private ones, in the private books, seen only by the directors) would in reality show an annual loss far greater in amount than the alleged annual gain."

☞ Attention is directed to the advertisement in another column, of the "Building Society's Sale of Lands, to take place on Wednesday, 3rd December next, at the office of the Secretary of the Society.

ONE-TENTH OF A SECOND FROM DEATH —It will be remembered that the Rev. Mr. Sellwood, of the Episcopal Church, missionary to Oregon, was in the Panama massacre and reported among the dead. In a letter just received from him he says that he received four wounds, and is disfigured for life. His narrow escape from death is thus described: After I had recovered, and previous to leaving the hospital, one of my medical attendants said to me: "I took upon your escape as a miracle; the ball passed so near the heart, that it must have passed at the instant of its contraction, for had it passed at its expansion, you must have been killed. Just the one-tenth of a second made all the difference in your case betwixt life and death."

The labors of colonial Governor are recorded in the statistical summary of the Registrar General of New South Wales for the year ending 18th of March last. During that period the Governor General has written 582 despatches to the Secretary of State, 407 messages or speeches of the Legislative Council, and 13,600 letters, notes or memoranda or, a host of topics, public or private, delivered 40 addresses on various subjects—religious, charitable, scientific, or literary and held 1,766 interviews with as many different people.

COMMUTATION OF ANN SAUNDERSON'S SENTENCE.—We have much pleasure in giving able to inform our readers that His Excellency the Governor General, in Council, in the exercise of the prerogative of extending mercy to the condemned, which is vested exclusively in the Executive, has been graciously pleased to grant a favorable reply to the petition sent from the inhabitants of this town and County, praying the commutation of the sentence of death passed at the late Assizes upon Ann Saunderson, alias McDowall. The sentence has been commuted to seven years' imprisonment in the Provincial Penitentiary. This favorable answer has given very general satisfaction, more particularly to those who have had an opportunity of observing the young woman's very exemplary behavior since her trial. She has evinced the most deep contrition and sorrow for the crime she was the means of committing, and an honest simplicity and guilelessness of character, and at the same time the most perfect consistency, in every relation she has given of the unfortunate circumstance which formed the ground of her conviction, which evidently indicate that she was the victim of the diabolical advice and prompting of the man whom she had taken as her husband, and who ought to have been the protector, instead of the destroyer of her and her child.—Sarnia Observer.

THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY OF CANADA.—We understand that Mr. Richardson, one of the attaches to the Geological Survey of Canada, has recently returned from the Island of Anticosti, after three months examination of the Island. Mr. Richardson has brought with him one of the most striking collections of fossils that has ever been made. In addition to that he has ascertained by various examinations to a considerable depth in the Island, that a large portion of it holds a good deal more than its extent is capable of cultivation. There is no reason to suppose that the climate there is less favourable for the growth of cereals and plants than the shores of the St. Lawrence, in other parts of the province. The position of the Island is well known from Les Emboulements on the south side of the St. Lawrence beyond Riviere du Loup and as far as Temiscouta road, excellent farms exist, producing all that is required for comfortable existence. The large section of rock forming Anticosti is in the course of examination, and we understand that Professor Hall, of Albany, is here aiding in the investigation. Quite a large number of strangers present at the celebration visited the museum, among others His Excellency and Lady Head and Lady Eyre spent a considerable time in going carefully over the collection, and seemed much highly delighted with it.—Montreal Herald.

FATAL CONSEQUENCES OF A FALSE ALARM.—On Sunday, the 19th ult, about 10,000 or 12,000 people were assembled in the immense Music Hall at the Surry Gardens, London, listening to the ministrations of an extremely popular Dissenting minister, the Rev. Newman Hall, when three persons rose in the body of the hall, and simultaneously arms aloft called out in a loud voice, "Fire Fire!" "The building, the building!"—Instantaneously the panic stricken Audience rushed to the doors, and in the tremendous crush seven or eight persons were trampled to death, and others were severely and mutilated. At first it was supposed that the false alarm had been raised in wicked frolic or malignant jealousy at the extraordinary success of Mr. Spurgeon; but the enquiries which took place have elicited the fact that some youths had been seen exploding small quantities of gunpowder in one of the galleries, and it is now more charitably supposed that the flashes may have led to the apprehension which found such quick and fatal expression. Nevertheless, one of Mr. Spurgeon's deacons, addressing the congregation which assembled in the chapel on the following evening, insisted that the alarm arose from wicked and designing men, and affirmed that, if ever Satan was permitted to take human appearance and walk the earth, it was on Sunday night. Mr. Spurgeon was so affected at the fearful occurrence that it was at one time feared he would lose his reason. Several additional cases had come to the knowledge of the police, who state that there were not less than 200 persons more or less injured.

Episcopal Fund.

Yesterday afternoon, a meeting took place at St. Paul's School room, in this city to receive the report of the deputation appointed to collect subscriptions in aid of the above fund, Rev. Dr. Cronyn in the chair Amongst those present were the Rev. Messrs Evans, Caulfield, Boomer, Fequeir, O'Neil, Brough, Dewar, Usher and Rothwell, Hon. J. G. Goodhue, Messrs Lawson-on, Shade, Taylor, Gill, Buckley, Dr. Phillips, Capt. Cronyn, and others. The report of the deputation was so satisfactory, and the liberality of the contributors, such as to induce the meeting to adopt a resolution unanimously of applying to the proper authority for liberty to hold the elections. Considerable discussion took place upon the wording of some of the by laws after which the meeting terminated as it commenced, in prayer.—London Herald.

Awful Calamity.

The Town of Leia washed off the face of the Earth. The town of Leia, in the Punjaub, has been almost washed off the face of the earth by a most extraordinary deluge. We are indebted to the "Lahore Chronicle" for the following official particulars of the catastrophe: In consequence of the unprecedented fall of rain, and the great floods of the Indus, the town of Leia has been nearly destroyed, and much loss of life and property has occurred in the low lands between the Thul, and Main Cbannels in the Indus, from the latter of which the town lies at a distance of about nine miles. Unusual drought prevailed until the 15th of last month; the fall of rain was unexpected, and no precautions on the part of the people could have prevented the misfortune which has occurred. At midnight the waters overtopped the bund above the lock-gate, then made a breach through it, and submerged the whole place. The families of all residing within the civil station have resorted to the Thul, and are reported placed in safety. The low-lying portions have been submerged; cattle have been drowned and the inhabitants obliged to take shelter on machans, or trees, from which many dropped exhausted into the water, or perished on endeavoring to reach higher ground. The local authorities have made, and are making every effort in their power to extricate the people from danger. Floods of unusual magnitude occurred in 1851 and 1853, but none equal to the present one for many years.

Tremendous Explosion and Loss of Life.

(From the Times Correspondent.)

CARDIFF, Monday, Oct. 27.

It is my painful duty to report to you a fearful coal explosion, which took place at an early hour this morning, and which resulted in a serious loss of life and property. Such an explosion on shipboard has probably never been known in this port or elsewhere, and it is to be hoped than an accident attended with such fatal consequences will be the means of calling the attention of shipmasters to guard against it, as much as lies in their power, in future.

So far as I can learn in the present confused state of affairs, it appears that, about half-past five o'clock this morning, a most tremendous explosion was heard, followed immediately by a large bright flame ascending to the skies, as if an eruption of the earth had just taken place, or was going to the spot, it was found that the Norwegian barque, Frederick Retzdorff, of about 500 tons, Captain (and part owner) Dubell, of the port of Stettin, had been blown into atoms by an explosion of coal. The decks were literally rent in pieces, the beam timbers were blown out, the mizenmast was split up, the foremast broken, the rattines and other ropes carried away, and altogether the vessel presented such a mutilated appearance as is seldom witnessed. The heavy and massive coaltip, capable of throwing in six tons of coal at a time, was smashed to pieces—the large iron bolts and support being snapped like a piece of small wire. A pilot who was in Penarth Roads, and whose eyes were directed towards the dock at the time, describes the scene as one very much like a grand spectacle at a theatre at christmas time. He says the report was so loud that at the moment it occurred to him that an earthquake had taken place, and before he was able to count a dozen, a deep bloodred flame shot up into the air, illuminating the country for miles around. A number of shops in the Bute Road, a distance of nearly 300 yards from where the vessel was lying, had a number of windows broken. Dogs barked, as if instinctively aware that that something serious had happened. The cause of this fearful accident is stated to be as follows:—About twenty five o'clock this morning, one of the coal-trimmers who had been engaged in loading the vessel went alongside, and, having obtained a light from a lucifer-match, he proceeded into the hole with a candle in his hand, for the purpose, it is said, of procuring a shovel which he had left behind him after leaving off work on Saturday night, and immediately afterwards the explosion took place. From what we can learn, the main hold was full of coal, and the hatches were battened.

The crew of the vessel, including the Captain and first and second mates, consisted of fourteen in all. The striking of the match was distinctly heard by some of these and directly afterwards they were thrown from their berths either on to the deck or ashore. We regret to say that three or four of themare dead, and all the rest, except the captain and the two mates, are in the Cardiff Infirmary, suffering more or less from broken limbs and other injuries.

Arrival of the Persia.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.

The steamship Persia from Liverpool Nov. 15th arrived at 1 o'clock to-day with a week's later news than the Niagara.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 14.

Since Friday last the grain trade has been dull at London market.

The sales of wheat were only to the most limited extent, Red at former prices; white at a decline of 2d per bushel. Flour scarcely enquired for, but no sales. Indian Corn in some speculative enquiry and realised an advance of 6 a 9; prices per quarter on mixed and yellow, business was inactive for wheat, prices very irregular, and showed a considerable anxiety to realize. Prime red wheat from scarcity, not more than 2d per bushel lower, but white could be had at a decline of four pence per bushel.

Flour was unsaleable, and quotations, which are nominal, must be reduced 6d a 1s per bushel. Indian Corn — quite limited demand at Tuesday's prices. We quote red Wheat at 8s a 9; white 9s 3d a 9 10; per 70 pounds. Flour—extra Ohio 35s a 36 6d. Western Canal 30s a 33s. Indian Corn—mixed 33s 0d yellow 34s; white 34s a 35s. Pork large arrival of American transhipped from London, and depressed the market to 65s a 67s 6d per bbl, for fair qualities.

The agricultural markets had all given way in price without any immediate symptoms of recovery.

Scotland and the East of England had procured liberal imports from the north of Russia but that source would soon be cut off by the ice in the Baltic.

The result of the presidential election expected by the Arabia was anxiously looked for.

The position of the bank of France is not improving. The bullion is about 282,000 pounds less than it was announced on the 9th of October.

There is also reason to believe it fell off at last to the further amount of 120,000 pounds.

The Bank of France has been compelled to increase its discounts, but on the other hand it has consistently followed the policy of calling in at loans on security. Gigantic frauds had been committed in the Great Northern Railway. Mr. Redpath being one of the guilty party. His defalcations amount to 15,000 pounds sterling.

He has fled—He was the principal register of stock. Though Mr. Redpath had to issue a 100 pounds stock it appears that he added a cypher to the amount making it 100 pounds in the company's books. This operation was not confined to 100, but extended to stock of 2-3 and 500 pounds so that one of every hundred pounds stocks transfered he gained 100 pounds.

Parliament is prorogued until the 16th of Sept. The London Ministerial Journals publishes in conspicuous types the announcement that the Alliance between France and England is as close and cordial as ever.

Special Notices.

To Nervous Sufferers.

The invigorating action of Sir Astley Cooper's Pills on the constitution is really marvellous, and a single trial will convince the most sceptical of their power to restore the most feeble and debilitated to full health and strength, and no language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change, produced by making use of this wonderful medicine in the diseased, debilitated and shattered nervous system; the relaxed and debilitated body is at once relieved, restored, enlivened and built up; the mental and physical symptoms of disease vanish under their influence, the stooping trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man; he stands erect, he moves with a firm step, his mind which was previously sunk in gloom, becomes bright, buoyant, active, and he goes forth refreshed regenerated, and conscious of new vigor to his accustomed occupations; and the effect is not temporary, on the contrary the relief is permanent, for the cordial properties of the medicine reach the constitution itself, and restores it to its first condition. In all diseases of the stomach and digestive organs they never fail. They also remove depression, excitement, restlessness, want of sleep, dislike to society, incapacity for business, loss of memory, confusion, giddiness, blood in the head, melancholy mental debility; they increase and restore the appetite, purify the blood, strengthen the tone of the stomach, and give such energy and vigor to the constitution as must be felt to be believed.

To elderly persons, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are invaluable; strengthening the system against the attacks of age; they cause a continued cheerfulness and prolong life to the latest possible period.

BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.—None are genuine without the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail and Co., Solo Proprietors, London and New York, on each box and on the directions. The Genuine Pills have also a correct likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box. Without these marks of authenticity, they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunn-paugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Gait; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

THE NEW ILLUSTRATED

Hydropathic Encyclopedia,

A COMPLETE SYSTEM OF

HYDROPATHY & HYGIENE,

IN ONE LARGE VOLUME.

EMBRACING Outlines of Anatomy, Illustrated; Physiology of the Human Body; Hygienic Agencies and the Preservation of Health; Dietics and Hydropathic Cookery; Theory and Practice of Water Treatment; Special Pathology and Hydro-Therapeutics, including the Nature, Causes, Symptoms and Treatment of all known diseases; Application to Surgical Diseases; Application of Hydropathy to Midwifery and the Nursery; with three hundred engravings and nearly One Thousand Pages, including a Glossary, Table of Contents, and a complete Index. By R. T. TRALL, M. D.

Published by FOWLER and WELLS, New York.

In the plan of the work, the wants and necessities of the People have been steadily in view. While almost every topic of interest in the department of Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Hygiene, Therapeutics is breifly presented, those of practical utility are always put prominently forward. The prevailing errors, conceits, and whims of the day and age are exposed and refuted; the theories and hypothesis upon which the popular drug practice is predicated to controverted, and the why and wherefore of their fallacy clearly demonstrated. The following is a brief analysis of its contents:

History of Medicine; History of Bathing; History of Medicated Baths.

Anatomy illustrated by One Hundred and Twenty appropriate engravings.

Physiology, illustrated, comprising the Rationale of Muscular Action; the Nervous Influence; Philosophy of Mind; Mesmoric Phenomena the Special Senses; Functions of Digestion, Circulation, Respiration, Absorption, Nutrition, Secretion, Excretion' Calorification, Temperaments, the Races of Men, and Theory of Population.

Hygiene embracing all the relations of Air, Light, Drink, Food, Temperature, Exercise, Sleep, Clothing, Bathing, and the Passions, to the growth and development of Body and Mind, the Preservation of Health and the attainment of Longevity

Dietetics, comprising the Bible, Anatomical, Physiological, Chemical and Experimental Evidence concerning the natural Dietetic Character of Man.

Hydropathic Cookery, with Special Directions for the Preparation of Food

Dietaries, containing the Therapeutic Distinctions of Diet for Invalids.

Philosophy of Water-Cure, with illustrated explanations of all the water-cure appliances, a Philosophical Exposition of the modus operandi of water-treatment, and the true rationale of drug-treatment.

The Nature Symptoms and Treatment of all known Diseases are examined; the ill success of drug practice exposed, and the proper Medication recommended and specified.

The Treatment of surgical Diseases illustrated and the directions for the minor operations given.

The Management of Lying-in-Women, and the treatment of children, &c.

The work is intended to be plain, intelligible and sufficient guide for domestic practice, or home treatment, in all ordinary diseases, embracing the whole range of subjects connected with the philosophy of life, the preservation of health, and the treatment of diseases.

This great work may be had in one large volume, bound in library style. Price prepaid by mail to any Post Office in United States or Canada, only THREE DOLLARS.

All letters and orders should be directed as follows:—

Coughs in Horses.

In all disorders accompanied by a cough the true cause should be ascertained. Sometimes the cough is only a consequence of a choked or clogged lung, or in the case in heaves, &c. At other times it is symptomatic of recent inflammation in the throat or lungs. Sometimes it is brought on by hoarseness, which is an inflammation of the mucous membrance of of the head and glands about the throat. We have found salt, given freely together with an occasional dose of saltpetre, to be an excellent remedy in cases where a horse has had the horse ail and the cough holds on after the original disease seems to have gone. For a dry, husky cough not attended with the heaves, green or hunting food, such as roots or bushes of scalded bran, in which is put the pulverised root of Elecampogne and Lovage, has been found beneficial. If there should be found indications of heaves, put a spoonful of ginger once per day in his provender and allow him to drink freely of lime water.—Horses that are kept on musty hay will very soon begin to cough. The best remedy for musty hay cough, is to change the diet to good sweet clover.—Maine Farmer.

Wind-Galls on Horses.

Messrs Editors:—I noticed an inquiry in the August No. of the Cultivator, for information on the subject of wind-galls on horses. With your consent I will give what information I am able.

Wind-galls are situated in the neighborhood of the fetlock, occasioning more or less enlargement, thicker found on the hind leg than the fore one. When they first appear, they sometimes occasion lameness but generally, except when they attain a great size, they do not interfere with the action of the horse. They were in old times supposed to contain wind, hence their name.—Opening a wind-gall occasions inflammation, and in many cases will injure the horse, and in no case can this remedy be considered safe. A blister will sometimes cause the wind gall to disappear, but it will return as soon as the horse is put to hard work. The iodine and mercurial ointments—three parts of the former to two of the latter—have afforded relief in some hard cases.

Iodine Ointment.—Two parts of the iodine of potassium, with four of the sulphate of copper.

Value of Sheep to the Farmer.

It is of more importance to the farmer than is generally supposed, that a certain proportion of his farm stock should consist of sheep. Speaking on this point, R. S. Fay of Lynn, recently remarked at an Agricultural meeting in Boston (as reported in the N. E. Farmer), "Sheep are gleaners after other stock, and will help keep the cattle pastures in good condition by being turned into them occasionally, to eat the coarser plants which have been left. They will enrich by their droppings, and are excellent fertilizing as that of sheep, and it does not so readily waste by exposure as that of other animals. Sheep may be made exceedingly useful in helping to prepare land for a crop. A German agriculturalist has calculated that the droppings of one sheep, one sand sheep during a single night would manure an acre sufficiently. By that rule a farmer may determine how long to keep any given number of sheep on a particular piece of land. Mr. Fay said he was accustomed to fold his sheep upon land which he designed for corn and other crops, and in so doing he shut them upon half an acre at a time, keeping them there by a wire fence, which was easily moved from place to place. In this way his land was very well manured without the labor of shovelling and carting. These facts are worth reading by the farmer. We believe any farm will bear a certain number of sheep, in proportion to the other stock, not only without loss to the amount of grazing which it will yield to the cattle and horses, but to the increase of the same. Mr. Fay, by his management, makes the lambs and manure pay for keeping the sheep, and the wool is clear profit.

Ground Oats.

Ground oats furnish more nutriment, and keep the bowels in better condition, than when served out whole. By grinding the oats we separate them into a myriad of particles, and present them to the gastric solvents in a form calculated to secure their speedy digestion—for any thing in a condition favorable to speedy insalivation.

Ground oats are more nutritious than whole, for the same reason that flour is more so than unground wheat.

Ground oats contain more of the nitrogenous, or flesh-making portion than any other kind of horse food; at the same time they furnish a mixture of coarse and fine food — the husk of oats constitute the first, and meal the latter. The coarse material serves to keep the bowels in a soluble condition —irritate and excite the mucous coat, and thus obviate the necessity for drinking water.—This kind of food is decidedly the healthiest for working horses. They require, however, a certain quantity of sweet hay, in view of distending the stomach to a healthy capacity.

How much should a Cow Eat?—Cows to give milk, require more food than most farmers imagine. J. W. Johnstone, writing from Munich to the Country Gentleman, gives an interesting report of some experiments which have been made in Bavaria, from which the following is an extract:—"Our trials have confirmed the view that cows, to give the greatest possible quantity of milk, must daily receive and consume one-thirtieth of their live weight in hay, or an equivalent therefore. If more food be given it goes to the formation of flesh and fat, but not to following a corresponding increase in the yield of milk; but if, on the contrary, less food be furnished, the amount and value of the milk will be greatly diminished."

The Columbia, (Pa.) Spy acknowledges the receipt of a sample of what it considers very superior molasses, manufactured by a gentleman near that place from the Chinese corn stalk.

The Widow who was buried in grief, is now alive and doing well. It was a case of premature interment.

THE HASTINGS ROAD,

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Ferrol," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction through the Township of Bromley and part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Dutt's Line," leading to the Lake Muskake, or Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 56 miles from the River Ottawa; forming, by this "Dutt's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskake, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country under Dr. French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL to the Village of Ottawa, the place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township or Grattan, in which Mount St. Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the Southern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Nadawagion, a distance of 25 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. These townships are known respectively as Dungannon, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, and thence due North to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

astings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and extending a distance of 36 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The distance between these places is in good order.

The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road passes through a large section of fine land for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty. The land is of the best description for production, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat to the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—build a house (at least 16 by 20 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed; after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of Free Deed. Should the Settler lose or forfeit his location ticket or land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as any settler may put up for himself in five minutes, neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the remainder is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, are, in sections of Canada West, capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated district of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, to be found a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land —some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care and covered from wet—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £6 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavy timbered Lands, varying the price of the settlers at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The capital required for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to his own habits and size of family, will soon be comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his provisions, during the season devote to the cultivation of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labour.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it is often of great service in the spring, as a manure, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to bring in supplies of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—forming a rich investment which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased TEN FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the same period, and is the calculation of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Government of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, by way of Nipissing and the Ottawa River —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain population.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of eight millions of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session passed an Act to Incorporate for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken and will be completed in the present year —when the important bearing to accrue by the means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the shores of the Western Waters to the St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These projected works are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, and the public, is now being directed to that fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,
AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing twenty-three large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; and the number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Cultivating Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and general ability, renders it one of the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged in the Illustrated Horticulturist for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

Address,

C. REAGLES, Publisher,
"Illustrated Horticulturist"

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the Province, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and intend to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM EVANS, Esquire, M.A., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and who has been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimit ed - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.
THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar institution in the UNITED STATES.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Secondary and Finished Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.
THE METHOD OF TEACHING,
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, reversing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing laws of Trade. In order, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.
THE INITIATORY COURSE,
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and Philosophy of Accounts, rather than mere routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of qualifying himself and arriving at results and so pushes on in his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.
THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.
THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces long the practical, and seldom various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, and thus gratuitously preparatory to entering some special House
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.
PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West. Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are newly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having had extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

Beauty Everywhere.

There is beauty in the skies,
When noonday suns are bright,
It glances with ten thousand eyes
Thro' shadows of the night;
When morn with rosy bloom is seen
To wake—there's beauty there—
And evening's garlands deck its precinct,
We, too, of beauty share.

Old ocean's swelling tide,
The placid lake and still,
The rivers rolling in their pride,
The ever sparkling rill;
The mountain top, the verdant plain,
The desert rude and bare,
Attest by every varied scene,
That beauty dwelleth there

The opening line of joyous spring,
Its chords hymns of praise,
The velvet bloom on summer's wing,
Its bright and cloudy days;
The autumn clad in russet shroud
With treasures rich and rare,
Old hoary winter shouts aloud,
There's beauty there

There's beauty in the lot and hall,
Where sweet contentment dwells.
Should science more or knowledge call,
The voice of beauty swells;
With childhood's eden looks 'tis blent
With manhood's proud career;
While age mature in virtue spent,
Both heavenly beauty share.

The Neighbors.

BY JOHN THORNBERRY.

MRS. BUTTS had just dropped in a few minutes to see how Mrs. Tubbs did. It was in the morning, and Mrs. Tubbs was still engaged about her work. So Mrs. Butts sat down just where she could find a place, and proceeded to make herself altogether at home.

"You're despite busy, this mornin'," said she to her neighbor.

"O, no more'n common, 's I know of," answered Mrs. Tubbs. "But we can't exactly get a livin' and be idle too, you know."

"I don't calculate to be over and above idle, myself," said Mrs. Butts. "I generally carry my knittin'-work, when I go a visitin'. I guarantee to set as good an example as most folks. But I wanted to tell you about what my husband said."

Mrs. Tubbs looked up, looked down, and went on with her work again.

"What did he say say?" said she.

"Well, you remember that last quarter of veal he had o' Mr. Tubbs, to pay for the quarter Mr. Tubbs had o' him?"

"Yes, I guess I do seem to remember something about that. Why?"

"O, nothing. Only Mr. Butts said about that veal, that he guessed 'twas pretty near ready to die before it did! That was all."

Mrs. Tubbs stood erect.

"Did he mean to say anything against my husband's honesty, I'd like to know? Because if he did—"

"I don't know, I'm sure. I can't protend to tell what he meant. I shouldn't think he did, though. Yet I can't say. At any rate, that was what he said."

"And that's enough, I should think!—What more could he say? And a neighbors too! So mean to my husband of selling meat that died! It's a shame and an insult! I'll never put up with it in the world!"

Hot and out of breath in consequence of the protracted discussion that ensued, Mrs. Butts took herself off home, to put another stick under the pot and set it boiling hard er.

Of course, when her husband came in to dinner, the conversation with Mrs. Tubbs was detailed with wonderful precision, and more too. Mr. Butts got a good story out of it. He declared he never would stand it, being a neighbor so: and thought it was a burning shame that people allowed themselves to slander their neighbor in this sort of way.

"As say rate, I kn w one thing!" said he, in a threatening way.

"What's that?" asked his wife.

"Tubbs never'll come off so well again, if his cattle get into my mowin'! I'll drive them straight to pound!"

"Do they ever get into your mowin'?" inquired his wife.

"Well, I shouldn't wonder if I'd turned them critters out of my piece into his'n, as many as a dozon or twenty times this summer! I'll not do it any more."

"That's what I would'n't, I'm sure, Mr. Butts. I wonder you never drove 'em to pound before."

"Because I never wanted to make any difference with a neighbor," said he. "But you don't catch me hangin' back any longer, I tell you!"

Pretty soon afterwards, therefore, the pound-keeper stopped Mr. Tubbs on his way home.

"I've got three head of your cattle shet up in the pound," said he.

"Three head of my cattle!" exclaimed the astonished Tubbs. "Who drove them over?"

The pound-keeper laughed, and took advantage of the laugh to hesitate. The answer was fairly corkscrewed out of him:

"Wal, I s'pose Mr. Butts drove 'em."

And he laughed again.

Tubbs could hardly keep in his boots, he was so moved with indignation.

"Butts drive my cattle to pound!" said he, lowering his brows and setting his teeth.—"I'll teach him a lesson yet! Mebbe some of his own critters 'll get out one of these days. Then we'll see how the account stands!"

He paid the usual pound tax with a great deal more of such grumbling as this, and drove off his three head of cattle. The old pound keeper couldn't help laughing, as he went away, and wondered in truth what would come of it.

"It's a thing I never knew Butts to do the like of before," muttered he, trudging along homewards. "What in the name of Satan has got into him lately? He hardly spoke to me, the last time he met me. Don't appear as he used to. But I'll fetch him yet. I never'll stand this, not the longest day I live! never!"

Only ten days or two weeks after that, Mr. Tubbs came into the house in a great glee.

"See here, wife," said he, chuckling to himself, "I've got old Butts's cattle shut up in my yard, and just as quick as I can eat my dinner, I'm goin' to drive them off to pound. I can't very well spare the time, but I'm going to do it, for all that. He took my critters to pound, and to pound shall his go! There's no two ways about ways about that. What's good for me, is good enough for him! See if there aint a squirmin' this time!"

And before night, a couple of Mr. Butts's most staid and maronly old cows were ruminating by themselves on the changes and changes of this mortal life, within the ancient enclosure called the "pound." Just so long as they remined, the keeper would be at liberty to make use of the fruits of their udders. There they stood and looked at each other, and chawed their cuds, as innocent as children of the intentions of the one who caused their imprisonment.

When night came on, two of Mr. Butts's best cows were not to be found. They didn't come home from the pasture. He hunted and hunted everywhere—but no cows. He looked over the walls, in the meadow, and in every other place where a cow might stow herself away—but nothing like two cows yet.

At last, after he had finally given them up for the night, a little boy came running down the road, who hurried up to him and told him where his stray cattle were.

"And Mr. Mulkey says," added the boy, "that if you don't come after 'em pretty quick, he'll milk 'em himself!"

In less than fifteen minutes, Mr. Butts made a like demand upon the pound-keeper for his cows. And when he had got them safely out, he turned and demanded to know who drove them there in the first place.

Mulkey laughed as before, and hesitated; and then he told Mr. Butts that his neighbor Tubbs was the author of the mischief.

"Tubbs drive my cows to pound!" said he to himself. "Then, by jinge, he shall pay back for it, just as soon as I can make pay-day come round!"

And he started off home with his pair of cows, convinced that a game that two could play at, was not exactly the game for his money.

From this date, intercourse between the families was suspended. There was a broad lake between them, which neither could pass over. At meeting on Sundays, or on any day through the week, it was all the same. Neither party seemed to be conscious that the other still remained in existence—with a single exception. For all this time Mr. Butts's son Sam had been paying his particular attentions to Mr. Tubbs's daughter Susan. Up to this point, Sam and Susan had been making out very well. But close up on this outbreak followed something of an estrangement between themselves.

Says Susan, one evening, to Sam:

"I don't exactly like the way your folks talk about oars—I don't. What is the meaning of it, I want to know?"

"I guess they don't say worse things than what your folks say about us," rejoined Sam with the Butts blood flowing swift in his veins.

"Umph!" retorted Susan. "What did your father drive our cattle to pound for?"

"And what did your father drive our cattle to pound for, too? It's a pretty piece of business, I think!"

Beginning there, the two lovers got a good start. Then they went on at a rate that astonis! ed even themselves. They twitted.—Then they used satire. Then they threw mud at one another's names. Then they had an out-and-out spat about it. An l at last, the quarrel was far in to be got out of at all.

Sam said he was as good as anybody, and so were his folks. Susan declared that hed always thought he was a little better, but he'd find now that he was mistaken. Sam thought there was no use in twatting, for two could perform that kind of work. Susan was not to be frightened, she would have him to know, and so she went ahead.

He asked her about that veal that died! She flew like a cat with her back up. She never knew anything about any veal. At any rate, she go-sed her father could; and thereupon advised him to go home and eat some off his own family bone.

This was too much. Sam got as mad as he could be, and then left. He wasn't seen in Tubbs's parlor again for a long while—Susan lived on "shut," and people thought she grew pitton it. And so that match was broken off!

Things continued in this situation for a long time, till finally, as good or ill luck would have it, Mr. Butts happened to be riding homeward one afternoon in the stage-coach, all alone and unmolested, when who should get in, at a little town some dozen miles from home, but Mrs. Tubbs! This accident threw things into confusion straightway.

Mr. Butts could not well avoid speaking to Mrs. Tubbs; neither could Mrs. Tubbs refuse, under any color of decency, to accost Mr. Butts. There they were, mental enemies to each other, boxed and hooked for a good twelve-mile together. Unless the road was unusually smooth, it would not be a strange matter to find that the bounced and bumped against one another. And in some way like that, perhaps, they might manage to pound off the sharp angles that now kept them at such a distance.

Mr. Butts spoke of the weather. It was rainy, and the coach had to be shut pretty closely. Mrs. Tubbs thought as her companion did too, that it was rainy. Mr. Butts suggested that it might rain in upon her. Mrs. Tubbs thought it wouldn't, and changed her seat over to that of Mr. Butts. This was an admirable beginning surely!

Well, from one thing to another they went on—not because they had any hope or wish of reconciliation, but because they couldn't help talking—till at last Mr. Butts came out with a big, plump and round as ever a man did in his life, and asked Mrs. Tubbs what was the occasion of all the trouble between the families!

Put to in this way for a categorical answer, Mrs. Tubbs could not do less than hesitate. And when she did reply, it was by no means satisfactory, shuffling, evasive sort of an answer that could be offered by any one. Perceiving the absolute weakness of the enemy, Mr. Butts began to think that his own cause might be just about as strong. As a consequence, he hastened first to make explanations, then concessions, then apologies. That was enough. In such a case, as soon as one begins to withdraw his pretensions, the other hastens to be before him in the good work, if possible.

"Then it's all about nothing, after after all," said Mr. Butts.

"Nothing in the living world," said Mrs. Tubbs.

"And I'm dreadfully mortified to think I've been caught in such a scrape," said he.

"And I've mad to think I've been such a fool," said she.

"Then we'll make it all up again!"

"I'd be glad enough to."

"From beginning to end?"

"Yes, and forever and ever."

A silence of a few minutes.

"But then," asked Mrs. Tubbs, "I would like to know one thing of you first!"

"Well, Mrs. Tubbs—anything in the world."

"Did you say that my husband sent you a quarter of dead veal to pay for yours?—Because that was what your wife told me and the rest who began it. I never'd believe that Mr. Tubbs would do such a thing in this world. He aint small enough."

"H-h, ha, ha!" laughed out Mr Butts. "And so it all sprung out of that quarter of veal, ha! Well, if that don't beat the Dutch taking Holland! Did I say that your husband sent me back dead veal?—Why, yes, it's most likely I said so, for I didn't calculate he was going to send me a quarter alive! And I got up the jobs just to see what my wife would say!"

There it was. It all grew out of his innocent disposition to see what his wife would have to say; Jefferson was elected President by means of a quarrel over a pig, down in Rhode Island; and here was a quarrel over a quarter of veal that might, but for this accidental stage-ride, have led to the dismemberment of the church, and possibly the demolition of the town itself.

Sam and Susan rushed back into one another's arms, and in three months were the happiest groom and bride to be seen on the hither side of sundown. The very first family meal to which they sat down together was made up of vegetable and such dishes with a piece of stuffed baked veal in the centre. Sam declares he will have a coat of arms, and that a leg of veal shall be found in the same—not couchant, nor rampant, but pendant.

Evaporation of the Sea.

The most important quality possessed by the water of the sea, is its capacity of evaporation, or of changing its form by the influence of heat, and becoming converted into an invisible elastic vapor, which mixes with the atmosphere, and being transported by the winds into distant regions, fall again in the form of rain; then collects again into channels, giving rise to the mountain torrent and the majestic river, and thus returns to the ocean it was drawn from, have completed a circuit, during every part of which it had enriched and benefitted the earth. But the accomplishment of this circuit depends upon some curious and remarkable peculiarities attending the process of evaporation. We discover, on a very superficial observation, the obvious fact, the quantity of water which can be held suspended in the air depends upon the heat, and increases with it; but the principle so far as developed, is not sufficient to account for the phenomena which are exhibited in nature: since, the only cause of the fall of rain is the cooling of the air, which would not retain its moisture as the temperature diminished, how could we account for the frequent storms which are as continually occuring at the very time that the heat of the weather is increasing? or how, indeed, could we ever find rain falling except during night, or on the approach of winter, while the warmth of the earth was decreasing? We must look in fact, and observe more accurately, in order to obtain an explanation, and at lenght we reach it, for we find that the quantity of vapor formed from the water not only increases the heat, but increases in a greater degree than it; that is, that for every addition to the temperature, a greater and greater addition is made to the proportion of watery vapor held suspended; and it follows, as a necessary consequence, that two masses of air, saturated with moisture, and differing in temperature, can never unite without precipitating rain; for the heat of the combined mass will be a mean between that of the two portions, and this will not suffice to retain the water which they held dissolved, shd the surplus will fall to the earth.

Miscellany.

A MILITARY FAMILY.—General O'Donnell, of the United States army, arrived in Limerick this week from America, on a visit to his cousin, Major-General Sir Charles O'Donnell, K. H. It is 38 years since the above veteran was on a visit to his near relative, the late Colonel Henry A. O'Donnell, C. B., in this city. Of this ancient and distinguished Celtic family there happen to be now four general officers in the service of America, Great Britain, Spain, and Austria. —Limerick Chronicle.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert has consented to become patron of the society established at Aberdeen, for the relief of the destitute children of deceased clergymen of the Church of Scotland, and has given £100 to the funds.

RETURNING TO LIFE; AN AWKWARD POSITION.—It is reported that an officer who was supposed to have been killed in the Cabul campaign more than 13 years ago, whose place has long been filled up in the Army List, whose wife has contracted a second marriage, and given birth to a second family, has suddenly turned up. He has been a prisoner during this long period in Kokan. His name is no secret, and his brother has in the meantime become a general officer.—Bombay Telegraph.

We are glad to hear that our townsman Sir Alexander Bannerman has been appointed to the governorship of Newfoundland.—Aberdeen Herald.

WHEELBARROW BET.—Boston archives of the 7th inform us that Major Benjamin Perley Poore, the late Fillmore candidate for Congress in the Sixth District arrived in the city that afternoon with his wheelbarrow and barrel of apples, which he had wheeled all the way from Newburyport, a distance of thirty six miles, in two and a half hours. The job was in fulfilment of a bet with Colonel Barbank, the Fremont State Senator elect, that Filmore would get more votes in Massachusetts than Fremont. The Major, wheeling his apples, was escorted up State Street, about two o'clock, by the Fillmore Club of Boston and Charleston, a military company and a mounted cavalcade of citizens. The novelty of the performance collected many thousands of the people, and the Major was greeted with tremendous and tumultuous applause on all sides. He delivered the apples to Colonel Burbank on the steps of the Fremont House, where both gentleman delivered congratulatory speeches, mounted on the barrel. Ten thousand people were present.

THE CANADIAN LINE OF OCEAN STEAMERS.—The Canadian which sails from Quebec on Saturday was the last steamer to the St Lawrence during this season. The next steamer of this line leaves Liverpool on the 26th instant for Portland. A monthly steamer only will be dispatched to that port during the winter, unless sufficient addition of freight should offer, to induce the owners to send out an extra vessel or two, which is not unlikely. The City of Washington brings news of the arrival of the Anglo-Saxon, in her eleventh day out. No tidings having reached us of the arrival of the Collins steamer, which sailed the same day, she has probably beaten her again.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.—When the judge of the election were counting out the ballots of the Hagerstown box they discovered a love letter among them, which some deceitful swain had deposited instead of his ticket. As there was no such candidate before the people as the one whose name was attached to the letter, the vote was of course lost.

The Montreal Transcript learns that the sentence of death pronounced upon Maroney for cutting his wife's throat, and Gallagher, the soldier, for attempting to poison a servant girl with croton oil, have been commuted to 5 years imprisonment each.—Marconey's wife, who has been in constant communication with her husband since his trial, visiting him daily, it is said, principal supplicant for the commutation of his sentence.

A WHOPPER.—One day last week, a boy by the name of Murray went to a small lake in the neighborhood of Glenmorris to shoot wild ducks, and when near the edge of the water took aim at a flock of six ducks that happened to be within shot. His gun not being in good order, did not go off, and the ducks taking wing, he lowered the gun to cock it a second time, but before doing so it went off of its own accord, and killed the whole six ducks! Our readers may be perfectly satisfied of the truth of this statement.—Galt Reporter.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF THE ALLIANCE BETWEEN ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

From the London Post (Ministerial)

It is of the highest importance, at a moment like the present, to dispel the exaggerations of rumor, and to record the truth simply. We therefore emphatically state that we have reason to believe that never at any time was the alliance between England and France more solid and faithful than it is now.

It is true that of late, though no dispute ever occurred, different views and different positions, apparently of trifling importance, have been assumed by the two governments. This was, perhaps, the result of accident,—Certainly it was not attributable to any real divergence of sentiment or opinion between the Emperor Napoleon and her Majesty's government.

We believe that there is now the certainty that the two governments will act together as in the past; and that together they will insist on the fulfilment of the treaty for which both England and France bled.

There is no doubt that the people of England and France are animated by the strongest feelings of good will towards each other, no less than by a conviction of mutual interests and common aims. There never in this world was an alliance in which the parties to it had such strong motives for abiding themselves firmly together. Free from selfish ambition—desirous of securing the equilibrium and the peace of Europe—anxious to promote social and commercial progress and the cause of good government—England and France, their policy concluding, shall, if the light of prophecy be not wholly their union, dominate for the prosperity and happiness of themselves and their neighbours than has ever yet been achieved by any political combination.

The nations and the monarchs are free in whom it would be, indeed, a difficult enterprise to displace—now which has defied, why which will fail again if attempted. The public opinion of this country has never for one moment doubted the sincerity of the Emperor Napoleon, and cordially ratifies the high opinion which the sovereign has so much reason to entertain of his strict honour and unswerving truth.

(From the London Globe.)

The alliance between the Emperor Napoleon and Her Majesty Queen Victoria, is as close and cordial as ever it has been at any four since it was first established. Moreover the alliance has been unbroken, and has at no time been interrupted or even impaired. We have persevered in that statement throughout. We did so when all our contemporaries were against it; and when even the course of events appeared to cast a doubt upon our assurance. The truth of our assertion is confirmed by the general knowledge.

Prosperous State of Trade.

Another month's return of the national commerce serves but to disclose another month of buoyant activity and vigorous prosperity. The exports of British produce in the month of September last amounted in value to £9,216,000*l.* against £7,072,000*l.* for the same month of 1855, and £7,261,000*l.* for that of 1854. The increase on the last-named year is therefore about a million sterling, and that on 1855, 1,144,000*l* in round numbers. During the first nine months of the present year the value of our exports was £64,968,000*l.* being more than fifteen millions and a half in excess of the corresponding period of 1855, and more than eight millions over that of 1854.

These results we find chronicled in the trade and navigation returns which have just reached us, and the general tenor of which is of an equally satisfactory character. Turning to the list of articles of foreign food for home consumption, and comparing the month of September, 1855, we find a considerable increase in those commodities whose consumption may be supposed to indicate the extent of material domestic enjoyment. Spirits, by reason of duties, the increase on the people specified was as follows:—Cocoa, 263,000 to 309,000lbs; coffee, 2,663,000 to 2,836,000lbs; foreign spirits of all kinds, 355,000 proof gallons; sugar; superfined, 574,000 to 667,000 cwts; tea, 4,018,000 to 5,221,000lbs; tobacco of all kinds, 2,484,000*l.* to 2,737,000*l.*; wine, 524,000 to 642,000 gallons.

In the returns more immediately relating to navigation we find also a substantial increase under each head. The tonnage of foreign vessels that entered inwards in September, 1855, and of those cleared outwards, is 1,035,000 tons, against 825,000 respectively. The coasting trade shows continued buoyancy, and looking through the returns, we do not see a single feature that affords ground for any feeling but that of gratification.—English Paper.

Paris Winter Fashions.

The Winter Fashions have at length appeared. We have observed mantelettes, or cloaks, for the season, and several new materials for ladies' dresses. These splendid articles have received the fantastic appellation of mantelettes, no doubt as a compliment to the opulent ladies of Russia, who have given very extensive orders at the different warehouses in Paris. We were shown the other day, at Delisle's a sortie de bal, named Oursikoff, composed of a kind of sealskin, long shaggy silk, resembling fur, around the shoulders of which are the heads all in light colours. Another, called Muscovite, is of white plush spotted with red; and has a deep border, red spotted with white. Other costumes are entitled, Duchess de Bavière, Princess Bonaparte, Finlandais—in short, a great variety in name, but very little in the costume itself, except in the cape, the colour, or fringe with which it is trimmed.

Another dress, effile groupge de groseille, is remarkable for the strangeness of its taste. The mantelettes are worn rather long, with very wide sleeves. We have observed the following names:—Cresus—a very badly-chosen denomination for la Mode, as persons of refined taste seek not so much the richness of the material as the elegance of the fashion. This rich mantelette is of velvet, with a deep trimming of Chantilly lace, which falls round and covers almost the skirt of the dress. It is also richly embroidered in silk and jet beads. La Reine d'Oude is nearly same, but rather fuller; La Princesse Olga is trimmed with rows of lace of different sizes.

The winter mantelettes will be of very thick woollen material, striped or checkered black and white, bound with fancy galloon, and trimmed with fringe, or bound with a plain piece of velvet in bright colours—for instance, scarlet or red. This mantelette is closed over the chest with one or several rows of double silver clasps. The mantelette bears different denominations—as Breton, Tyrolien, or Norman.

Bareges are also in great demand; these fit to the shape fastened straight in front down to the waist, and then left open. The Basques are very long, and over the skirt of the dress. The Basquine Montespan is much admired; it is of black velvet embroidered, with a deep lace falling from it over the skirt of the dress. The Basquine d'Aulignay is of black velvet, simply trimmed with richly-figured galloon. There is also another novelty, but we do not answer for its being much adopted, it being too heavy to be worn by any other than ladies of the greatest fashion. This costume is composed of a piece of black velvet, cut in a point, so as to form a shawl; it is embroidered in silk and jet, but the two sides must be embroidered differently, which makes it resemble what is called a kind of chale Burtone.—London News, Nov. 1.

THE VINTAGE IN FRANCE.—We are already able to point out the first results of the vintage, and are glad to be able to state that the yield almost generally is above what was expected, and that the quality will scarcely be inferior to that of last year. The grape disease, does not present very calculating, that if the light, as sometimes, is not always the case, the vintage will be abundant. In the gallery of pictures in the Louvre, the third more than last year will be obtained, and at Perigueux and the neighborhood, the yield will be better than was hoped for.—The same may be said of the Gironde, particularly at Baiye. In Dourraine, and the Upper and Lower Char, the crop will exceed the general expectation; in Gers, particularly round Condom, the vintage will be abundant. In the south the gathering has been or terminated, and it is about to commence in the Chalonnaise; though scanty in several points, it will be abundant in others, and the average will be satisfactory, and everywhere of superior quality. In the north, and particularly in the neighborhood of Paris, the crops are very poor; in fine, the whole, the result of the vintage up to the present time is rather advantageous than unfavorable.—Journal de Berey et la l'Entrepot.

We have news from Rio Janeiro to the 10th of October. The stock of coffee is increasing, owing to the dryness of the weather, which enabled planters to send in large supplies. The orders from France, Belgium and England are very large, and but few vessels are loading for the United States.—You will not be a little surprised when I tell you that emigration is rapidly increasing here; the government is using every effort to make its great advantages, and have succeeded in attracting the attention of European settlers. The French and Portuguese are increasing rapidly, and the English, Irish and Scotch are coming in thousands and settling on the finest lands in the world. Brazil will assume a position of great importance among the nations very soon.—Leader.

A Southern View of Thanksgiving Day in the Northern States.

The Baltimore Sun, alluding to the fact that Thursday, November 20, has been fixed upon by most of the Governors of the Northern States for the annual Thanksgiving as such: Where are the Governors of the States South of Maryland? The enquiry has provoked the following rather snappish reply from the Carolina Times;

"We are impressed that the Governors of States south of Maryland, are all at home and competent to look after themselves, and when it will be proper to fix upon a day to offer up thanks to the Almighty for past blessings. The movement on the part of Northern Executives is no criterion for Southern men. We are subject to law, common and divine, and say with

"No bleeding bird or bleeding beast,
Nor hyssop branch, nor sprinkling priest,
Nor running brook, nor flood nor sea
To wash a dismal stain away."

"It is most and proper that the miserable sin stricken, polluted and ungodly population of the North should beg pardon for their black sins recorded, committed against God, their country and fellow men. As a generation of vipers, they ought to be warned to flee the wrath to come; yet we believe that the waters of Jordan, Abana and Pharpar would fail to wash them and heal their leprous sin though they were to dip seven thy times seven. They have much to be forgiven, and we would advise them to pray often—pray long and pray loud. Baltimore, especially, ought to be, covered with sackcloth and ashes."

Jonathan on his Aristocratic Horse.

Nothing so much identifies a large class of Yankee writers, of whom Napoleon About is fair swatch and sample, than to have a fling at what they term "the insolence of the British aristocracy." It rejoices the cockles of their hearts to describe an Anglican Peer turning up his Right Honorable nose at the shoemakers or snyders who chance, at an odd time, to "come between the wind and his nobility." And never are they weary in singing the lauds of that transcendental republic where, in the words of Paddy Finnerty "every man is as good as another and a mighty sight better too, bedad!"

To such worthies, Solomon commendeth an attentive perusal of the following excedingly juicy and toothsome paragraph which adorned a recent number of the Muscogee (Alabama) Herald:

"Free society! We sicken at the name. What is it but a conglomeration of greasy mechanics, filthy operatives, small fisted farmers, and mean souled theorists! All the Northern, as I especially the New England States, are devoid of society fitted for well bred gentlemen. The prevailing classes one meets with is that of mechanics struggling to be genteel, and small farmers who do their own drudgery and yet who are hardly fit for association with a Southern gentleman's body servant. This is your free society which the Northern borders are endeavoring to extend into Kansas."

Many a savoury piece of Duperation and fytino have we met with in our day and generation, but most assuredly none of them ever came within five thousand miles of the above most delectable handful of gaur. If mine Uncle Toby had been conversant with the lucubration of the Alabama fourth estate, he would not have made such a coil and pother about the Billingsgate of the army in Flanders."—Streetville Review.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, DECEMBER 4, 1856.

The St Catherine's Post speaks thus in a manner that is anything but flattering of the Railway Schemers Buchanan and Zimmerman.

Messrs. Buchanan and Zimmerm an having enjoyed themselves to their own satisfaction in England over the Southern Railroad, have transferred the scene of operations to Canada, and each pretends to be playing into the other's hand, but very little penetration is required to see at a glance that the first favorable opportunity to upset this opponent will be embraced by these adepts in humbug. Neither party is sincere. Mr. Buchanan's pet scheme is to have the terminus of the Southern Line at Hamilton, while the Dock and some other little matters engage Mr. Zimmerm an's efforts for old Niagara. On Mr. B's return to this country he sent a report of the Directors of the Woodstock & Lake Erie Railway, in which he states that he had made the best arrangement possible with the Zimmerman party and the only one in fact under which it was possible to get that line an alignmated with the Southern. The condition of this arrangement is, "that the municipalities shall immediately pass the By Laws giving up three years interest, and that they and the W. & L. E. R. will cordially co-operate in all measures required for the amalgamation of the Southern charters into one Company." He congratulates himself and the Company on being able to affect this arrangement, and very coolly informs them that their road has a bankrupt character in English.

Mr Zimmerman visited St. Thomas on Saturday last, and a meeting of the inhabitants was held. Mr. Z. stated what he had done in England, also stated that he wanted a through Southern line from Niagara to the Detroit River, unincumber by any cross lines, and expressed great doubts about making Amherstburgh the terminus. Thus completely ignoring the W. & L. E. Road. The people of Amherstburg folks the ply. How Mr. Buchanan will accept this statement of Mr. Z's it is hard to say. Zimmerman is, perhaps, fooling him still, and as he is not up to the various dodges railway speculators resort to, although no doubt learning very fast, he may discover that no calculations are so far astray as those as when he depended on his false friends in England. In the meantime the Amherstburg people are determined to defend the suit brought in Chancery by Mr. Zimmerman, which, Mr. B, having changed sides is very anxious should go in favor of the plaintiff by default. They say if Mr. B. has made a fool of himself, that is no reason why their interest should be sacrifice', and are resolved to fight it out with Mr. Z.—While this state of affairs continues nothing can be done, and the Great Southern Railway is likely to afford work and amusement for some time to come.

While Mr. Z. and his cronies are fighting up west his poor chickens at the northern terminus are famishing for lack of something to do, but, as formerly, body and soul is kept together by the hope that out of all this wrangling and scheming a few crumbs may come to their share. If Sandy don't "hurry up the cakes" and get his pet charter through Parliament, the consequences will likely be very disasterous to his "pocket borough."

The Leader says, "that SULLIVAN, the man sentenced to be executed to-day at Hamilton, for the murder of his wife has been respited. The unfortunate man has alleged in a petition to the Governor-General that the proceedings against him are illegal and void, inasmuch as none of the Associate Judges named in Commission were present when sentence of death was upon him; and that the Clerk of Assize, who is ex-officio an Associate Judge, was also absent.

We understand that evidence in proof of this allegation has been laid before His Excellency; and that the case now stands over in order that the opinion of the legal tribunals may be obtained as to the validity of the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer."

The Ottawa Citizen says that, "there is a rumour here to the effect that Mr. Cooke is about to resign the representation of the County of Ottawa, and that Mr. Rose, Advocate of Montreal, is to be proposed as a candidate for that honor. Rumour says further, that this is a pre-arrangement for the purpose of giving Mr. Rose a seat in the house. We have received an anonymous address to the electors of that county on the subject, which we presume to decline to publish. We mention the subject merely as a rumour. Should it turn out to be well founded we might have something to say on the matter hereafter."

THE CANADA DIRECTORY.—With our issue of to-day a supplement is published, containing the Propectus of the Canada Directory for 1857, and descriptions of the Press thereupon. The publisher of this directory as we have already informed our readers, is Mr. John Lovell, of this city. He is so well known throughout the Province, and his efforts in the same direction have hitherto been so successful, that his forthcoming work requires no commendation at our hands. He ought to be well supported, because the Directory is for the information and benefit of the public, not his own. Of course the labourer is worthy of his hire. And Mr. Lovell expects to be paid for his time and the pecuniary sacrifices he must make before the work is fait accompli. But the risk he is running is a large one; the difficulties he has to encounter are considerable and the prospective gain from the publication, even if a large sale be realized, must be but small. We hope, therefore, that our merchants, professional men and citizens in general will patronize the work, and not only subscribe themselves but obtain for it the patronage of their friends. To all who move in the busy scenes of life, the Directory will prove invaluable; while the correctness with which it will be got up, and the reliable character of its information, are additional inducements to becomme its purchaser.—Transcript.

Toronto, Nov. 29.

There was a poor attendance on the market this morning, owing to the disagreeable weather.

Wheat came in slowly to the extent of about 700 bu.h. and was in great demand, the wintry aspect of the weather causing buyers to fear a stoppage to navigation before the cargoes in progress are completed. For good samples fair to fine, a ready sale, which farmers readily accepted.

FLOUR.—The flour market continues without animation, and as we have heard of on sales we refrain from quoting.

Detroit Nov. 29

FLOUR.—The sales since our last reach 512 bbls at $5 25, and 60 bbls of red winter at about $5.

BRITISH CONSULAR ESTABLISHMENT.—A list of consul generals, consuls vice consuls and consular agents at present in the service of her Majesty has been issued. There are 21 in Sweden, 22 in Norway, 14 in Denmark, 8 in Prussia, 11 in Hanse Towns, 1 in Saxony, 2 in Hanover, 13 in the Netherlands, 4 in Belgium, 45 in France, 67 in Spain, 30 in Portugal, 1 in Switzerland, 17 in Sardinia, 3 in Tuscany, 7 in the Roman states, 30 in the Two Sicilies, 4 in Austria, 13 in Greece, 62 in Turkey, 8 in Egypt, 7 in Tripoli, 9 in Morocco, 2 in Persia, 1 in Abyssinia, 1 in Muscat, 23 in the United States, 9 in Mexico, 6 in Guatemala, 1 in Mosquito, 5 in Hayti, 3 in St. Domingo, 5 in Venezuela, 10 in New Granada, 2 in Equador, 5 in Peru, 1 in Bolivia, 6 in Chili, 3 in Buenos Ayres, 2 in Monte Video, 1 in Paraguay, 17 Brazil, 1 in the Sandwich Islands, 1 in the Georgian Islands, 11 in the Society Islands, in the Navigation Islands, 1 in Sarawak, 1 in Comoro Island, 2 in Sherbro River, 2 in the Bight of Benin, 1 in the Bight of Biafra, 1 in Liberia, and 10 in China.

HER MAJESTY'S NEW YACHT. — The Victoria and Albert has been in constant requisition since she first launched by Her Majesty; indeed her Majesty lives much on board, for such are the comforts and attractions of the yacht that they outrival those of the palace ashore. The yacht is truly a triumph of marine beauty, skill and science; she glides as easily over the surface of the water at an average speed exceeding 18 knots per hour; there have been no dodging and undoing, no docking, no locking, redocking, tinkering, adapting, or expensive experimenting, but from the moment her fires were first lighted to the present she has been a perfect love, never out of order, and ready to start for anything afloat.—London paper.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—We understand that an important discovery has recently been made by Sir William Logan. It is the presence, in the Township of Chatham, on the Ottawa, of a very extensive deposit of the—we believe volcanic formation of what is popularly called Burr Stone—the scientific name we cannot now remember. Sir William has, we believe, expressed an opinion that in the qualities which gives this mineral its commercial value—that of its adaption for the grinding of flour and meal—corn mills—it fully equals that of the best French Burr stone, which is imported into every market in the world, and forms no inconsiderable item in the exports of France. —Herald.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCILLORS.—The Queen has, we understand, conferred the title of Honorable upon those gentlemen who have been elected to the Council. It will be remembered that this journal raised the question some time since as to their right to this distinction. It would seem that the imperial law officers took the same view of the case that we ourselves fully taken for granted of this country, and that a special letter of license from the crown was necessary to confer the title.—Ibid.

ST. JOHN'S BREAD.—At the Chalnsford cattle show an article was exhibited which at once call consis erable attention at the Paris Exhibition. It is known as the Locust, or St. John's Bread, and is thought to be the same kind of food that St. John lived upon in the wilderness. It has been very effective in fattening cattle, and there is every probability that it will soon become the staple food for horses, to which purpose it is applied in various parts of the continent.—The locust grows on the side and shape of a large bean, and contains so much saccharine matter, that it is used abroad for making both sugar and spirits.

It is not generally known that Governor Brigham Young, of Utah, holds his authority in defiance of the United States Government. His term of service expired about four years ago, and President Pierce then resolved to remove him. A new Governor, Mr. Stepton, was accordingly sent out from Washington to take his place, but Brigham refused to yield, and Mr. Stepton had to step home again, leaving this Mormon Chief master of the field, while he holds his sway. Further than this, Brigham lets no opportunity pass of reviling the United States Government, and holding it up to contempt. Pierce now says that he will leave the pleasant duty of dealing with him to his successor in the Presidential chair.—The Mormon leader will prove a troublesome customer to Buchanan.—Leader.

The final tug at the election in New York city were enormous. Some wards returned more votes for Buchanan than there were legal voters in the wards. Such rascalities make a mockery of the rights of suffrage and are a reproach to republican Government.

DEATH OF HER MAJESTY'S HALF BROTHER.—Her Majesty received intelligence on Thursday evening, of the death of the Prince of Leiningen, son of the Duchess of Kent by her first marriage. The Prince has left two sons—one in the English army and the other is in the Austrian service.

NEW NICARAGUAN DEVELOPMENTS.—A quarrel between President Walker, of Nicaragua, and his late confidential friend, General Goicouria, has brought to light the fact that Walker, on the 11th of January last entered into a contract with one Captain F. A. Lasala, agent of General Goicouria, to make common cause with the Honduranean party of Cuba, in attempting to overthrow the Spanish authority in that Island and obtain possession of the same. The same quarrel also discovers another design of Walker, which is to head off the "expansion" movement in favor of the North, by a powerful and compact Southern feder ation, based on military principles," and also on Slavery, of course. The Filibuster President of Nicaragua is rather magnifi cent in his plans.—Tribune.

SINGULAR WHALE FIGHT.—A whale sixty-two feet long, says the northern (Scotland) Banner, was picked up at sea about three weeks ago, and taken ashore at Nybster, some twelve miles from Wick. It seems that the whale was not drifted dead from the Greenland Seas, but that he had fallen in single combat with another monster of the deep. The conflict, which took place about a mile and a half from the shore, and which was witnessed from the land by a number of fishermen and others, is described as having been protracted and bloody. The two monsters kept battling with each other, at times with their heads and at times with their tails, raising a tremendous spray for a distance of many yards. After a fierce and close encounter they would each retreat for a considerable distance, and after a brief rest would again meet in collision, approaching each other with locomotive speed at the rate of twenty or thirty miles an hour. On receiving from the stunning effect of such an attack they would again resume the fight, rising up into the water, springing up from ten to twenty feet and coming down on each other with fearful violence. Meanwhile the sea for some distance round about assumed a red color, indicating that an immense quantity of blood had been shed. For two hours the battle was prolonged; at the close of which one of the whales became motionless, and the other swam off from the field of battle. Next morning the whale referred to was found not far from the spot where the engagement took place, and from various marks in his body including a broken jaw bone, there is no reason to doubt that he was one of the two belligerents of the previous afternoon.

THE TAILBIT MOUNTAIN IN THE WORLD.—Col. Waugh, surveyor general of India, has discovered a mountain in the Himalayan Range, which turns out to be the highest mountain in the world. The first and Deswalgon had already fix some years yielded the precedence to Kinchinjunga and the latter must now yield to the newly discovered mountain which Colonel Waugh proposes to call Mount Everest, in honour of the late surveyor general of India Sir Everest.

WOOD VS. COAL.—Coal, as is generally known, is the produce of buried trees. A Traveller Underground has calculated that an acre of coal, three feet thick, is equal to the produce of 1,240 acres of forest? The first coal mines were worked in Belgium in the year 1168, and very soon after in England. —There is now raised 5 times as much coal in Great Britain as in any other country; and it is now estimated that there is in these is ex more than 4000 square miles of coal field yet to cut out.

POST OFFICE REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.—A notice has been recently received from the General Post Office, London, which the public ought to be acquainted with. In consequence of the frequency with which letters marked "Registered" have been put into the letter-box, an order has been issued to charge ONE SHILLING in addition to the postage, on every such letter, which if not paid by the sender, will be charged on the letter when delivered. The object of this heavy charge is avowedly to check the habit above alluded to. All letters for registration should be handed directly to the proper clerk in the Post-office, to be marked and entered in a proper manner.

CURIOUS WOLF TRAP.—The Hartford Times says: "A very ingenious and a peculiarly effectual contrivance, for catching and killing wolves, foxes, &c., has been invented by Frederick Reathe, of this city, a workman at Colt's pistol factory. It is small and compact, being but twelve inches long by six inches wide, with much strength and precision. Two steel prongs fitting into a close steel case, are provided with four barbed points, upon which the bait is fixed.—The little thing is completed by two small tubes or pistol barrels, running lengthwise, with the cases on either side, and provided with cocks for percussion caps. When the animal seizes the meat he pulls out the two prongs upon which it is fastened, and in doing so, opens them by a powerful spring, thus forcing his jaws wide apart and holding them firmly by the steel barbed points, while at the instant the pistol barrels are simultaneously discharged down his throat. It finishes him completely. Even without the pistol shots, no wolf could well get away with those barbed points in his jaw. An experiment tried on a dog succeeded admirably. The inventor goes to Canada with his trap to sell it in that wolf swarming region."

AN EXAMPLE TO YOUNG MEN.—Some years ago a young man endeavouring to obtain his living in Holland saw usher. He was far from being successful in his profession, so he determined to try Batavia. He succeeded in obtaining a situation there as a private teacher, but was soon obliged to leave it on account of his utter inability to teach. In this difficulty he sought and obtained a situation as a clerk in the Government office. He here proved to possess administrative tact, and great application. He soon rose to a higher appointment, and subsequently to one which will fill three years. He was trusted with a very important charge in the colonial department. About five years ago he became minister for the colonies, and proved himself an able administrator. The young man was M. Pahuis, the present Governor-General of Dutch East India.

Recently—on what we hope is a gentleman who without provocation, would insult with invincibility the humblest of his species. It is a vulgarity for which no attainments or dress can ever atone. Show me the man who desires to make every one happy around him, and whose general demeanor attitude is never to give just offence to any one, and I will show a gentleman by nature and practice, although he may never have worn a suit of broadcloth, nor never heard of a lexicon.

ROYAL CLEMENCY FOR REBELS.—The Queen has signified her pleasure that a full and free pardon should be granted under the Great Seal of Great Britain and of Ireland respectively, to all persons suffering under conviction for political offences. This measure will be of the greatest consequence to many of those suffering punishment on account of political acts—especially those like Smith O'Brien, O'Doherty, &c., in Ireland, and Frost, Williams and Jones, in England, who were convicted of high treason and sentenced to death, with all the accompanying disqualifications consequent upon so serious a crime. What had hitherto been done no-fully remitted the punishment inflicted in each case, but a pardon under the Great Seal restores the individual to all their civil right and station as they stood before trial. They can now possess and inherit lands and enjoy all the dignities in the state. This act of clemency of course does not include those who broke their parole, or incurred the additional penalty of flying from the sentence of the law.

TEA.

The culture of the tea plant is extremely simple, Provided it be protected from the wind, it will grow in stony and barren ground. Small holes having been made in the ground at a distance of about three feet apart, a few seeds are dropped into each hole. The plant does not appear above ground in less than two or three months; but no sooner has it done so than it begins to shoot up with great rapidity. If all the seeds germinate the weakest are pulled up. The plant usually grows from two to three feet high, and never higher than five feet, with a bushy top. At three years old the leaves are cut, each tree usually yielding about three ounces of dry tea. Black tea and green tea are both obtained from the same tree. There are two species of the tea plant, but they are not exhibited in the colour of the leaves. The black tea is produced from the young. Tea was first introduced from China into Russia in the year 1638. Forty years later the Russian government entered into a direct treaty with China to promote and regulate the commerce in this article. This treaty was concluded by Peter the Great, and he permitted a service of caravans to be regularly established by the Siberians between Makarieff and the Chinese frontier. Teas are distinguished by the proprietors, and sometimes, also, the manufactories—about two hundred families at present existing who enjoy the preference among merchants. Tea is drunk among all the nomadic tribes of Central Asia, who infuse it in milk, adding a little maize or millet, and thus eat rather than drink it.

LARGEST CLOCK IN THE WORLD.—The dials of the English Parliament clock are twenty-two feet in diameter, and are the largest in the world with the minute hand. Every half minute, the point of the minute hand moves nearly seven inches. The clock will go eight and a half days and strike only for seven and a half, so as to indicate by its silence any neglect in winding it up. The mere winding of each of the striking parts will take two hours.—The pendulum is 15 feet long; the wheels are of cast iron; the hour bell is eight feet high and nine feet in diameter, weighing about fifteen tons. The weight of the hammer is four cwt.

A HYPOCRITICAL MOUSE.—An Albany editor says that a mouse, which had several times been caught in the act of nibbling the nice things in his pantry, was the other day traced to its nest, which was found to contain seven or eight young mice "responsibilities." The parent rogue was arrested, and executed for larceny. On one side of the nest a piece of an old Bible was found, on which the following words were distinctly visible: "Thou shalt not steal." What a hypocrite!

Special Notices.

To Ladies.

Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are especially efficacious in all the variety of ailments incidental to the fair sex. They mildly and speedily remove all Skin Eruptions, Sallowness, Pimples, Blotches, Nervous Irritability, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Depression of Spirits, Irregularity, or General Derangement of the System and by assisting the Secretions, give tone and vigour to all the Organs as to give the color of the Rose to the complexion, and tone and vigor to the whole frame. Married Ladies, even of the most delicate constitution, will find them particularly beneficial both before and after confinement, and for the general use they cannot be too strongly recommended. They possess the eminent advantage of all other approved medicines, that while they operate gently and without pain, they pr duce neither debility, costiveness, nor irritation, which is so apt to produce or aggravate the Piles.

No medicine ever introduced to the public has become so universally popular with Ladies as Sir Astley Cooper's Pills. They are of most astonishing efficacy, and they are confidently recommended to them for general use. A trial of a box of these Pills will at once prove the truth of this assertion.

BEWARE AT CAUTION.—It frequently occurs that Druggists impose on their customers a spurious compound called Sir Astley Cooper's Pills generally put up in a red or pink wrapper and labelled Compound or in imitation of Apothecaries Hall, London, when the fact is, they are prepared by themselves.—Beware of such trash as you would of poison. The Genuine Pills have the likeness of Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box; also the fac-simile of the signature of the Proprietors, McPhail & Co. London and New York, on the directions.

Sold at 25 cents and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Junspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

THE NEW ILLUSTRATED

Hydropathic Encyclopedia,

A COMPLETE SYSTEM OF

HYDROPATHY & HYGIENE.

IN ONE LARGE VOLUME,

EMBRACING Outlines of Anatomy, Illustrated; Physiology of the Human Body; Hygienic Agencies and the Preservation of Health; Dieties and Hydropathic Cookery; Theory and Practice of Water Treatment; Special Pathology and Hydro-Therapeutics, including the Nature, Causes, Symptoms and Treatment of all known diseases; Application to Surgical Diseases; Application of Hydropathy to Midwifery and the Nursery; with three hundred engravings and nearly One Thousand Pages, including a Glossary, Table of Contents, and a complete Index. By R. T. TRALL, M. D.

Published by FOWLER and WELLS, New York.

In the plan of the work, the wants and necessities of the People have been steadily in view. While almost every topic of interest in the departments of Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Hygiene, Therapeutics is briefly presented, those of practical utility will always be prominently forward. The prevailing errors, conceits, and whims of the day and age are exposed and refuted; the theories and hypothesis upon which the popular drug practice is predicated are controverted, and the why and wherefore of their fallacy clearly demonstrated. The following is a brief analysis of its contents:

Anatomy illustrated by One Hundred and Twenty appropriate engravings.

Physiology, in which almost every thing pertaining to the Rationale of Muscular Action; the Nervous Influence; Philosophy of Mind; Mesmeric Phenomena; the Special Senses; Functions of Digestion, Circulation, Respiration, Absorption, Nutrition, Secretion, Excretion; Calorification, Temperaments, the Races of Men, and Theory of Population.

Hygiene embracing all the relations of Air, Light, Drink, Food, Temperature, Exercise, Sleep, Clothing, Bathing, and the Passions, to the growth and development of Body and Mind, the Preservation of Health and the attainment of Longevity.

Dietetics, comprising the Bible, Anatomical, Physiological, Chemical and Experimental Evidence concerning the natural Dietetic Character of Man.

Hydropathic Cookery, with Special Directions for the Preparation of Food.

Dietaries of Water-Cure, with illustrated explanations of all the water-cure appliances; a Philosophical Exposition of the modus operandi of water-treatment, and the true rationale of drug-treatment.

The Nature Symptoms and Treatment of all known Diseases are examined, the ill success of drug practice exposed, and the proper Medication recommended and specified.

The Treatment of surgical Diseases Illustrated and the directions for the minor operations given.

The Management of Lying-in-Women, and the treatment of Children, &c.

The work is intended to be plain, intelligible and sufficit nt guide for domestic practice, or home treatment, in all ordinary diseases, embracing the whole range of subjects connected with the philosophy of life, the preservation of health, and the treatmen of diseases.

This great work may be had in one large volume, bound in library style. Price one paid by mail to any Post Office in United States or Canada, only THREE DOLLARS.

Wood Ashes.

The virtue of ashes as a dressing for all crops, is, we think, not properly appreciated by a great many, who live by tilling the soil. It is everywhere and on all crops, except perhaps clover, worth as much as plaster, and, on some, far exceeds it as a solvent and stimulant of vegetation. Its action is palpable to the most careless observer in its effects, and the manner in which it acts, is of easy explanation, which is more than can be said of plaster.

In the first place, potash is one of the most deliquescent salts, or has ability to attract moisture. A lump of potash, when dry, is as solid and hard as a well burned brick, but when exposed to a damp, or night air, it nearly doubles its weight and becomes a liquid, so great is its attraction for watery vapor. This is one of its features, but its great and important function is the silicate of pot ash—silex or sand dissolved in potash—to form the glazing of straw, hay, cornstalks and various other vegetable structures, without which no cereal crop can be perfected.

Some soils, particularly clays, contain a sufficient portion of this material, they become worn and effete. Ashes are most beneficial on sandy, loamy and gravelly soils, that do not contain mineral potash, or its elements. When compared with plaster, the only objection to the profitable use of ashes is its cost solubility—heavy rains dissolve and carry off the potash beyond the reach of the plant; while plaster being insoluble its action is not destroyed by water.

In this region, wood ashes are about eight cents per bushel; while the price of plaster at the mill is about twelve cents, and that drawing it several miles to be added to its cost; which if our position is correct as to the value of the two manures, it behoves the farmer to make and save all the ashes he can; especially for the corn crop, for which it is unanimously admitted to be worth more than plaster. The custom of corn growers generally, to mix them together, producing a very striking effect. It has been suggested that broad-cast sowing of ashes is equally efficacious with application to the hills, and we are disposed, from some experiments exhibited, to give credence to that course if double the quantity is not applied.

With leached ashes, the effect is not as quick, nor as apparent on crops as unleached; but their action is longer felt when treble the quantity is used. They contain silex in a firm and impalpable state, and some potash and lime, ready for solution. Silex or flint being undissolvably nearly insoluble, except by the fluoric acid, a substance very sparingly produced by nature, and then being in a neutral and combined state. That silex is dissolved and taken up by the sap, is evident from the fact that canes, bamboos and rushes are so strongly covered with this material, that they will strike fire with the steel. The leaf of the wheat plant in its earliest stages, when burned in the candle carefully, will leave an ash that will contract and melt into a globule of glass, often as perfect as the microscopic lens; all which goes to prove the benefit of potash in the shape of ashes, to produce the silicate so imperiously necessary to plants as well as the grasses. —Moore's Rural New-Yorker.

SUPERIOR MODE OF CURING HAMS.—Agreeably to your request I here with send you the process of curing the hams I sent you in March, which called forth the admiration of the American Agricultural Association and the Farmer's Club, at New York.

Take a pickle of two quarts of salt, to which I added one ounce of summer savory, one ditto sweet marjoram, one ditto allspice, half ditto saltpetre, and one pound brown sugar; boiled together and applied the mixture boiling hot to one hundred pounds of hams, and kept them in the pickle three or four weeks.

My process of smoking was not the most expensive, but may not be the less available on that account. I smoked the hams in a seed cask, with one head in, with a small hole for the smoke to pass out, hung my hams to the head, and used about a peck of unbarnty sawdust for fuel, which I happened to have on hand for packing goods. I smoked but one week.

LINIMENT.—I send you a receipt for a liniment, which has been long in use, and has been found highly efficacious in all cases of sprains, bruises, and wounds, external or internal, on man or beast. It has been used with great success in severe cases of rheumatism, often affecting a positive cure, and no farmer should be without it who has not something better to substitute in its place.

One half oz. spirits hartshorn;
Two oz. camphor gum;
One gil spirits turpentine;
One-half pint sweet oil;
One-pint alcohol.

Shake it well together and apply, rubbing it in smartly with the hand.—Alb Cult.

EFFECTS OF DRAINAGE.—All the rain that falls upon our fields must be carried away either by natural or artificial drainage, or, having thoroughly saturated the soil on which it falls, be left upon the surface to be carried off by evaporation. Now, every gallon of water thus carried off by evaporation, required as much heat as would raise five and a half gallons from the freezing to the boiling point! Without going to extreme cases, the great effects of the heat thus lost upon vegetation cannot fail to be strikingly and I have frequently found the soil of a field well drained, higher in temperature from 10° to 15° than that of another field which had not been drained, though in every other respect the soils were similar. I have observed the effects of this on the growing crops, and I have seen not only a much superior crop on the undrained field, but that crop harvested fully three weeks after the other, and owing to this circumstance and the setting in of unsettled weather, I have seen that crop deteriorated fully ten per cent in value.—Journal of Royal Ag. Society.

POETRY.—Among the choice writings of Jean Paul, may be found the following beautiful analysis of the subtle essence of poetry:

"There are so many tender and holy emotions flying about in our inward world, which, like angels, can never assume the body of an outward act; so many rich and lovely flowers spring up, which bear no seed, that it is a happiness poetry was invented which receives into its limbs all incorporeal spirits, and the perfume of all these flowers.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,
TORONTO, 25th July, 1856

To Emigrants & Others Seeking LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of Roads now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD,

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Ferrall's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," leading to the Lake Muskoka and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming what is called "Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskoka, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Canada Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. French, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country under Dr. French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to the small Steamboats Point, and there take land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 35 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 27 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of this agency, lying north of Lake Mazinaw, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Ellingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence North to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the Town of Belleville, County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles North of the Village of Hastings. This Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get to it without any difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the County, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case, fifty HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Sett or be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put it in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the land until the conditions of settlement are duly performed; after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several sons, are entitled to land, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from the obligation of building and cut of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live previous to the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot. The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the land allotted, which will be sold or given to another Settler.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as can be put up in four days by five men. The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the erection is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed, and then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, are, in sections of Canada well capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land —some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timb red land is almost always the best, and of it, the sales of three acres, well taken care and covered from axe—will produce nearly the same profit, as twenty acres of ordinary land. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small and the process is very simple and easily understood.

Any person or persons, not possessing heavily adhered Lands, visiting the labour of the settlers at the highest rate, is about FOUR TONNES Currency per Acre, which is the first, wheat crop, the average crop, will nearly repay cost. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £5 to £20, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his provisions for a season, as he devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labour.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords materials during the winter season, for enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the following season. The fertility of the earth, not only facilitates communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it next to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the mere lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that the ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa District, extending from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to this Ottawa River —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of eight millions of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Government of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertaken and will be completed in the present year, its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean, These projected works are alluded to in order to show the interest which the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, have so fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF RURAL ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an indispensable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of its kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. R. KNIGHT, JAMES SNOWDEN and D. W. RAY.

TERMS: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the ILLUSTRATED HORTICULTURIST for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the forthcoming and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM EVANS, Esq., who will have resumed the practice of Agrienlure near this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having always been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 30
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most highly, thoroughly and completely ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING,
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Art of Book-keeping, and the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mystery, made such both by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire CORRECT notions of accounts as embodied in ACTUAL practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces long the practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Composition, Commercial Correspondence, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.
N. B.—For particulars send for Catalogues and Circulars by mail.

Select Poetry.

The Shadow on the Pillow.

At the Edinburgh Crimean banquet the following song by Mr James Ballantine, founded on an instance related by Sir John M'Neil, was sung:

Borne helpless from the field of fight,
Hown deep with wound and scars.
I prayed—"Heaven come and help the night,
And end the cruel wars."
I swooned, I dreamt an angel band,
Bore me o'er ocean billow;
I woke, and lo! an angel hand
Was smoothing down my pillow.
Was smoothing down my pillow.

'Twixt death and life, through day and night,
My wounds unconscious kept me,
Of all, except those eyes so bright
That kindly watched and wept me.
And over me, in yon far land,
Had waved the weeping willow,
Had it not been the angel hand
That smoothed the soldier's pillow.
That smoothed the soldier's pillow.

O! earth but once heard such a tale,
So heavenly and so human,
As that of Florence Nightingale,
The angel type in woman.
What marvel that a soldier tell,
A poor but grateful fellow,
He kissed her shadow as it fell
At midnight on his pillow!
At midnight on his pillow!

Hearts' Fancies.

Hearts too often pine and languish,
When by fancied woe oppressed;
Features wear a look of anguish,
And in vain we seek for rest.
Though it is but fancy's dreaming
Pressing on the troubled heart:
Though the sorrow is but seeming,
Yet we feel the bitter smart.

Hopes that once were bright and cheering,
Then seem lost in sad despair:
No bright gleam of hope appearing
To dispel each seeming care.
Fear of some impending danger
Oft times dwelleth in the mind,
And the heart, no place a stranger,
In this world no joy can find.

When such thoughts are o'er us stealing,
In their darkest gloom arrayed,
We should check the rising feeling—
We should summon reason's aid.
Strength of mind in truth possessing,
Without fear of care or woe,
We can truly prize each blessing
Sent by heaven here below.

P. HANLEY.

How Pat Burke arrested his own Corpse--A Curious Case.

From the New York Times.

Not often does one see his own funeral. Charles V. of Spain did, and so did Pat Burke of Eleventh Avenue; but he arrested his corpse while on the way to the cemetery!

Pat's is a strange story, but it is veritably true.

Pat is a laboring man, and when work is not brisk in the city, he goes to the country in search of it. He went out of town on Friday, and on Saturday his loving wife, Catharine, was brought the painful news that he had been killed on the Hudson River Railroad, at Tarrytown. She hastened to the place indicated, and there beheld and fully recognised the mutilated remains of her darlin' Pat. She put the body in a handsome mahogany coffin, and had it conveyed to her residence in the city. Here friends and neighbours assembled mournfully. The pipes and baccy were brought, the snuff passed round, and the corpse was "waked" in the "rale ould style."

The funeral was to take place on the Sunday afternoon, at two o'clock, and at that hour the hearse and a large number of nice carriages, well filled with mourners, drove up to the residence of the widow Burke.—The widow wept, and would not be comforted. She kissed the cold lips of her departed husband again and again, and it was with difficulty she could be prevented from taking one last lingering look at him who was no more.

The coffin was placed in the hearse, and the cortege moved slowly along towards Calvary Cemetery.

* * * * * * *

In half an hour after Pat Burke appeared in the flesh in his own house. He saw at once that something had taken place.—Thoughts of elopement and murders rushed wildly through his brain. Greatly frightened he bolted up stairs and into the apartments of a neighbor, without as much as saying "by your leave." Two women to whom he was well known, fainted when they saw the apparition, and were with difficulty revived. At last when they had sufficiently recovered to speak, they were asked by Pat, in a loud and exciting tone:

"What's the matter! Where's me wife! Spake quickly!

"She's gone to yer funeral, sure, [Pat—ain't ye dead?"

"Amn't I dead!—what in the——de ye mane, woman! amn't I here!"

"Arrah, Pat, jewel, you know yer dead! Sure, wasn't I at yer wake mesilf!"

"Then, where's me corpse?"

"Gone to the burrying ground half an hour ago, amock, but——"

Pat stopped for nothing more. He fancied how things stood, and rushing wildly from the house pursued his corpse up the avenue. He ran fast and long, and had the satisfaction of overtaking his funeral just as it was about to go on board the ferry boat that plies to Calvary Cemetery.

"Stop there," he cried, springing forward and seizing the head of the horse attached to the hearse. "Sthop there I tell ye, or by the powers, I'll massacree every mother's son of ye!"

Then rushing back to the next carriage, which contained his wife, he pulled open the door, and exhibited himself freely perspiring and greatly agitated.

The scene that ensued (as the magazines say) may be imagined but cannot be described. The widow Burke fainted, as did all the other women in the carriage, while the men struggled for exit by the other door. The uproar spread, and the aid of the police would have been called, had not the widow recovered from her swoon and fully recognized the presence of her dead husband.

As it was, many were not a little angered at Pat's unwarranted interference, while Pat, on seeing the corpse, was greatly chagrined that his wife should mistake "such an ugly spalpeen for her purty Pat," but when he saw his wife's pale face and tearful eyes, he thanked his stars that he had such a loving wife and that he was not yet dead.

The hearse and its contents were turned round and driven to the dead-house at Bellevue Hospital, while those who left the wake-house mourning returned to be merry.

All admitted the joke to be a good one, except Pat, who avers that it is no joke to be buried before one's time!

At inquest upon the corpse was held yesterday at Bellevue Hospital, by Coroner Hills, and a verdict rendered "That the unknown deceased came to his death by being run over on the Hudson River Railroad at Tarrytown." It was then interred in Potter's Field.

The Four Henrys.

One stormy evening, as the rain fell in torrents, an old woman who lived in a miserable hut, in the Forest of St. Germain, and who passed in the surrounding country for a kind of witch, heard a loud knocking at her door. She opened it, and a young man on horseback presented himself and craved hospitality.

By the dull light of a lamp which she held in her hand she perceived him to be a young nobleman. He appeared to be quite young, and his dress denoted rank. The old woman lighted a fire, and inquired of the stranger whether he was hungry and desired food. The appetite of a youth of sixteen is like his heart at the same age, craving, and not difficult to please, and he immediately accepted her offer. A morsel of cheese and a loaf of black bread from the cupboard was all the old dame could produce.

"I have nothing more," said she to the young nobleman; "this is all that your grinding rents and taxes leave a poor creature to offer a traveller; the peasants, too in this country, call me a witch and sorceress, and make that excuse to their conscience for stealing from me the little that my poor old field produces."

"Ma foi!" said the young man; "if ever I become King of France, I will suppress the tithes, and teach the people better."

"God grant it!" replied the old woman.

At these words the gentleman drew to the table to commence his repast; but at the same moment a fresh knock at the door arrested him.

The woman opened it, and perceived another horsemen drenched with rain who also begged for shelter. The same hospitality was granted him, and on the stranger's entrance, she perceived that he too was young, and judging from his appearance, of noble descent.

"What! is it you, Henry?" cried one.

"Yes Henry," replied the other. Both were named Henry.

The old woman discovered from their conversation that they were of a large hunting party conducted by the King, Charles IX., which had been dispersed by the storm.

"Mother," said the second comer, "have you nothing better to offer us?"

"Nothing," replied she.

"Then," said he, "we will go shares."

The first Henry demurred, but glancing at the resolute eye and strong frame of the second Henry, said in somewhat a chagrined tone—

"Agreed; we will share equally."

He dared not express his secret motive, but he feared, if not sharing equally, his companion would appropriate the whole.—They accordingly sat down on either side of the table, and one had already begun to cut the bread with his dagger, when a third knock was heard at the door. The meeting was indeed singular. It was again a youth, a nobleman, and a Henry. The old woman looked at them with amazement.

The first comer wished to hide the bread and cheese. The second replaced them on the table, and laid his sword by the side.—The third Henry smiled.

"You do not wish then that I should share your supper?" said he. Well! I can wait; I have strong stomach."

"The supper," said the first Henry, "belongs by right to the first comer."

"The supper," said the second, "belongs to him who knows best how to defend it."

The third Henry became red with anger, and said haughtily—

"Perhaps it belongs to him who knows best how to fight for it."

These words were scarcely uttered when the first Henry drew his poignard; the two others their swords. As they were just beginning the affray they were startled by a fourth knock at the cabin door; a fourth young man, a fourth Henry is introduced. At the sight drawn swords he produced his own, and attaching himself to the weakest party, he joined in the combat.

The old woman, terrified, hid herself, and the weapons struck everything in their reach The lamp fell down and was extinguished, but they continued to fight in the darkness. The noise of the swords lasted some time, and then gradually became less, and at length ceased altogether. Then the old woman ventured to issue forth from her hiding place, and rekindling the lamp, she perceived the four young men stretched on the ground, each having a slight wound. She examined them carefully, and found that fatigue, rather than loss of blood, had overcome them.

They rose from the ground one after the other, and ashamed of what had transpired in the heat of their passion, they began laughing, and exclaimed:

"Come let us now sup together without any more fighting."

But when they came to look for their supper, they found it on the ground, all trodden under foot, and stained with blood. Meagre as it was, they regretted it. In addition to this, the cabin was destroyed, and the old witch, seated in a corner, fixed her pale red eyes on the four young men.

"Why dost thou stare on us thus?" said the first Henry, who was troubled at her gaze.

"I am reading the fates written on your foreheads," replied she.

The second Henry commanded her sternly to disclose them, and the two others laughingly acquiesced. The old woman replied.—

"As you have all four met in this cabin, so shall you all meet in a like destiny. As you have trampled under foot and with blood the bread offered you by hospitality, so will you trample under foot and stain with blood the power you might mutually share. As you have devastated and impoverished this cottage, so will you devastate and lay waste France. As you have all four been wounded in the darkness, so you will all four perish by treason and a violent death."

The four young noblemen could not refrain from laughing at the old woman's prediction.

These four noblemen were the four heroes of the Ligue—two as its leaders, and two as its assassins.

Henry of Conde; poisoned by his wife at Saint Jean d'Angely.

Henry of Guise; assassinated at Blois, by the Forty five.

Henry of Valois; assassinated by Jacques Clement, at Saint Cloud.

Henry of Bourbon; assassinated at Paris by Ravaillac.

The First Locomotive.

In 1784, in Redruth, England, as a worthy pastor was returning from a visit to his flock, late in the twilight, he saw before him a strange nondescript, as large as a black ram with eyes flashing fire, and breathing very hard, running furiously towards his shins. Providentially he sprang aside, and before his astonished eyes could turn upon him, he had run such a distance as gave hope of deliverance, when he came full butt against a man running in the opposite direction. "Run for your life! back! back!" cries the parson. "Have you seen my steamer?" asked the stranger. "I have been the evil spirit himself; run! run!" "By Jove!" exclaimed the stranger; "how far ahead is he?"

The tone of this question, and the company of a human creature, in some measure dispelled the fright of the faithful man, and assured him that he, if any one, should have courage to face the powers of darkness; so he turned and ran after the stranger, who, as he thought, by mistake had taken the wrong direction. They soon came up to the object of their pursuit, which had got into a ditch, and was roaring terrifically. To the astonishment of the parson, the stranger seized and dragged the fiery monster to the road.

"She got away from me, sir. I was giving her a try; the bit of road being for a run."

"O, goodness! well, she is yours, then.—Pray, what is she?"

"A steamer, sir, I call her. She is a little experiment of mine, got up to try whether Mr. Watt's idea of running coaches by steam can be carried out. I think it can, sir, if capital can be got for it."

"Indeed! indeed! Pray, my dear sir, who may you be?"

"I am William Murdoch, at your service; a mechanical engineer, superintending the erection of pumping engines for Boulton & Watt, in the mines hereabouts."

Great was the relief and satisfaction of the worthy parson on discovering that what he imagined to be something broke loose from an unsafe place, was but a bit of honest mancraft—a lunatic conceit it might be, but harmless, except when it ran away, and might frighten children, perhaps hurt them.

This miniature engine was the first embodiment of the idea of locomotion on roads by steam.—Railroad Advocate.

Getting past the North Star.

A year or two since, an ebony individual, answering to the name of "Bob," (in fact no one knew whether he had any other name), was employed by a skipper, to assist him in sailing a small schooner on the waters of Chesapeake Bay. Bob did't understand, and couldn't be made to learn, the compass; so the skipper never dared to trust him to manage the craft, except during a very light night, when he could point out to him some hen land to steer for. On one occasion, however, the captain, who had been up two nights previously, concluded he would trust the schooner to Bob, and take a little nap on the deck; so he pointed out the North Star to his fat companion, and told him to continue steering for it until he waked up. After watching him a short time and finding that he could keep the vessel headed right, the skipper stretched himself upon the deck and was soon asleep. Shortly afterward, a squall arose from the North, and blew the craft completely away from her course. After it had cleared away somewhat, Bob looked around and found the North Star at his back. He sailed along an hour or so, doing the best he could, and cogitating over how he should get out of his difficulty. But at last he gave it up, and shoving his slumbering master into wakefulness with his foot, shouted, "Cap'n! Cap'n! Give me another star to steer by! I've got clean by that one!"—California Pioneer.

Miscellany.

ANOTHER CHICAGO VESSEL FOR EUROPE.—The Chicago Press says that a British Canadian barque, Chisholm, has been cleared by parties in that city to go to Europe and back from that port early next season. She will take out wheat and bring back salt or pig iron. The price agreed upon, for the voyage is $18,000—a penalty of $2,000 to be incurred in case of failure to carry out the contract.

A Quaker lately popped the question to a fair quakeress, as follows: "Hum—yea and verily, Penelope, the spirit urgeth and moveth me wonderfully to beseech thee to cleave unto me, flesh of my flesh, and bone of my bone." "Hum—truly, Obadiah, thou hast wisely said, inasmuch as it is written that it is not good for man to be alone, lo! and behold, I will sojourn with thee."

GREEK SONS AND DAUGHTERS.—The birth of a daughter is as much a subject of condolence, as the birth of a son is one of congratulation. A foreign resident at Athens, the father of a large family of girls, is looked upon by his neighbors as the most unlucky of men. They wonder at his failure to appreciate their superior gifts. He is told of an Athenian, who had set his heart on obtaining a son to perpetuate his name. Upon learning the disappointment of his expectations, he endeavoured to conceal his chagrin, and shame also, in the grove of the Cephisus; where he skulked for three days. Before he could regain sufficient assurance to meet his acquaintance. The anecdote may be somewhat exaggerated; but the fact that such feelings exist cannot be doubted.

A traveller in Canada writes to the N. Y. Tribune from Toronto that he had not met a single man in the Provinces who advocated annexation to the Stars and Stripes, although he had met many who derided the idea in a contemptuous spirit.

A WARNING.—An eminent physician in this neighbourhood, says the Ulverstone Advertiser, was called to perform a rather curious operation on a man who had drank too deep in discriminate between the flesh and bone of a dainty duck. The operation being successfully performed, the worthy surgeon thought to improve the occasion.—"Well my man," said he, "this will be a warning to you not to get drunk again."—The answer was characteristic—"it will be a warning to me not to eat ducks when I am drunk."

CAUGHT AT LAST.—A friend of ours, who resides in North Pearl Street, went a fishing the other day, and among other things that he hauled in was a large-sized turtle. To enjoy the surprise of his servant girl, he placed it in her bedroom. The next morning the first thing that bounced into the breakfast room was Biddy, with the exclamation of—"Be jabbers, I've got the divil."—"What divil?" exclaimed the head of the house, feigning surprise. "The bull bedbug that has been ateing the childer for the last month." As this is a new name for the nocturnal assassin, we thought we would let it out. Bull bed bug is good.

A professor of Magic, who recently gave an entertainment in an English seaport, was bragging pretty largely of his sleight of hand in the public room of one of the hotels, after his performance was over. A gentleman present offered to bet him that he would make everything on the table disappear in less than a minute. The professor at once booked the wager, when the other screwed out the gas. The disappearance was complete, and the professor confessed himself "sold!"

TURKISH DOCTORS.—What a frightful revolution it would cause in America if the Turkish law were put in force with us!—Nobody would be able to hear himself speak for the unceasing ringing of bells in the streets. The medical profession is subject to a singular responsibility in Turkey. When one of its followers—from ignorance—causes the death of a patient, he is compelled to carry a wooden frame round his neck, hung with bells—he appears a sort of perambulating mosque. In this state he is paraded round the town, and every time he asks permission to rest himself he has to pay a sum of money—The ringing of the bells gives notice to the passers-by how important it is to remember the features of the criminal, lest they should confide their existence to a man who would inevitably shorten it.

The Maple Leaf.

SANDWICH, DECEMBER 11, 1856.

A short time since, the body of a man, dreadfully mutilated, was found in the woods on lot No. 154, in this township, and near Lake St. Clair; it was supposed that the remains had been mutilated by hogs, and from what was left of the body it appears to have remained exposed for some time. No mark or paper was found upon the dress which would lead to the discovery of the party's name; he was evidently a stranger in this part of the Country, as he would have been identified; had he been a resident, and no one having been missed about the time when this person must have come to his death, also leads us to that belief. An inquest was held in view of the body by Dr. Guichard, Coroner, and as nothing then appeared to charge his death upon any person, a verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts.

His dress is thus described: the coat was of brown linen, two shirts, one of white linen, the other of blue calico; brown kerseymere trousers, with narrow raised rib, gaiter boots, ribbed socks, black silk neckcloth, and flat crowned straw hat, with black ribbon, and a ribbon to attach it to the coat.

As a somewhat strange coincidence, we copy from the Montreal Advertiser what appears to be a solution of the mystery in regard to the person's name; for in the month of September last, a person by the name of Hippisley Justins, was advertised in the columns of that journal as follows:—

INFORMATION WANTED.

Of Hippisley Justins, eldest son of Hippisley Justins, Attorney and Solicitor of the Great Northern Railroad, London, England. He is about 5 feet 6 inches in height; light complexion; light hair; small blue eyes; very large nose, but small between the eyes. He is near-sighted, and very nervous. When last seen he had on a brown linen coat, light pants, boots (lacing at the side), and blue and white neckerchief, and a coarse straw hat, with black ribbon around it.

Any information will be thankfully received by his wife at the Bonegana Hotel.

Other papers will confer a kindness by copying the above notice.

Sept. 9, 1856

The points of identity in the clothing are strong and obvious. The dress proves that the deceased was above the ordinary walk of life; the fine linen shirt, that deceased was an immigrant. If our conclusions are correct, we have a sad solution to a very sad history. Hippisley Justins came to the United States with his wife to seek his fortune. In one of the western lake cities—Detroit, we believe—failing to obtain employment, his means were exhausted, and the family had to part with the greater portion of their clothing. For a while his wife managed to obtain a bare subsistence by her own labor. The unfortunate man, whose intellect appears to have been naturally weak, rendered desperate by the misery of his family, which he was unable to relieve, became mad and wandered away. His wife, by the assistance of the neighborhood, had helped on her journey by the charitable, followed him through a considerable portion of Upper Canada, here and there obtaining traces of him. The last trace was near Niagara. Supposing he might have taken a steamer there for Lower Canada, she came here, making enquiries in the different cities, advertising for him, and laboriously pursuing the faintest indication, but without success. It is probable that the unfortunate man perished where he was found in a state of actual starvation. Mrs. Justins, we believe, returned to Detroit, after her ineffectual search.

Three yet remains a mystery to be cleared away in regard to the manner in which he came to his death. After the inquest had been held and all had apparently forgotten the subject, a man by the name of Lewis, (colored,) was arrested for a violent assault, and while in custody told the constable that he knew who had killed deceased, and that it was one Marshall, (colored,) Marshall was then arrested upon this charge and brought up before John Prince and Thomas Woodbridge, Esquires. A number of witnesses were brought forward and examined, but from their contradictory statements, it was impossible for the Magistrates to obtain evidence sufficiently strong to warrant them in finally committing the prisoners for trial. Marshall was discharged, but Lewis still remains in custody upon the other charge of aggravated assault.

There were many circumstances brought out in the examination which increased the suspicion of guilt against Lewis, but were not of a nature that the magistrates could take cognizance of.

The clothes found upon the deceased are in the possession of the gaoler at Sandwich, for the inspection of any person who may be interested in their identity.

One witness in the examination stated that the clothes found on deceased were similar to those worn by a person from Michigan, who had purchased a horse from him in September last. He was a horse dealer; but the witness did not know his name.

THE NEW COURT HOUSE.

This building has at length been completed, and the contractors have given up the key. We may now congratulate the County of Essex in possessing as handsome a Court House as the one just finished, and a goal so complete in all its parts, both as regards strength and convenience. Prisoners will not be compelled to occupy small and confined cells as in the old one, and will, during the day, have ample room for exercise, which in a sanitory point of view, is a great improvement. The day wards are large and airy, and so arranged as to afford a thorough classification of prisoners, so that young and inexperienced persons may not be compelled to associate with old and hardened criminals.

The Court Room is large and conveniently arranged, and is finished in a style that does credit to the Architect who planned it, as well as to the Messrs. McKenzie who carried out the design.

This splendid building is a credit to the intelligence of the County, and will be a lasting monument, as shewing the enterprise of those who have taken an active part in securing it's erection.

FERRY BOAT "WINDSOR."

This splendid new boat has just commenced running as a Ferry between Detroit and Windsor, and is, without exception, the best one that has ever been used for that purpose. She has been fitted up in a style that will combine comfort with elegance. Her cabin is large—being placed upon the upper deck—and passengers are spared the annoyance of being obliged, as formerly, to pass and repass among horses and teams. The enterprising proprietor is deserving of every encouragement.

Many of the large cities in the States appear to be striving hard to open up a trade with Canada of late; in fact, our commerce has increased with such rapid strides within the last few years, that to obtain a share of it, is worth working for, as may be seen by the Philidelphia North American. We are compelled to abridge the article; the part which has been omitted speaks in the most laudatory terms of the progress which Canada has made, and gives figures to prove its assertions:

"There is one region which the Catawissa and Elmira railway connection has rendered accessible to Philadelphia enterprise, not at present properly appreciated here. We allude to Canada West. Most of the population of this province is located in a peninsula formed by Lakes Ontario, Erie, St. Clair, Huron, Georgian Bay, and Lake Simcoe. This peninsula is a tongue of land projecting southward into the otherwise compact mass of territory composing the United States. It is in a large degree isolated from the rest of the British provinces, its nearest neighbours being the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and New York. It is a great deal easier and much more natural for the people of Canada West to obtain their supplies of merchandize from and though the United States, than to depend upon the long transportation between England and their own cities. Moreover the commercial marts in the States have the advantage of more speedy communications, greater capital, &c. Owing to these facts there is a large trade maintained between Canada and the United States. The ports on Lake Erie are all prospering by it.

Canada communicates with the commercial ports of the United States in two ways —by water and by railroad. The Hudson river and the Erie canal afford New York city the means of uninterrupted water commerce, except in winter, with Canada. For, on the arrival of the canal boats with their cargoes at any of the lake ports, the latter can be re-shipped on lake propellers or brigs and conveyed to almost any part of Canada. The opening of the North Branch Canal, throughout its entire length, has afforded also complete water communication between Philadelphia and Canada. But as yet the event is so recent that it is impossible to say whether the palpable advantages it offers our merchants will be profitted by. We speak not at this matter, however, more at length hereafter.

The land communication with Canada is by means of the New York Central and New York and Erie Railways to New York city, and by the Reading, Catawissa, Williamsport, Elmira and Canadaigua railway to Niagara Suspension Bridge. An erroneous impression has prevailed here that the Catawissa route connects with, and is tributary to the city of New York. So far as the trade of western New York and Canada are concerned, this is a great mistake. The principal connection of the Catawissa and Elmira road is with the Canandaigua and Niagara railway, which is made at Elmira, no portion of the Erie road being used for it.

On reaching Niagara the Canandaigua Railroad meets the Great Western Railroad of Canada. On reaching Buffalo, by the Buffalo and Batavia Railroad, another Canadian line is met—the Buffalo and Brantford. These lines ramnify through the most populous districts of Canada West, and render the people of that region the natural trade customers of the American marts.—It is, therefore, clear that our Catawissa connection affords an admirable facilities for reaching the Canadian trade, and it will be our fault if we do not profit thereby. It has been shown repeatedly that our line is the shortest one between Buffalo or Niagara and the seaboard.

* * * *

From these figures it will be seen that the trade of Canada is something worth striving for, and if our Philadelphia merchants and manufacturers will but enter into a competition for it, we do not doubt of their securing a liberal share of it. To accomplish this they must make themselves and their business known extensively in Canada. For this purpose, an agent of good character is now about to commence travelling through northern and western New York and Canada, for such Philadelphia houses as engage in the undertaking."

In the report of the United States Secretary of war, the following appears to be the authorized strength of the Army—17,893. The actual strength on the 1st of July was 15,562. The number of enlistments during the twelve months ending Sept. 30 was 4,440; the number of persons offering to enlist, but who were rejected for minority or unfitness, was 5,594. The number of casualties during the last fiscal year, by deaths, discharges and desertions, was 6,096, of which 3,223 were by desertion.

THE RECIPROCITY TREATY

If we may judge from the language used by President Pierce in his message, it is not the desire of his cabinet to disturb the existing treaty between the two governments, but on the contrary, speaks of its beneficial results in the strongest terms, and gives figures to prove the advantages it affords to the extension of commerce between the two countries.

"The treaty between the United States and Great Britain, of the 5th of June, 1854, which went into effective operation in 1855, put an end to causes of irritation between the two countries, by securing to the United States the right of fishery on the coast of the British North American provinces, with advantages equal to those enjoyed by British subjects. Besides the signal benefits of this treaty to a large class of our citizens engaged in a pursuit in connection to no inconsiderable degree with our national prosperity and strength, it has had a favorable effect upon other interests in the provision it made for reciprocal freedom of trade between the United States and the British provinces in America.

The exports of domestic articles to those provinces during the last year amounted to more than twenty-two millions of dollars, exceeding those of the preceding year by nearly seven millions of dollars; and the imports therefrom, during the same period, amounted to more than twenty-one millions —an increase of six millions upon those of the previous year.

The improved condition of this branch of our commerce is mainly attributable to the above-mentioned treaty."

From the New York Herald we are enabled to give a table of the votes cast at the recent Presidential Election, as far as the returns have yet been received. Of these Buchanan received, 1,589,009—Fremont, 1,194,605 and Fillmore, 783,460. The full vote of Texas, Arkansas, and California is still to come in. Four Free States went for Buchanan, Illinois—Buchanan, 105,344; Fremont, 96,180; Fillmore, 37,451; Indiana—Buchanan, 83,732; Freemont 55,644; Fillmore, 19,817; New Jersey Buchanan, 47,412: Fremont, 23,569; Fillmore, 24,091; Pennsylvania—Buchanan 230,500; Fremont, 147,548; Fillmore 82,220. The total vote thus far is 3,567,074. The total vote in 1852 was 3,162,800

The New York Tribune, says in relation to the Cabinet which Mr. Buchanan is likely to form:

"One of our Washington correspondents, who is apt to see as far into a milestone as the next man, telegraphs that Mr. Buchanan's Cabinet, though not definitely selected, will be composed substantially as follows:—

Sec'y of State.	Lewis Cobb, Michigan.
do of Treasury.	Howell Cobb, Georgia.
do of Interior.	Jesse D. Bright, Indiana
do of War.	C. J. Faulkner, Virginia
do of Navy.	Wm. Preston Kentucky
Postmaster Gen'al	Cave Johnson, Tennessee
Attorney-Gen'al.	Isaac Toucey, Con'ticut

"There is one thing to be said in favor of this cast—there is not a fire-eating Disunionist in it. Four of the seven members are taken from the Slave States, but they all belong to the "Union" as opposed to the South Carolina school. Two of them (Faulkner and Preston) were Whigs nearly as long as there was any Whig party to hold on to. Cobb and Bright were the two master-spirits in this Cabinet. Gen Cass, always indolent, is now too old for a Cabinet post, but the State Department is not a post of excessive labour. Cave Johnson is probably the least fit man ever thought of for Postmaster-General. On the whole this would be a fair average Cabinet, with fewer ciphers than are found in the present."

We notice by the Canada Gazette that the following post-offices have been discontinued:—Comber, County of Essex, 30th September, 1856; Wicklow, County of Northumberland, N. R., 31st October, 1856 Moravia, County of Kent, was closed on the opening of the Bothwell P. O.

The Leader says that there will not be a dissolution of Parliament, as has been confidently asserted by many journals in the opposition, and declares that all the stories in circulation in regard to this subject, are inventions pure and simple.

We have received the Work entitled, "Canada at the Universal Exhibition of 1856," neatly bound; containing a world of information in regard to the resources of the Province, as well as an excellent description of the Exhibition. A full list of articles sent from Canada is given. In giving a brief sketch of the efforts of this Province, it says that, from the list mentioned, it appears that Canada has carried off 93 prizes, among which we find one Grand Medal of Honor, one Medal of Honor, thirteen silver (first class) Medals, thirty bronze (second class) and forty-eight honorable mentions. To enable the reader to judge of the aggregate, as well as the comparative amount of success obtained in the several exhibitions in which Canada has entered the lists as a competitor, as marked by the number of prizes received, we here show the total numbers of such prizes awarded at the Exhibitions of London, New York and Paris. At London 67; New York 63; at Paris 95.

The work is published by order of the Legislative Assembly, and circulated by the office of Routine.

We have been favoured by Mr. John Lovel, with a pamphlet entitled. "Montreal in 1856," being a sketch prepared for the celebration of the opening of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, and from the hasty manner in which we have been obliged to glance over it, believe it to contain a very interesting description of the ancient city of Montreal. Mr. Lovel intends publishing a work upon the above subject, with a large map of Montreal. Price five shillings, neatly bound.

TORONTO Dec. 6.

There was only a moderate attendance of farmers on the market to-day, and business was limited. The demand for all kinds of produce is active, and full prices continue to be realized.

Wheat came in rather more freely, but moved off the market very slowly at yester day's quotations. The demand is better, at the reduction, purchases to a considerable extent being made for local millings—also for storage for spring shipment. The export enquiry appears to have altogether ceased. The ruling figures to-day were from 5s 3d @ 5s 10d. The average price for the day might be set down at 5s 9 per bushel.

Flour is tending downward, and, as an instance, we make mention of 250 brls inspected Fancy at 27s 6d; Superfine, except for local consumption, is almost unsaleable.

Oats are scarce and held firmly at 3s on the wharf. Farmers hold them at 2s 2d per bushel. Substitutes, such as corn, carrots &c., are coming into more general use.

Peas are in active request at 4s @ 4s 2d. As high as 4s 4½d has been paid for a large lot of marrowfats.

Potatoes are in rather better supply, and by the bushel sell at 4s 6d. They are retailed at 5s by the farmers.

Apples are held at $3 @ $3½ per brl, and 3s 6 @ 4s 6 per bushel, and in fair demand.

Butter is cheaper, fresh selling at 1s 4d @ 1s 5d. Tub (No. 1) by the firkin, sells at 1s @ 1s 1½ per lb.

Eggs held at 1s 4d and 1s 6d per dozen.

Poultry is not so plentiful and prices are better. For chickens 2s and 2s 3d was paid. Turkeys 3s 9d and 5s, Geese 2s 9d and 3s 3d each.

Pork—The demand forpork is active, and for good dressed hogs $7 per 100 lbs is freely paid inferior brings $6d.

Beef—Common Canadian sells a $5½ @ $6½. Prime American $8 @ $10 pes 100 lbs. Two droves of 150, from Kentucky, are daily expected.

Sheep $5 @ 6s each, and in better supply. Sheepskins 4s @ 5s each. Wool 2s 3d @ 1s 4d per lb.

Detroit Dec. 8, 1856.

Flour In good demand at full prices. We have to report sales 100 bbls at $5 50, and 200 bbls, made from red wheat, at $5 00.

Wheat—comes forward very sparingly by teams. About 150 bu have been bought at $1 25.

Corn—Better, and in brisk demand for the trade. Sales 750 bu, in bags, at 54c.

Oats—Not much doing in oats. National at 45c.

Dressed Hogs—We hear of a sale of 15, averaging a trifle over 200 lbs at $5 75 per 100.

Horse Thieves Caught.

Two horse fanciers, Thos. Bissell, (the son of a man residing near the Ten Mile Creek,) and Frederick Robinson, are now in limbo here for abstracting a couple of horses from the premises of two Germans near Tonawanda, in the State of New York. On Friday night last a fine bay mare was stolen from Mr. Jacob Kohler, and a gray horse from a brother-in-law of his, but the latter horse, being rather old and decrepid, the thieves decided to swap for a fine sorel horse belonging to another brother-in-law of Mr. Kohler's named Louis Zeiger, taking a new bridle and some other articles of "horse furniture" to boot. The thieves then went to Cayuga Creek, thence to the Niagara River, crossing the suspension Bridge to Queenston, and put up at Mr. Bryce's Inn, where they left the sorel in pawn for their night's lodging, $1. They then proceeded to Chippewa, and here the bay was disposed of, returning again to Bryce's paid their bill, and started for Dunville, with the sorrel where he was sold. Mr. Durham met them at Chippewa, and from the low price which they asked for the horse they wished to sell, he suspected all was not right and followed them to Bryce's and to Dunville, and then came to this town, as he supposed the horses if stolen, had been taken from the neighbor hood of Ten Mile Creek. The two Germans, who had traced the thieves to this town, arrived on Wednesday, about the same time as Mr. Durham, and had bills printed, describing the stolen property, and were in the act of putting one up in May's Hotel, when Mr. Durham, who was in the house at the time, said he thought he knew the guilty parties. Mr. May at once volunteered to go in search of the culprits, and started in company with Mr. Durham in pursuit, found Bissel and Robinson near Bail's Mills, on the St. Catherines & Pelham Road, and arrested them. They were brought before Mayor Adams and J. F. Mittleberger, and the horses having been identified by Messrs Kohler and Zeiger (the latter cannot speak English) were restored, and are now confined in the lock up awaiting a requisition for their extradition from the Governor of New York.—St. Catharine's Post.

IMPORTANT SUITS.—Two suits are now pending in the U. S. Court before Judge Wilkins, that involve questions of the highest importance to owners of water lots in the river, and the owners or lessees of wharves. They are brought in the shape of a libel for wharfage against the Ferry boat Asa R. Swift owned in this city, and the schooner Empire State owned in Oswego. The facts are simply that Dr. Russell leased the dock at the foot of Woodward avenue, of the city, for the use of his ferry boats, running between this city and Windsor, and owns the dock just above the foot of that street and below the Custom House. The Schooner came to the Woodward Avenue dock and lay there two days discharging and receiving cargo the ferry meanwhile being compelled to land just above or below. Wharfage is demanded and refused: 1st because the wharf in question is declared to be public being the front of a street being publicly laid out: 2nd that the law of constant use makes the wharf a public street, 3rd that no owner of water lots has the right to build wharves in the navigible waters of Detroit River and charge for use. The wharves in question it is admitted are built out into the navigible bank, and in what are known as "navigable waters."

It is contended that their owners own the lots to the centre of the river subject to such regulations as shall prevent them from becoming obstacles to the free navigation of the river.

The suit against the ferry boat is for wharfage on the dock above the foot of the avenue which the plaintiff owns This is resisted on the ground that under the ordinance of 1767, and also by the Ashburton treaty, the public have not only the right to navigate the river, but to land and that docks are free to the public who wish to use them.

It may be some days yet before the questions will reach an issue but when they do we will advise our readers duly.—Tribune.

MOVEMENT IN THE FLEET AT PORTSMOUTH —The gun boat Actilla at Portsmouth, lately ordered to be laid up, is now to be fitted out again on special service, with all dispatch. It is also reported that a Channel squadron is to be organised forthwith. The new screw line of battle ship Victor Emmanuel, 91, is ordered to be commissioned immediately.

Prospect of Dear Sugar---The Crop Failing in Louisiana.

The Plaquemine [La] Sentinel says:

The sugar making season will be of short duration in this parish the present year. A friend who has taken some little trouble to inquire into the state of the sugar crop in a district embraced within four miles above Plaquemine, and eight miles below it, (including the bayous Plaquemine and Jacob,) says that in this portion of the parish there are eight plantations that will make no sugar at all, three that will make "a little," and ten that will make forty or fifty hogsheads, and two that will make about one hundred and fifty. These are mainly large planters. Our friend however, does not enumerate all the planters in this section. We feel assured, nevertheless, that this statement will give a pretty correct idea of sugar making or the sugar crop in the Iberville for the year 1856.

The West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter says: —

One of the heaviest frosts we have ever seen fell on Saturday night last. Our planters are stirring themselves to get their cane under ground. We notice that several in the upper part of the parish had commenced grinding. Some three months ago it was calculated that 2,500 hogsheads would be made, but we will be content if our parish yields $1,500. Seed cane whenever it can be found, sells readily for $270 per acre, and none but we have seen sold at that price would not, if ground, make a hogshead to the acre.

REPORTS OF NEGRO INSURRECTION.—ONE WHITE MAN SHOT AND ANOTHER HANGED.—Much excitement exists in time rumors, of intended risings of slaves in Texas, Tennessee and Arkansas. The New Orleans Bulletin of Nov. 18th, contains the following paragraph in regard to the insurrection plots in Arkansas and Louisiana:

The papers in the Northern portion of the State have the frequent statements of late, in regard to insurrectionary rumours, and insurrectionary plots, both in that part of the State, and over the line in Arkansas. A few weeks ago a man named Hancock was arrested in Union county Arkansas, on suspicion of being engaged in trying to incite the slaves to insurrection. He made some confessions, and managed finally to escape, but was re-arrested, and taken to ElDorado, tried and shot, not, however by regular process. He was not found guilty in his trial, but subsequently he said he knew all about it but would not tell. This so exasperated the people, as we learn from the Chicot Press [La] Advocate they seized him, and being then convicted of his guilt, shot him in the woods. A man by the name of Martin, was tried in ElDorado on a similar charge, convicted and hanged. There was to be a general concentration of about 3000 negroes at a given point, and on Hancock and several others. The town of ElDorado was to be attacked, its inhabitants murdered, and money and provisions obtained by force.

The excitement extended down into Louisiana, and several planters have been examining their premises, but they have discovered, as yet nothing to implicate any one. It is to be hoped the matter will rest where it is. In all such circumstances excitement is apt to be carried too far, and innocent persons, in consequence, are liable to be punished for the guilty. We depreciate all hasty and illegal judicial proceedings, where it is possible to avoid them.

President's Message.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2nd.

The President, in allusion to the recent election, says that the result has emphatatically condemned the idea of organising mere geographical parties; and he considers that such an organization could have had countenance in no part of the country had its aims not been disguised by suggestions plausible in appearance, acting upon an excited state of the public mind induced by temporary causes and transient. He hopes in their influence after some bitter invectives against those who, under the guise of preventing the extension of slavery, seek to interfere with the institution where it exists under State Law.

He comes to the territorial question in relation particularly to Kansas and Nebraska; and argues at length upon the policy, and defends the repeal of the Missouri compromise. He charges that the revolution disorder in Kansas had its origin in projects of intervention deliberately arranged by members of that Congress, which enacted the laws for the organization of the territory. He condemns the incursions both from the North and South, which have been made into the territory, and the exaggeration and inflammatory reports which have been circulated; refers to the efforts which have been made to correct abuses, and rejoices at the peaceful condition of things which now prevail. He then proceeds to review the course of events in Kansas generally, and to defend the action taken by the Government in the premises; concluding with the hope that reflection and wise legislation, either in the Assembly of the territory or Congress, and that the latter will see that no Act remains on its Statute Book violative of the provisions of the Constitution or calculated to interfere with the due exercise of the privileges of citizens.

After referring to the several reports of the Cabinet officers, the President refers to our foreign relations. The various questions at issue between the United States and England are in a fair way of being amicably adjusted, and there is reason to believe that when the question of the Sound Dues is finally adjusted between Denmark and the maratime powers of Europe, the pending negotiation on the same subject with the United States will be settled in a satisfactory manner. The subject of the maratime propositions are dwelt on at some length. The proposed amendment offered by our Government has been favourably entertained by all the Governments who have replied to it, and the present aspect of the question leads the President to hope that the American principle will eventually be incorporated into the Code of International Law.

Our affairs with Mexico and Central America are briefly alluded to. With regard to Nicaragua the President says, that being unable to decide which of the two contending parties in that State is the Government de facto, he has refused to receive a Representative from either, and is now awaiting further developements.

In reference to the Panama massacre the President says he has demanded the punishment of the guilty parties, with full indemnity to the families of those who were killed in the affair, as well as for the property destroyed.

In conclusion the President expresses his congratulations in view of the peace, greatness, and facilities, which our country now possesses and enjoys, and says he is preparing to surrender the Executive trust to his successor, and retire to private life, with sentiments of profound gratitude to providence, which has during his administration vouchsafed to carry the country through so many difficulties.

Arrival of the Atlantic.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6th, 1856.

The Steamship Atlantic arrived at her wharf about 12 o'clock—brings Liverpool dates of November 26th.

The Steamer Asia arrived at Liverpool at 6 P. M. on the 22nd. Her advices from N. Y. had no perceptible effect upon the Liverpool market, which continued to the sailing of the Atlantic, extremely quiet.

The London market was slightly easier.

The bullion in the Bank of England continued to increase.

Consols for money were quoted at 94¾ a 96¼ and for acct. at 94¼ a 94⅝; closing steady.

The affairs of the Bank of France and the continental markets were generally unchanged.

The various Liverpool Circulars quote the markets generally as very quiet, but without any material change in prices.

Mr James Wilson had addressed to Cyrus W. Field of New York, an official notification that the British Government engages to furnish ships to take additional soundings in the Atlantic Telegraph, and to verify those a ready made to furnish ships tossist in laying the cable, and undertakes to guarantee four per cent on the capital of £350,000 equal to £14,000 sterling until the company's earnings reach 6 per cent. After which the guarantee will be ten thousand per annum for 25 years, or such larger sums as the Government messages may amount to if charged at the ordinary rates of Tariff, and the United States Government made a similar arrangement. The messages of the two Governments are to be sent in the order of priority of receipt.

The Kilkenny Moderater, under the heading of "A Military Mystery," announces that orders have been issued to the Colonels of Militia regiments in Ireland to complete the quota of their respective corps The Moderator remarks that the objects of this filling up the regiments will be ten thousand men for the Government.

Affairs in Spain were quiet and unchanged, and the news from other parts of the Continent was wholly devoid of interest.

By account of the 14th from Constantinople, it appears that 600 wooden houses had been destroyed by fire at Perot. Another extensive fire had broken out at Adrianople. A catastrophe at Rhodes occurred by the lightning having struck the immense store of gunpowder destroying the whole Turkish Quarter completely, and many lives were lost. The Journal de Constantinople says that the Russian company in the Black Sea has purchased 40 steam vessels.

The news is confirmed that the Yenekalo affair has been fully explained between the English and Russia Representatives at Constantinople, and that no English ships were ordered into the Black Sea in consequence of it.

According to the intelligence from Glatz, on the 4th, the European Commission on the Danube was officially constituted, on that day, under the provisional Presidency of M. Bertier, the Russian Commissioner.

In confirming the official accounts from Spain it was stated that Malaga was perfectly quiet, but vigorous measures of punishments had been resorted to, notwithstanding the previous accounts that the affair had no public object, but was merely got up for smuggling purposes.

The Gazette states that it took place at the moment at which the Garrison was being changed and it admits that the insurgents cried Vive La Republique. The Espana say that the number of soldiers wounded was 8 and that the insurgents had from 15 to 20 wounded and three killed. Accounts from Athens to the 16th announce that the elections have turned in favor of the ministry and that the allied troops would leave Greece soon after the return of King Otho.

Special Notices.

To Ladies.

Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are especially efficacious in all the variety of ailments incidental to the fair sex. They mildly and speedily remove all Skin Eruptions, Sallowness of Complexion, Nervous Irritability, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Depression of Spirits, Irregularity, or General Derangement of the System, and by assisting the Secretions, give such a healthy action to the Organs as to give the color of the Rose to the complexion, and tone and vigor to the whole frame. Delicate females, of all the most delicate constitutions will find them particularly beneficial both before and after confinement, and for the general use they cannot be too highly recommended. They possess the eminent advantage over all other apperient medicines, that while they operate gently and without pain, they produce neither debility, costiveness, nor irritation, which is so apt to produce or aggravate the Piles.

No medicine ever introduced to the public has become so universally popular with Ladies as Sir Astley Cooper's Pills. They are of most astonishing efficacy, and they are confidently recommended to the fair for general use. A trial of a box of the Pills will at once prove the truth of this assertion.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—It frequently occurs that Druggists impose on their customers a spurious compound called Sir Astley Cooper's Pills generally put up in a red or pink wrapper and labelled prepared, or, as prepared at Apothecaries Hall, London, when the fact is, they are prepared by themselves.—Beware of such barefaced attempts to impose. The Genuine Pills have the likeness of Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box; also the fac-simile of the signature of the Proprietors, McPhail & Co. London and New York, on the directions.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For Sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, Wholesale Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

THE NEW ILLUSTRATED
Hydropathic Encyclopedia,
A COMPLETE SYSTEM OF
HYDROPATHY & HYGIENE,
IN ONE LARGE VOLUME.

EMBRACING Outlines of Anatomy, Illustrated; Physiology of the Human Body; Hygienic Agencies and the Preservation of Health; Dieties and Hydropathic Cookery; Theory and Practice of Water Treatment; Special Pathology and Hydro-Therapeutics, including the Nature, Causes, Symptoms and Treatment of all known diseases; Application to Surgical Diseases; Application of Hydropathy to Midwifery and the Nursery; with three hundred engravings and nearly One Thousand Pages, including a Glossary, Table of Contents, and a complete Index. By R. T. TRALL, M. D.

Published by FOWLER and WELLS, New York.

In the plan of the work, the wants and necessities of the People have been steadily in view. While almost every topic of interest in the departments of Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Hygiene, Therapeutics is breifly presented, those of practical utility are always put prominently forward. The prevailing errors, conceits, and whims of the day are also exposed and refuted; the theories and hypothesis upon which the popular drug practice is predicated are controverted, and the why and the wherefore of their fallacy clearly demonstrated. The following is a brief analysis of its contents:

History of Medicine; History of Bathing; History of Medicated Baths.

Anatomy illustrated by One Hundred and Twenty appropriate engravings.

Physiology, illustrated, comprising the Rationale of Muscular Action; the Nervous Influence; Philosophy of Mind; Mesmeric Phenomena; the Special Senses; Functions of Digestion, Circulation, Respiration, Absorption, Nutrition, Secretion, Excretion; Calorification, Temperaments, the Races of Man, and Theory of Population.

Hygiene embracing all the relations of Air, Light, Drink, Food, Temperature, Exercise, Sleep, Clothing, Bathing, and the Passions, to the growth and developement of Body and Mind, the Preservation of Health and the attainment of Longevity.

Dietetics, comprising the Bible, Anatomical, Physiological, Chemical and Experimental Evidence concerning the natural Dietetic Character of Man.

Hydropathic Cookery, with Special Directions for the Preparation of Food

Dietaries, containing the Therapeutic Dietaries of Diet for Invalids.

Philosophy of Water-Cure, with illustrated explanations of all the water-cure applinces, a Philosophical Exposition of the modus operandi of water-treatment, and the true rationale of drug-treatment.

The Nature Symptoms and Treatment of all known Diseases are examined, the ill use of drug practice exposed, and the proper Medication recommended and specified.

The Treatment of surgical Diseases illustrated and the directions for the minor operations given.

The Management of Lying-in-Women, and the treatment of Children &c.

The work is intended to be plain, intelligible and sufficient guide for domestic practice, or home treatment, in all ordinary diseases, embracing the whole range of subjects connected with the philosophy of life, the preservation of health, and the treatment of diseases.

This great work may be had in one large volume, bound in library style. Price prepaid by mail to any Post Office in United States or Canada, only THREE DOLLARS.

TILES, TILES,

THE Public are respectfully informed that M. & J. H. WHITEHOUSE are Manufacturing and have on hand a large quantity of Tiles, for Draining Cellars, Farms, &c., at their Brick Yard, Westminster, two miles from London, and a quarter of a mile from Mr. J. Nellis's Tavern, at First Toll Gate on the Hamilton Road, which they will sell at the low Price of £4 per 1000 with Soles or Bottoms, without £2 15s. They will be found to be much cheaper than any other Material for Draining, as they facilitate their Brick Yard, Westminster, two miles greatly in the labor, also in the expense of Draining, only requiring a Drain the width of the Spade and when put down will never require renewing. Samples may be seen and orders received at the Store of Mr. J. Fitzell, corner of Richmond and Dundas Streets, London.

Also Roofing Tiles and Press Bricks for fronting Buildings of a superior quality.

FOR SALE OR TO RENT.

THE ROSE DALE MILL, situated on Turkey Creek, Township of Sandwich. The machinery (which is new), is constructed to run with water or steam. There is generally sufficient water to run the Mill four months in the year. There are two run of stones, two Bolts and a new patent Smutter, all in the very best of running order. Also about 20 acres of good land attached to the Mill.

—or,—

The whole Mill can be purchased and carried away.

STRAYED

CAME into my possession, about last March a Sorrel Colt, about two years old, with two white feet and a small spot in the forehead. The owner is requested to prove property and pay expenses, or it will be sold to defray the same.

JOHN HERDMAN.

The Foot Rot.

A. A. Dickinson, of Steuben County. N. Y., delivered an address some two years ago, before the Cortland county Society, in which among other things, he spoke of his mode of curing the foot rot in sheep, and in the feet of cattle. He says:

"I have had some time experience for twenty-five years with what I once considered as one of the most injurious diseases to cattle, and more especially to sheep. I now regard it as of little or no consequence, and I will trouble you with one of twenty-five years operations, and, to that end, will take the year in which the disease was most malignant, which was in 1850. I purchased in that year 30,000 sheep, and had not less than 1,000 head of cattle upon my farm. During the pasturing season, more than one half of my sheep were affected with the rot, and because they were thus diseased, I purchased so largely. Men came all the way from Ohio to sell me their sheep, expressly on this account. My remedy is simple and plain, and my cure equally sure. I make a three cornered field, and at the pointed corner I make a lane, and in this lane, or neck of the field, I set a trough, twelve feet long, twelve inches deep, of the same width, in which I fastened some scantling, substantially flaring out, then covered the scantling with boards, so that only one sheep or steer can go through at a time. In the trough I place fifty or one hundred pounds of blue vitriol, fill, and keep in, as full of water as it should be, covering the liquid over with straw, and set the sheep, or cattle, marching through. By leading a tame ox the rest will follow. A good sheep herd dog will start the sheep through, and one man, with a well trained dog, can drive 10,000 in a day. This vitriol will kill the disease. It will make and replace hoofs that have rotted off. With cattle it is not so malignant as with sheep, but either may be cured without stopping their growth, if taken in time. If it has been of long standing, feed sulphur freely in your salt."

OIL OF AMBARD IN RHEUMATISM.—Where one third of the male population complain to some extent of rheumatic pains, in the fickle climate of New-England, but more especially along the seashore, physicians have it in their power to mitigate an immense amount of severe suffering by prescribing the volatile oil of mustard. It is simply, and to rube feelers, a burning first drink with a few weight of al ohol at forty degrees. Some patients may object to its pungent odor, but that is temporary, while the remedy may in some cases prove a permanent cure. Make the application at least twice a day, and protect the part with soft flannel. Mustard mills are in operation in the cities generally, at which the oil may be procured, it being an article not much in demand in the arts. Were it not for detecting it by a pungent odor, this oil would have become a secret remedy for rheumatic pains years ago. A nostrum loses its miraculous efficiency and curative properties on becoming known. [Medical World.

PRESERVING PLANTS IN WINTER.—Nothing has more discouraged the cultivator of flowers, than the supposed difficulty of preserving them in winter; but as experience is acquired, this obstacle disappears. Many plants may be summarily dealt with. Cuttases and scarlet geraniums will do well in any dry cellar without water. More plants die in winter from the effects of damp than by frost and they should be watered sparingly, just enough to keep them from flagging. The best method of wintering them is in frames, well surrounder, with dung, and covered with a thick mat or carpet, giving plenty of air when the weather is not frosty. When plants are found frozen in windows, &c. let them thaw in a cellar, and they will often sustain no injury. In this way may be preserved Pelargoniums, Calceolarias, Verbenas, Hydrangeas, &c., and they will come out fine and fresh after a long winter.

Fruit in Cellars.

A great deal of winter fruit suffers early decay in consequence of a deficiency of ventilation, especia ly during autumn and after the fruit is deposited. Another cause of decay, is the improper location of the cellar or bins in which are placed against or around the walls. By this incovenient arrangement, the assorting of decayed specimens must be done all from one side, and the shelves hence must be very narrow, or the operator must stretch himself in a most irksome horizontal position. The circulation of the air is at the same time, greatly impaded by the want of space next the walls. To avoid these evils the shelves should be in the centre with a passage all round. This allows circulation of air, and the shelves may be twice the width, with the same conveniences in assorting or picking. If suspended from the joists with wire on rod bars, rats cannot reach them. We have never succeeded so well by any other than this arrangement. It is said that the Germans are very successful in the ventilation of their cellars, by communication with the principal chimney, the heated air in which necessarily maintains a current, which sweeps out the noxious and stagnant gases from the vegatable and other contents.

EFFECTS OF TEA.—Dr. John Burdell, a distinguished dentist of New York, boiled down a pound of young hyson tea, from a quart to half a pint, and ten drops killed a rabbit ten months old; and when boiled down to a gill, eight drops killed a cat of the same age in a few minutes! Think of it. Most persons who drink tea, use not less than a pound in three months; and yet a pound of hyson tea contains enough poison to kill, according to the above experiment, more than seventeen thousand rabbits; or nearly two hundred a day; and if boiled down to a gill, it contains poison enough to kill 10,860 cats in the same space of time! Dr Burdell made similar trials with coffee and black tea, and found the results nearly the same.—Sunderlan's Book of Health.

A SCHOOL FOR MANNERS.—As George III was walking the quarter-deck of one of his men of war, with his hat on, a sailor asked his mess-mate who that fellow was who did not 'douse his peak (take off his hat) to the admiral.' 'Why it's the King.' 'Well, king or no king,' retorted the other, 'he's an unmannerly dog!' La-w d love ye!' growled Jack, 'Where should he larn manners? He was never out of sight of land in his life.'

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,
TORONTO, 25th July, 1856

To Emigrants & Others Seeking LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through, and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD.

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Ferral's," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew, and is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," (leading to the Lake Muskako, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 58 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, of 171 miles from the Ottawa to Lake Muskako, 171 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable lands.)

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is Mr. T. P. Gordon, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To enable the intending Settler under the French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Angleses, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 35 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships on the very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence North to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Lands on these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road through the large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agents resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboats up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement be duly performed; after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to free grants, residing on a single lot, will be exempted from the obligation of building and of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live provided that the required number of the lands be made on other lots. The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

A SCHOOL HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as can be put up in four days by five men, The neighbours generally help to build the Log cabin for each newly arrived Settler, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the erection is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed, and then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, are in sections of Canada West, capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land —some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best that there is any for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care and covered from wet—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £6 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settlers at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of his time to clearing his land, and for the numerous lumbering establishments he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labor.

The settlers throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to obstruct communication; and it affords material for good roads during the winter, enabling the settler to get to land in the Fall of the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the earth, not only facilitates communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fortilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber and Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the more lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from the Ottawa River, almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 35 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships on the very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, thence North to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Lands on these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboats up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

The Illustrated Horticulturist,
AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture renders such a Journal as the Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful arrangement of Flower Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

The Nurseryman, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" is proved to be a publication of interest. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly for it, and issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, have made the conduct the Editorial department: H. P. KNIGHT, JAMES SNOWDEN and D. W. RAY.

TERMS: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need any eulogium from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages, making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Implements, Portraits of Animals, Designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The active promoter of the various improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS
Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of a practical kind.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - - 5
Passed on to some hour of exercise.
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.
THE COLLEGIATE COURSE, which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and now occupies the ground as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar institution in the United States.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.
THE METHOD OF TEACHING
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as exhibited in affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, time and place. By this natural and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false science and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.
THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, and by studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on its investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.
THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.
THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend a longer time than required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By following diligently the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.
PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.
Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System, also will be taught. This System, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other Colleges are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commercial Correspondence, Railroading, &c., &c., Business Correspondence, Penmanship etc.
The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

"Run out Your Tongue, and Shut Your Eyes."

BY JOHN THORNBERRY.

Old Dr. Jennings was a man
"Twould do your soul good once to meet
So full was he of tenderness,
And yet of every odd conceit.
He had a way he called his own,
Which suited patients, rich and poor;
For this no better was than that,
And all alike went through his door.

Among the host of sickly ones,
Eat up of spleen and sluggish bile,
That sought his aid from day to day,
Was no old lady, Mrs. Guile.
In truth, she was as well as he,
Or you, good reader, if not sick;
But she was rich, and that was way
Her ailments kept collecting thick.

The doctor could not go abroad,
No matter where, or how, or when,
But he was haunted with her face,
The wretchedest of wretched men.
He knew that hypo was the cause,—
He knew her illness was all made;
And he resolved at last to try
And put an end to such a trade

One day she met him on the street,
On every side with people jammed;
She stopped, of course; she always stopp'd,
She coughed, and coughed; and he—
he "hem'd."
"O, Dr. Jennings sir" said she,
"I feel so bad to-day, right here!"
And put her hands across her chest,
And poured her troubles in his ear.

"Let's see!" the doctor gruffly spake;
"Run out your tongue, and shut your eyes!"
She did as she was bid; and he Passed on to some new enterprise.
For full three minutes thus she stood,
Exposed to everybody's jeers,
And woke at last to find herself
A fool among her lady peers!

She called upon him for his bill,
And never took another pill.

A Man Biting off his own Nose.

We don't know whether the following story has ever appeared in print or not, but we give it at all events, as it was related to us the other evening by a person who was present at the time, promising that the main facts are literally true.

Next morning Pat was arrested on a charge of having wantonly and without provocation bit off the nose of Brother Jonathan, and brought before a Dutch Judge named Sloats. The offence was a States prison affair, and, of course, Pat was in a great sweat to clear himself of the crime laid to his charge, and applied to a pettifogger to defend him. Pat was instructed to plead "not guilty" and to maintain that the yankee had bitten his own nose off. After a variety of minor cases had been disposed of, Patrick O'Grady was placed at the bar, and the yankee was called upon to state his version of the affair, which he did clearly, showing that Pat was the identical individual who had taken off the nose, other parties testified to the same fact.

The Judge then said, "Mynheer O'Gradys, vat you bite dish man's nosh off for. I shall send you to Sthates prison for ash long ash never wash."

"Arrah, yer honor, be aisy, sure Misther Connor did the dade himself," and Pat here related how the feat was accomplished, telling a very plain and apparently straightforward story.

The judge, however, would not believe him, and exclaimed in a passion: "Donder and blitzen, how ter tyvels you tink a man bite off nish own nosh? Ishall send you to Sthates prison twice ash long ash never wash for one sum lie."

This brought Pat's lawyer to his feet, who knew that the judge was a member of the Dutch Presbyterian Church, and questioned him after the following fashion:

Squire Sloats, I believe you're a Presbyterian, are you not?

"Yaw, I ish a Bresbeterian."

"You believe that the doctrine of foreordination is true, and that all things are possible with God, don't you?"

"Yaw, I dosh believe in te doctrines of foreordinos, and dat all tings are possible mit God."

"Well, then, if you believe all things are possible with God, don't you think it quite possible that God might have caused this man to bite off his own nose."

"Yaw, I dosh believe dat!"

"Well, then, I maintain that God did cause this man to bite off his own nose, and I defy any person to prove the contrary; and therefore call upon you to liberate the prisoner at once."

"Py Got, you ish right. Dey can't proves dat God did not make him bite off his own nosh, therefore, Pat O'Grady's, you ish free, and you tam Yankees don't you comes before me again mit a lie in your mouths, or I will sends you to Sthates prison."

Pat kick'd up his heels, and disappeared to have a "dhrap wid the boys," while the yankee skunked off in the best way he could by the back door.

(From Harper's, Monthly.

"SAMMIVEL, bevare of the viddlers," was very good advice, but who takes advice to keep out of the way of a bewitching woman. It is an impeachment of one's own good sense to suppose that he can not take care of himself when only a woman is in the case. Yet so honest, simple, and unsuspecting was a young merchant in New Orleans, Mr. Thomas P. Dobson, formerly of Stonville, Connecticut, that he never once mistrusted that the Widow Ivason had any designs on his person. Indeed, the widow had not for herself, but being the lone mother of a lone and lovely daughter, she thought it not unmeet that young Mr. Dobson, a thriving tradesman, should often see the daughter of her home and hearth and then. how could he help but love, and woo, and win her!—Dobson was her frequently invited guest; to church and opera Dobson often was asked to go with the widow and her daughter, but the widow was subject to sudden headaches, and the youthful pair were obliged to go without her maternal company and care. The widow kept an account at Mr. Dobson's store, and in fine weather Miss Emily was sent again and again to purchase some indispensable nothing, that nobody could select but herself. The widow thought she had him sure. Other people thought so, too. While the widow was looking for him daily to call and ask for the hand of her daughter, he was looking for the widow to call and settle her bill. So matters stood when the young merchant called at the widow's one morning, and was kindly received by the young lady. After a little pleasant chat, he said he wished to see her mother, and presently the widow appeared, as pleasant as the morning of spring.

Mr Dobson began, without any hesitation; "Mrs Ivison, as I am going to the North for goods, to be gone a few weeks, I called to see you in relation to our matters."

"You are perfectly right, Sir; I admire your frankness. Have you spoken to my daughter, Mr. Dobson?"

"Why no, Madam, I have not indeed; as she is a minor, I presumed that the business was all in your hands."

"Oh no, Sir, not at all. It is all as she says. I leave it entirely to her."

"Well, then," said Dobson, raising and putting his hand to his breast-pocket, "I have your account to-day!"

"Bill! bill, Sir!" screamed the widow, forgetting herself in her disappointment and vexation. "What do you mean by a bill, Sir?"

"Only a little bill of $50 50 for things that Miss Emily has had at the store, Madam. Why are you surprised?"

"Because, Sir—because I thought it had been paid;" and showing the astonished young gentleman out, she promised to send a servant with the money in the course of the day.

During the day Pat was arrested on a charge of having wantonly and without provocation bit off the nose of Brother Jonathan, and brought before a Dutch Judge named Sloats. The offence was a States prison affair, and, of course, Pat was in a great sweat to clear himself of the crime laid to his charge, and applied to a pettifogger to defend him. Pat kick'd up his heels, and disappeared to have a "dhrap wid the boys," while the yankee skunked off in the best way he could by the back door.

"Oh, Mr. Turney," said the Judge, "Mr. Green understands the whole matter; he knows he has got to be hung. You understand it, Mr. Green, don't you?"

"Certainly," said the prisoner.

"Mr. Sheriff, adjourn the Court."

Four weeks from that day Mr. Green was hung, but not so much to his own satisfaction as his appearance promised on the day of his conviction.

Four Great Men.

It is a remarkable fact that four of the most renowned men that ever lived closed with some violent or mournful death.

Alexander, after having climbed the dizzy heights of his ambition, and with his temples bound with chaplets dipped in the blood of countless nations, looked down upon a conquered world, and wept that there was not another for him to conquer, set fire to a city, and died in a scene of debauch.

Hannibal, after having, to the astonishment and consternation of Rome passed the Alps—after having put to flight the armies of the world, and stripped them of their shell of gold rings from the fingers of her slaughtered knights, and made her very foundation quake—fled from his country—being hated by those who once exultingly united his name with that of God, and called him Hannibal—died at last by poison, administered by his own hands, unlamented and unwept for in a foreign land.

Cæsar, after having conquered eight hundred cities, and dyed his hands in the blood of one million of foes; after having pursued to death the only rival he had on earth, was miserably assassinated by those he considered his nearest friends, and in that very place the attainment of which had been his greatest ambition.

Bonaparte, who made Kings and Emperors obeyed, after having filled the earth with tears and blood, and clothed the world with sackcloth, ended his days in lonely banishment, almost literally exiled from the world, but where he could sometimes see his country's banner waving over the deep, but which could not or would not bring him aid.

Thus four men, who, from the peculiar situation of their portraits, seemed to stand as representatives, of all these whom the world great—all those four whom, each in their turn, made the earth tremble to its very centre by their simple tread, severally died—one by intoxication, or, as some suppose, by poison mingled in his wine, one by suicide, one murdered by his friends, and one in lonely exile.

Captain Smith's Bear Story.

A correspondent of the Newark Daily Advertiser gives the following recipe for getting rid of one's neighbours' hogs:—About the year 1820, I settled at the Long Peach Tree, in Wilcox county Alabama, had a small potato patch, and a bit of garden, as was usual in those days. My nearest neighbour John Champion, being better off than the rest of us, had a nice gang of hogs, and finding a rich field in the corn and potatoes belonging to his neighbours on account of his wealth and owning an overbearing man, too, was not particular whether his stock broke into other people's fields or not. My stock was too small to feed my own family and John Champion's hogs too; so I complained to him several times, but could get no redress, when one day old Erasmus Culpepper's house one day, I heard him remark that if a fool, or an ear, or even a small piece of bearskin was thrown down in the place where hogs use, that they would never show snouts there again. I went home and cut the skin of a bear which I had killed some time before, and having supplied myself with some corn, I went out and saw about twenty fine year olds munching away in my field. I "tolled them up," and catching a good runner, sawed him up with the bear skin and then turned him loose; when he ran after the rest, and they flew from the supposed bear. The last that was seen of them was at Bassett's Creek, near forty miles from my house, only two being alive; one running from his fellow served in the skin, and he trying to catch the other; the rest were found dead in the road, having literally run themselves to death.—It is needless to add that John Champion's hogs stayed at home after that.

SENSIBLE TO THE LAST.—A certain member of the society of "Friends" fitted out one of his ships from New Bedford on a short trading voyage, expecting a return in a few months; but the captain was absent over four years, neglecting to send accounts, remit no money, and, on the other hand, kept drawing on the merchant. After all hope was gone, he brought his ship into New Bedford in a shattered condition, and the "Friend" mildly remonstrated with him.—"Friend your gill early," interrupted the speaker; "she aint fit for nothing—she'll neither wear nor stay." "Friend," said the other, mildly, "for the wearing, thee seem to have worn her out thyself; and for the staying, I thought thee would never come back."

THE LANAUDIERE FAMILY.—Demoiselle de Lanaudiere, whose death in this city we announced on the 17th inst., was a younger daughter of the late Honorable Charles Francois Taillant, Sieur de Lanaudiere, Knight Grand Cross of the Royal and Military Order of St. Louis, and Conseiller du Roi au Conseil Legislatif de Quebec, anterior to the Conquest. The Sieur de Lanaudiere was one of the one hundred and twenty six French nobility in Canada at its cession, and accepted the alternative to take the oath of allegiance to the British Crown, and remain in the country of his birth. At the convocation of the first Parliament in 1792 he was appointed one of the Grand Voyer of Lower Canada. His ancestor, Xavier de Lanaudiere, was an officer of the Regiment of Carignan, which was the first which arrived in Canada, about 1652 or '53. The family, after the conquest, was distinguished for steady loyalty; one of its members, Xavier Lanaudiere, was a liberal subscriber to a fund raised in the British Provinces to assist carrying on the war with France in 1799; 1811 the same gentleman filled the office of Deputy Assistant Adjutant General of Militia.—Quebec Gazette.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—Quite a rich scene was witnessed yesterday, in our quiet little village, in the marriage way. It appears that Stephen Simmons and Miss Sally Evans called upon Squire Simmons for the purpose of getting "joined together in the holy bonds of wedlock." The ceremonies being performed, the parties retired to their place of abode. In the afternoon the bridegroom was waited upon by an officer and arrested for stealing the coat in which he was married. Truly the vicissitudes of life are wonderful.—N. Y. Herald.

THE TOOTH OF TIME.—When Nineveh has departed and Palmyra is in ruins when Imperial Rome has fallen, and the Pyramids themselves are sinking into decay—it is no wonder (sighs a French humorist) that my old coat should be getting seedy at the elbows!

Blankets were first made at Bristol, in England by a poor weaver, whose name was Thomas Blanket, and who gave his name to his peculiar manufacture of woolen cloth.

THE QUEEN'S RESIDENCE AT BALMORAL.—The furniture of the new Castle of Balmoral is of a very peculiar character; all the rooms are alike, that is, all the curtains, draperies, and coverings of the apartments are of one pattern, though differing in the costliness of the fabric. The design is a tartan, with a red and white check, and it is extraordinary how well this harmonises with the character of the building, its situation, and its associations. Another peculiarity is the absence of paint on any of the internal doors; without any exception, of all these the wood is perfectly au natural, though it is very highly polished; and thus the aspect of the old Scottish castle is maintained with every possible degree of modern comfort.—Court Journal.

A young widow was asked why she was going to get married so soon after the death of her first husband?" O, la!" she said, "I do it to prevent myself feeling to death on account of dear Tom."

At a recent examination in Trinity College Dublin, Henry Wm. Stewart, Esq., eldest son of the Rev. E. Stewart, of Guelph, Canada West, was awarded the first Gold Medal in Ethics and Logic. We are informed that this is a prize for which there is great competition. Our young Canadian student has therefore distinguished himself greatly.

NEW PRINTING TELEGRAPH.—The new printing Telegraph of Mr. Hughs was publicly exhibited at New York on Friday last, at the office of the American Telegraph Company. It worked both ways at the same time over one wire, with great rapidity, and in other respects fulfilled al that has been claimed for it.

IMPORTATION OF CENTIPEDES.—The employees of a leather dealer's establishment in Ferry street, were not a little alarmed, a few days since, at discovering three live centipedes in a bundle of Hides imported from Maracaibo. The longest one, of course, is by the parent of the others, was of a natural size, measuring over six inches. Being somewhat torpid they were speedily secured.

The article on these venomous insects in the December number of Harper's Magazine, accompanied by a reduced illustration of a gigantic one 12½ inches long, obtained by an enterprising naturalist during an exploration in the interior of Venezuela, has awakened much interest in the swamp neighborhood, where most of the imported hides were examined, and keeps those well awake whose duty it is to unpack them.—*N. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Thousands, who live by the sweat of their brow, in all sections rely upon this great remedy as the best protection against the disorders of the stomach, liver, bowels, so prevalent in this climate during the Spring and Fall. In the crowded city, and the frontier settlements, on the sea coast, and on the alluvial soil of the western rivers, they are equally indispensible; for wherever internal disease exist, either in an endemic or epidemic form, they are taken by the cautious as a preventative, and by the sick as a means of cure.

"Pray, neighbor Hodge, what are you fencing that pasture for? forty acres of it would starve a cow." "Right," replied Hodge, "I'm fencing it up to keep the cows out."

In England business is steadily increasing, and it is the general opinion that the financial crisis is passed. It is expected that the Bank will soon alter its rate to 4 per cent. The bullion in the Bank of England has increased upwards of £200,000.

The chief feature of the political news is the firm attitude assumed by Switzerland towards Prussia's demands on Neufchatel, which are refused unconditionally. Austria, Bavaria, and Baden support Prussia.

There is nothing new respecting the issues with Russia.

It is confidently asserted that the Peace Congress will re-assemble soon.

There is a rumour in Paris that Prince Albert and German influence is backing a proposal respecting Belgrade now before the British Government, and that they are so hampering the ministry that they cannot act.

The political news from France and Spain is unimportant.

LATEST.

A despatch from Berlin says Prussia would be willing to relinquish her rights in Neufchatel, provided the political prisoners are discharged; otherwise she will act decisively.

It is announced that a strong Russian corps is advancing through Bessarabia to the Black Sea, 7 English ships of war are expected at Constantinople from Malta.

Ireland.

THE LATE BARON DEBRUCK.—The body of this ill fated gentleman has at last been found, nearly decomposed. The deceased had his life insured to an extremely heavy amount. One of the agents of the eldest London office in Dublin reports the sum to be £100,000, but the more general belief is that half, or even less than half that amount would be nearer the truth. The coroner's inquest returned the verdict of "found Drowned" and expressed a firm belief that the unfortunate man met his death by pure accident.

THE LORD LIEUTENANT attended a meeting of the Senate of the Queen's University on Tuesday, in Dublin Castle, to witness the distribution of prizes to the successful competitors of the Cork, Belfast, and Galway Colleges. Lord Carlisle afterwards delivered an address intended to stimulate the pupils to increase exertion. It appears that the standard of acquirements is considered to have been placed too high, and that it deters youths from encountering the examinations. In stating this opinion, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, who is Vice-Chancellor of the University, said that if it were so it would be better to remodel the ordinances of the University.

A MEETING HAS BEEN HELD AT TIPPERARY of the creditors of the Tipperary Bank to consider the expediency of making a composition with the shareholders, lest the law should otherwise swallow up all their property and leave the depositors no dividend at all. The official manager was present.—Mr. Gibson, one of the solicitors engaged in the winding up, advised a compromise. Let 6s in the pound be accepted as the contribution in the shareholders; a dividend of 2s has already been paid; probably John Sadleir's property will yield 2s.—making 10s. in the pound. Eventually, two depositors were appointed as a committee for the Tipperary branch to act with the representatives of other branches if any are nominated.

THE IRISH LAND REVOLUTION.—The last returns of the operations of the Encumbered Estates Court have elicited the following remarks from the Tablet. It is not often that the able organ of Ultramontanism condescends to write common sense upon matters of a purely temporal nature:—"It is generally supposed that the work of the Encumbered Estates Court is now nearly completed; but this, we believe, is far from being the fact. No doubt the greater part of the worst cases of embarrassed estates have been disposed of, and several millions of acres of the country have been released from the cold obstruction ' of the Court of Chancery or relieved from the blighting influence of a ruined and reckless proprietary. But fully as much more remains to be done, and the fact that owners are becoming in so many cases petitioners under the act is a proof that what remains can be accomplished without the hardship to proprietors which in the first years attended the working of the act. After all, the encumbrances on Irish property cleared away as yet hardly amount to one-third of those which were known to exist when the act was passed. Of course, it is not necessary to get rid of all those encumbrances. Landed proprietors will always continue to borrow money and to give mortgages, on their estates. But the less landed property is encumbered the better, generally speaking, it will be for agriculture and for the interests of the community. At all events, the Encumbered Estates Court has effectually swept the Augean stable of Chancery, and if allowed a few years longer to complete its work it will have conferred benefits upon Irish agriculture second only to what a good Tenant Right Bill would effect."

Our Ocean Line.

There can be now no doubt that a line of Cunarders will be started between Quebec and Liverpool next spring. The Gazette publishes an extract from a letter from a merchant in Liverpool to a merchant in this city, positively announcing the fact; and our contemporary adds that "the respectability and position of its informant, are a guarantee of its truth." So that Messrs. Edmonstone, Allan & Co., may make up their minds to have powerful competitors for ocean favours next season, and Montreal would do well to bestir herself if she would still be considered the great commercial emporium of Canada. Quebec will naturally do all that she can to secure the Cunarders, and keep them to herself when she gets them. In fact their size will be such that until Lake St. Peter is considerably deepened they could not attempt, were they willing to do so, to come to Montreal. It is our interest to bring them here, and certainly to support in preference the line that will come to us at all seasons. The move made by our merchants to establish a line of propellers to run between Montreal and Chicago is the first step in the right direction.—This will secure us the import and export trade of the west, if anything will; and the value of this trade is incalculable. It is said that more steamers placed on this route, the greater the traffic there will be for them, and that half a dozen different lines would find plenty for them to do. Once let us secure the trade of the west, and we may hope that such a happy result will be realized. The committee who have been appointed to push this matter forward know well its importance, and we have no doubt will set vigorously about the work. Montreal has been often hard pushed, but she has not got knocked on the head yet. Like the Irishman she been often dead, but is not dead yet. The emergencies like this which calls forth all her energies, and shows the metal her merchants are made of. We have no fear of Quebec getting the better of us, if we are only active and energetic and true to ourselves.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, DECEMBER 18, 1856.

A melancholy tragedy is reported in the Dublin papers, by which Mr. George Little, cashier of the Midland Great Western Railway Company in that city, met with his death. The circumstances connected therewith, as yet appear to be clothed in mystery, but to all appearances, he came to his death by the hand of the assassin.

We will give the circumstances of the case as briefly as possible. Mr. Little not having opened his office at ten o'clock in the morning, as was his custom, the officials supposed that something had happened, and at his non-appearance at twelve o'clock, and the door being found locked, it was resolved to break open his office, which being done, a horrible spectacle awaited those who entered. The unfortunate gentleman was found lying upon his face quite dead, having his throat cut from ear to ear—his head in fact being almost severed from his body. It is a mysterious circumstance that no instrument was found in the room which could have inflicted the wound. The only article of the kind in the office was a small office-knife, which was found quite clean. A towel was also found which was stained with blood, and had the marks of being used to wipe some sharp instrument, with which no doubt the wound had been inflicted, as it was cut in several places as if with a razor. There were several large wounds upon his head, which must have been inflicted with some heavy instrument. The door of the office, as we before stated, was found locked, and the key, for which a close search had been made, could not be found.

Mr. Little was supposed at first to have committed suicide, but from the circumstances which afterwards transpired, and a post mortem examination of the body, proved beyond all doubt, that deceased had been murdered. Another mysterious circumstance is, that a large amount of money was found scattered about the room, and the amount found, corresponded accurately with the amount which he should have in hand, and which was to have been deposited, in the bank upon the following day. All his accounts were found to be completely correct; so that whatever may have been the object of the assassin, it could not have been for the sake of plunder, as none appears to have been missing. The deceased was a most respectably connected gentleman, and he had been in the employ of the company for about four years, and was so highly esteemed as to have been promoted to the important post of cashier some twelve months since. He was about forty years of age, and is a brother of Mr. Little, who for some time past has resided in Sandwich.

An inquest was held, and the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown.

It is thought that the murderer is likely to have walked towards the canal, and there deposited the instruments with which he had perpetrated the crime, as well as the key of the office. Rewards have been offered for information by Mr. Simon Little, to the amount of £100, and by Mr. Thos. W. Bond to the amount of £50, and it is supposed that the government will also offer a reward of £500 for the detection of the murder r.

The following further particulars appear in the Dublin papers:—

This horrible tragedy still remains shrouded in the deepest mystery. From the point at which the ill-fated cashier had arrived in the returns at which he was engaged—being the estimates of the receipts from the different stations—it has been calculated that in about twenty minutes after his clerk left, at five o'clock, he would have finished his duties. From the circumstance, it is not unreasonably inferred that the murder was committed between five and six o'clock. It is impossible to account for the fact of so much money having been left in gold and silver if the object of the assassin was to plunder, and yet no other probable motive for the foul deed can be conjectured. Every means will be resorted to in order to throw some light, if possible, upon the mysterious circumstance of the assassination. The detectives will pursue the search in every possible quarter with persevering energy. As yet, they have received no information likely to put them upon the assassin's track, although various circumstances sufficient to awaken suspicion and induce inquiry have been related; among other, that of a conversation which was alleged to have taken place last Friday between a man and woman at a public house in Stonebattery. It is said that the parties, on leaving, towards proceeded to Dunshaughlin, let fall words which would lead to the belief that they had £300 or £400 in their possession or within their reach which had not been honestly come by. The police, however, do not attach much weight to the information, but they are endeavouring to discover who the parties are.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES.

The draining of the canal commenced at an early hour on Wednesday morning. Up to two o'clock the afternoon nothing was found except a carriage lantern belonging to the company; but shortly after that hour, Mr. Crofton and Mr. Kinner, two gentlemen connected with the Dublin corporation, happened to be standing looking at the operations of the workmen, observed a piece of wood appearing at over the water, which remained in the basin to the depth of two or three inches. They directed the attention of the men to the object, and a search having been made, it was found that the wood was the handle of a hammer, the head of which was embeded in the mud. On being brought to the bank, an examination of the instrument took place, when it was ascertained that it was an engineer's hammer, about eighteen inches in length, the head being rather weighty, and having a highly-polished broad face on one side, and a smaller and sharper one at the other. The wood of the handle, at about two inches from the head, showed a crack which extended for a short distance lower down; this would appear to have been caused by a very heavy blow, in which the head did not fall directly on the surface struck, but rather fell slantingly, by which means the handle must have come in contact with what ever object was intended to have been struck by the blow. The opening of this crack bore evident marks of having human hair entangled in it. Human hair was also visible on the head of the hammer itself. This discovery is looked upon as of utmost importance, and, from what we have been able to gather, we are satisfied that the police are at length on the track of the murderer. The position in which the hammer was found goes to refute the idea of the assassin having proceeded up the railway, and leads to the belief that he either found his way through the car-gate, on the egress side of the platform, or over the boundry wall adjoining the Broad-Stone Basin, into the water of which he threw the hammer, if that should turn out (which is now very probable) one of the instruments with which the murder was perpetrated.

The Freeman's Journal, of the 25th:—"There remains now but very little doubt—as to who are likely to be arrested on the charge of being the murderers of Mr. Little From a number of circumstances which gradually transpired in the course of the investigation, the attention of the police was especially fixed on one or two individuals. Every day's inquiry served to strengthen suspicion, which has now, we understand, become all but certainty. We have already stated that the murderer must have been well known to Mr. Little, and must have been in conversation with him at the time the fatal blow was given; and we may now add that one of the persons on whom suspicion has fallen was well known to the unfortunate gentleman, and was frequently in communication with the deceased. The Attorney General visited the scene of the murder yesterday at one o'clock, and remained over two hours in the room where Mr. Kemmis is holding his investigation Dilligent search has been made for the money which was carried away by the assassin as well as for a razor to match the one found in the canal, but what the result has been we are unable to say."

DREADFUL FIRE IN MONTREAL.

Christs' Church Cathedral, on the morning of the 10th, was discovered to be on fire, which originated in the west gallery, and when perceived might have been speedily subdued had there been a plentiful supply of water; but unfortunately, when the engines, which were soon on the spot, commenced working, it was found, that there was no water—a sad state of things, when we consider that the extensive water works just completed, were supposed would furnish at all times an inexhaustable supply of water. But from some cause it had been shut off the evening before, leaving the city at the mercy of the element. So slow was the progress of the flames that it was thought at one time that they had been subdued, but from the peculiar construction of the building, which enabled them to steal unperceived from the place where they originated, to the roof. Between the plaster and the walls there was an open space, which acted as a species of flue for the conveyance of the fire to the roof. Before this was discovered the fire had obtained such headway, that all hopes of subduing it were out of the question. From the roof, in various places, the fire began to show itself, and it soon became evident that the old church had little time to stand. In a very short time the roof fell in with a tremendous crash and buried everything in the church in one common ruin. The flames at this time had reached the belfry, where it raged with fearful fury. The steeple being built of wood and covered with tin, was in a little time, in a flame. The fire running furiously up the steeple destroying every thing in its way, and bursting through the windows must have presented an awful spectacle to the beholder. The old clock which had so long marked the hour; unconscious of what was passing, still went on, amidst the tumult that was around it, fearless of the danger which was at each moment threatening it with destruction. When the hands marked the hour of two the clock struck for the last time—its fate had come—and in twenty minutes more it had ceased to go. At this time the steeple began to sway to and fro and soon fell with a tremendous crash upon the roof of Mr. Mussen's house, which was soon on fire, but now the full suppiy of water had come, and in a short time the flames were subdued by the firemen.

We are happy to learn, that the Registers, Records, and Diocesan Library were all saved, as well as the Communion Service, table cloth, cushions, prayer books and a painting which was a copy of Leonardo da Vinci's celebrated picture of the last supper.

The insurance upon the Church amounted to £217,300 leaving a loss probably of £10,000.

The Michanics' Hall has been obtained for the use of the congregation at present.

It affords us not a little amusement to read, week after week, the silly and contemptible slanders that are continually being hatched in the Canadian office under the tender care of the Member for Essex.—What a splendid little flock will he have to brood over! But we fear that in his anxiety, he will hatch more than his wings will cover. The fruitful imagination of the little army of writers for the Canadian have not failed to discover that the Hon. John Prince has been guilty of every crime from murder to robbing the roosts; in fact, each issue is only a continuation of the catalogue of crimes of which the hon. gentleman has been guilty, in the imaginations, of course, of this little army of martyrs. The Canadian having failed, before the election, to convince the people of his unfitness for a seat in the Council, like a bear with a sore head, now sits and shows his teeth, and with an ungracious howl at the Old Colonel, snaps and bites as if he were fighting for dear life. So fruitless have the malicious attempts to destroy the character of the Hon. John Prince been, and so utterly contemptible must be the motives that have induced them to strain, week after week, by falsehoods to injure the character of any man, that we can only pity the false position that they have assumed, and that Mr. Rankin, as the representative of this county should lend himself to such a course of action.

As to the hon. gentleman having acquired his position in the Council by fraud, misrepresentation, or treachery of the foulest kind, is as low and base a falsehood as ever was written by man, and no one but the editor of the Canadian would have the hardihood to assert so foul an untruth. The Canadian is paying the electors of this constituency a poor compliment, when he asserts that they were so ignorant, that they could not judge for themselves in the choice of a representative. Yet, ignorant as the Canadian would strive to prove the electors, they knew enough to elect the right man to the Council, and would not be deceived by the vile attempts that were made to injure Col. Prince's private and public character. "Truth will ever prevail over falsehood and deceit. Honest actions are the best support for a good name," says the Canadian. So say we; and so said the electors at the election, when they chose Col Prince as their representative in the Council. Why is it that the Canadian will not open his eyes and see?

☞ We are requested to state that a Concert will be given, between Christmas and New Year, by the ladies and gentlemen of this neighbourhood, kindly assisted by a number from Windsor, and we are informed, by one or two from Detroit, for the purpose of raising funds to paint and otherwise repair St. John's Church in this place. We have no doubt, from the number who have volunteered their services to assist at the Concert, that both the vocal and instrumental music will be excellent. We have also to hope that the parishioners will not be backward in procuring tickets, but come out liberally. Due notice will be given of the day when it will take place.

☞ We have received the "Globe Pictorial Supplement," containing an account of the rise, progress and present position of Toronto, embellished with numerous engravings of the most prominent buildings in that city. The Globe has always been foremost in energy and enterprise in publishing the first news, and this is only another sign of the progressive spirit which seems to be their guiding star. We will refer to the historical sketch next week.

Almost Miraculous Escape.

A HEROIC RESCUE—The Fulton Patriot gives an account of an incident that occurred in the town of Granby, in that county a few days ago, which is a striking illustration of parental devotion and heroism. On the 20th ult., the wife of Mr. J. H. Suydam was brought to the door of her own house by the piercing cry of one of her little ones, and on going to the well, saw it sinking in the water, 18 feet below the surface of the ground. The hired girl was instantly sent for the nearest man, (the father being from home at that time;) the mother stepped her foot over the curb, for the purpose of descending, but on reflecting that her own life was in jeopardy, she withdrew it again, and stood watching the struggles of her prattling boy. But as he came up the last time, and threw himself on his back, he looked up at his mother, and said, in the expression of his countenance. "Ma, can't you help me?" the mother waited no longer for help, but in an instant descended into the well, and caught the little boy by the arm and held him out of the water.

Her little son, four years and a half old, went into the house, emptied the water out of the pail, hooked it on the pole, and lowered it by the sweep, which was nearly heavy enough to raise a pail of water. This proving of no use, the mother thought she must either drop the child or drown herself. After a desperate effort, she succeeded, by the slippery stones until she was near the top, when she raised him bodily over her head, when Franky lying down on the platform, caught his little brother by the arm, and cried out, "I've got him, ma, I've got him!" Thus the little sufferer was rescued some time before help arrived.—Chronicle.

A Practical Crichton.

TRUTH CONQUERS ALL ASSAILANTS.

The admirable Crichton, thegreatest logician of his day, was accustomed to seek a controversy with the Sophists of the French and Italian Colleges, by nailing challenges to the gates of those institutions. Thomas Holloway, the inventor of the popular medicinal remedies that bear his name, has adopted a more public and comprehensive method of defying Error and establishing Truth. He has advertised his Pills and Ointment in nearly every newspaper in the world, and fortified his proclamations with a mass of authentic testimony which no disputant has thought it prudent to attack.

Crichton was a great theorist. Holloway is a man of facts. He takes for his premises twenty years of successful practice, and innumerable well attested cures, and asks the world to draw its own conclusions. He has a simple and perspicuous theory of the origin of all diseases, and upon this theory the composition of his famous remidies is based; but he rightly deems that the experimental proofs of their efficacy constitute a better passport to public confidence than a thousand philosophical essays upon the causes which lie at the root of their astonishing effects. In argument, the ingenious and subtle caviller, may sometimes prove an overmatch for plain reasons and there never lived the man, however eloquent, that could overcome a solid array of facts. They present the same sort of impenetrable barrier to the attacks of the most brilliant declaimer, that a square of infantry presents to the charge of light dragoons. In the centre of his chevaux de frise of facts, stands the hero of countless victories over disease Professor Holloway, invulnerable to the shafts of envy and prejudice.

What are his credentials? Have not his preparations relieved tens of thousands of victims in every clime, upon an ante-mortem inquest of the "profession" had been held and a verdict pronounced of utterly incurable?" For a response to this question, consult the press, everywhere, the volumes of private testimonials, the records of hospitals, the complimentary letters of princes and nobles, the archives of governments, and public opinion throughout the world.—These are HOLLOWAY'S vouchers. Who is prepared to question them?—"London Despatch."

Voyage From Lake Champlain to New Orleans.

(From the N. H. Herald.)

The New Orleans papers of the second of December recorded the arrival at that port of two sloops—the W. H. Wilkins and M. Canfield—from the port of Essex, on Lake Champlain, in this State.

The objects of the voyage and the route taken by it are both very curious. They started from Essex, a town on the west shore of Lake Champlain, one hundred and thirty miles northeast of Albany. It has a steamboat landing and a thriving population of about 1,200. The voyagers then proceed up the lake and passed through the Chambly Canal and entered the St. Lawrence near Lake St. Peter. Thence they sailed to Montreal, and passing onward through the Lachine and Cornwall canals, and entering Lake Ontario, ascended the Welland canal to Lake Erie. Crossing this lake to Erie, Pensylvania, they entered the Beaver canal, and passing down to the town of that name, reached the Ohio river, following it to its junction with the Mississippi, and so to New Orleans—in all a distance of about twenty-eight hundred miles. The sloops were towed to New Orleans by the steamer Lotus.

This is the first time this route has been attempted. By the canal between the Fox river and the Wisconsin small crafts have occasionally passed from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi. These sloops were constructed, as we infer, for the sugar trade on the coast Attakapas; and if so, will ply, on the Bayon Teche, navigable for 200 miles above the Gulf of Mexico, which has a port named Franklin, where large steamers and sailing vessels are loaded with sugar, cotton and maize for New Orleans, New York and other markets.

We have no information as to the cost of these Essex sloops, nor of the expense attending their inland voyage. Be this as it may, it is another example of American enterprise and of the relations existing between the North and South, advantageous to both, and which it would be the greatest folly in the world to have in other form than those of peace, friendship and commerce.

MARKETS

SANDWICH, Dec. 17, 1856.

Hay—per Ton, $10.
Straw—Per load, $1 00.
Pork—Per 100 lbs, $5 50
Beef— do $4 to $5

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.

FLOUR.—Market 5c better: sales 9000 brls at $6 25 a 6 40 for common to choice superfine State; $6 55 a 6 80 for extra do; $6 40 a 6 70 for superfine western. Canada flour quiet.

GRAIN.—Wheat market firm and quiet; Sales 10,000 bush., at $1 57 for red winter Illinois: $1 60 for white do; $1 70 for white Ohio. Rye firm at 90c. Corn at 70c a 72½ for mixed western. Oats steady.

PROVISIONS.—Pork firmer; sales 300 brls, at $19 00 a 19 62 for mess; $17 a 17 50 for prime. Beef firm. Dressed hogs steady at 8¾ a 7¾.

MONEY less plenty and in active demand, at 7 per cent on call loans and 8 a 9 on short first-class paper. Foreign Exchange dull at 109 a 108½.

TORONTO, Dec. 13, 1856.

There was a fair supply of marketable produce offering to day, which found a ready sale. Hucksters are laying in stocks as rapidly as possible, and citizens have not much opportunity to compete with them.—They buy the whole load at once, at a good price, and the farmer is thus relieved from the trouble of retailing out in small lots; while the hucksters ask their own price for the articles when bought in his store.

WHEAT.—There was little or nothing done in wheat, one or two loads of poor quality only had changed hands, at 5s 9d a 6s per bushel. Good samples are enquired for at higher rates, but as there was nothing of the better quality offering, we refrain from quoting.

FLOUR remains as before noted, but with light retail sales. Nominal quotations—Superfine $6 6d, and Extra $6 9d per barrel.

CORN is worth 3s 9d per bushel by the quantity. Amount on hand, for all purposes, about 45,000 bushels.

OATS are scarce, and held firmly at 3s on the wharf. Farmers hold them at 3s 2d per bushel. Substitutes, such as corn, carrots, &c., are coming into general use.

PEAS are in request at 4s.

POTATOES are in rather better supply, and by the bushel sell at 4s 3d. They are retailed at 5s by the farmers.

APPLES are held at $3 a $4 per brl, and 5s per bushel, and in fair demand.

BUTTER is cheaper, fresh selling at 1s 4d a 1s 5d. Tub No 1, by the firkin, sells at 1s a 1s 1½d per lb.

EGGS held at 1s 6d per dozen.

Stuff your pockets with mackerel, and imagine yourself a whale, and you are a hopeful member of the cod-fish aristocracy.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS.

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the lungs, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review" and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dyspepsia,	Lowness of Spirits
Diarrhœa	Piles,
Dysentery,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds,

* * Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1n43

THE NEW ILLUSTRATED

Hydropathic Encyclopedia,

A COMPLETE SYSTEM OF

HYDROPATHY & HYGIENE,

IN ONE LARGE VOLUME.

EMBRACING Outlines of Anatomy, Illustrated; Physiology of the Human Body; Hygienic Agencies and the Preservation of Health; Dieties and Hydropathic Cookery; Theory and Practice of Water Treatment; Special Pathology and Hydro-Therapeutics, including the Nature, Causes, Symptoms and Treatment of all known diseases; Application to Surgical Diseases; Application of Hydropathy to Midwifery and the Nursery; with three hundred engravings and nearly One Thousand Pages, including a Glossary, Table of Contents, and a complete Index. By R. T. TRALL, M. D.

Published by FOWLER and WELLS, New York.

In the plan of the work, the wants and necessities of the People have been steadily in view. While almost every topic of interest in the departments of Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Hygiene, Therapeutics is briefly presented, those of practical utility are always put prominently forward. The prevailing errors, conceits, and whims of the day and age are exposed and refuted; the theories and hypothesis upon which the popular drug practice is predicated are controverted, and the why and wherefore of their fallacy clearly demonstrated. The following is a brief analysis of its contents:

History of Medicine; History of Bathing; History of Medicated Baths.

Anatomy illustrated by One Hundred and Twenty appropriate engravings.

Physiology, illustrated, comprising the Rationale of Muscular Action; the Nervous influence; Philosophy of Mind; Mesmeric Phenomena the Special Senses; Functions of Digestion, Circulation, Respiration, Absorption, Nutrition, Secretion, Excretion, Calefaction, Temperaments, the Races of Men, and Theory of Population.

Hygiene embracing all the relations of Air, Light, Drink, Food, Temperature, Exercise, Sleep, Clothing, Bathing, and the Passions, to the growth and development of Body and Mind, the Preservation of Health and the attainment of Longevity.

Dietetics, comprising the Bible, Anatomical, Physiological, Chemical and Experimental Evidence concerning the natural Dietetic Character of Man.

Hydropathic Cookery, with Specific Directions for the Preparation of Food cia

Dietaries, containing the Therapeutic Distinctions of Diet for Invalids.

Philosophy of Water-Cure, with illustrated explanations of all the water-cure appliances, a Philosophical Exposition of the modus operandi of water-treatment, and the true rationale of drug-treatment.

The Nature Symptoms and Treatment of all known Diseases are examined, the ill success of drug practice exposed, and the proper Medication recommended and specified.

The Treatment of surgical Diseases illustrated and the directions for the minor operations given.

The Management of Lying-in-Women, and the treatment of Children, &c.

The work is intended to be plain, intelligible and sufficient guide for domestic practice, or home treatment, in all ordinary diseases, embracing the whole range of subjects connected with the philosophy of life, the preservation of health, and the treatment of diseases.

This great work may be had in one large volume, bound in library style. Price prepaid by mail to any Post Office in United States or Canada, only THREE DOLLARS.

All letters and orders should be directed as follows:—

Novel Mode of Preserving Meats.

Among the dishes at the late Montreal banquet was a leg of mutton, slaughtered at Paris in the 19th July last, and preserved without ice, salt or seasoning of any description, and not even contained in a metalic box, nor by any means or utensil in present use. This leg of mutton was brought to Montreal on the very day of the banquet, immediately roasted and served up perfectly sweet, odiferous, and relishing to the taste, in every respect.

Also, a fillet of beef of even moreancient date, and, nevertheless perfectly fresh, tender, and succulent; prepared and preserved at Constantine, Africa, so far back as the 18th April last, and brought by the Mediterranean Sea to Marseilles, thence upon the railway to Paris and Havre, thence across the Atlantic to New York and Montreal, where after being roasted, it was served up in a perfect state, and for immediate use.

The great distance from which the viands were brought, and the date of their preservation, has been attested by differents witnesses upon each of the above joints of meat, which official attestation was confirmed by proces verbaux in due form, by the most authentic authority.

The author of this admirable discovery of preserving meats during so long a time, is Mr Appert, and by means of his writings in the journals of Paris, especially towards the close of the regime of the Restoration and who, since that time has devoted his best energies to the improvement of a science which has now given birth in France to a very prosperous and lucrative branch of industry.

DRAINAGE.—Of the importance of drainage as a means of ameliorating the soil, most persons are not sufficiently aware—none but those who have witnessed the good effects of this process, can properly appreciate its great benefits; for it has been well and truly said, that by draining, the soil is kept from being too wet, and also preserved from the other evil of drought—that it is rendered by the summer showers, and escapes the chilling influence of excessive moisture, and is kept from being baked by all pervading air, laden with treasures of food for the plants, while, at the same time, the cutting blasts of the winds are harmlessly over it without drying out all the moisture, and thereby from excessive cold by evaporation.—Prof. J. A. Warder.

The N. Y. Courier, of Saturday, says:—"Money has again become abundant on first class securities in this market. We hear of ocean loaning operations in such paper at 8 per cent., but the bulk is done at a fraction higher. Loans on call are readily obtained at 7 per cent, with first class collaterals. The Stock Market is not very firm. Money is still scarce on second and third class paper, and operators are rather timid as to the financial movements of the next thirty or sixty days."

AYER'S PILLS

Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

JULES HAUEL, Esq., the well known performer, 48 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, whose choice productions are heard at almost every public soiree, says:—

"I am happy to say of your CATHARTIC PILLS, that, here, found them a better family medicine, for common use, than any other within my knowledge. Many of my friends are visiting your establishment benefits from them, and fields with me in believing that they possess extraordinary virtues for the cure of disorders of the stomach and bowels. They are not only effectual, but safe and pleasant to be taken—qualities which make them valued by the public, when they are known."

The venerable Chancellor WARDLAW writes from Edgefield, 15th April, 1854:

"Dr. J. C. AYER.—SIR: I have taken your Pills with great benefit, for the listlessness, debility, loss of appetite and Bilious headache, which has of late years overtaken me in the spring. A few doses of your Pills proved, as I have used your Cherry Pectoral many years in my family for coughs and colds with similar success, I have no hesitation in recommending them to my friends."

JOHN F. BEATTY, Esq., Sec. of the Penn. Railroad Co., says:—

"Pa. R. R. Office, Philadelphia, Dec. 13, 1853.

"SIR: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your Sarsaparilla, having derived much relief and benefit from the use of both your Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. I can never willingly be without them in my family, and ever commend to be, while my means will procure them."

The widely renowned S. D. STEVENS, M. D., of West worth, N. H., writes:

"Having used your CATHARTIC PILLS in my practice, I certify from experience that they are an invaluable purgative. In cases of disordered digestion, loss of appetite, headache, indigestion, costiveness, and the great variety of diseases that follow, they are a sure cure, and a blessing to any other. In all cases where a purgative remedy is required, I confidently recommend these Pills to the public, as superior to any other I have ever found, or used. They act in their operation, and perfectly safe—qualities which make them invaluable antidote for pestilence. I have for many years known your Cherry Pectoral as the best Cough remedy in the world, and now find your Pills in no wise inferior to that admirable preparation for the treatment of diseases."

"Acton, Me., Nov. 25, 1853.

"DR. J. C. AYER—DEAR SIR: I have been afflicted from my birth with scrofula in its worst form, and now, after twenty years' trial, and an outlay of a large amount of money, have been completely cured in a few weeks by your Pills. With what feelings of rejoicing I write you can only be imagined when you realize what I have suffered, and how long.

"Never until now have I been free from this loathsome disease in some degree. At times it attacked my eyes, and made me almost blind, besides the running sores on all others it settled in the scalp of my head, and destroyed my hair, rendering it bald. At times it affected my throat, and it came out in my face, and kept it for months a raw sore. About seven years ago I commenced using your Sarsaparilla Pills, and now am entirely free from the complaint. My eyes are well, my hair is starting finely, and I have commenced a healthy growth, all of which makes me feel already a new man.

"Hoping this statement may be the means of conveying information that should be good to others, I am, with a sentiment of gratitude, Yours, &c., ANDREW J. RICKER."

"I have known the above named Mark Ricker from her childhood, and his statement is entirely true.

ANDREW J. MESERVE,
Overseer of the Portsmouth Manufacturing Co."

CAPT. JOEL PRATT, of the ship Marion, writes from Boston, 20th April, 1854:

"My Pilot has received no less a bilious attack which arises from derangement of the Liver, which had become very severe. I had tried all my self in my Pilot's case, and from every remedy I could try; but a few doses of your Pills so completely relieved him, that I feel bound to give them to my children for worms, with the best of effects. They have promptly cured. I consider your Pills as a friend for costiveness, which had troubled him for months; in a few days after taking your Pills he was well. You make the best medicine in the world, and I am free to say so."

Read this from the distinguished Solicitor of the Supreme Court, whose name and character have made him well known, not only in this but the neighboring States:

"New Orleans, 5th April, 1854.

"SIR: I have great satisfaction in assuring you that myself and family have been very much benefitted by your medicines. Your Cherry Pectoral has cured, two years ago, a severe and dangerous cough, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then has enjoyed perfect health. Your Cathartic Pills have several times been cured from attacks of the Influenza and Fever, by a few doses, and I consider them as a specific for these complaints. Your CATHARTIC PILLS have entirely cured me of a dyspeptic affection, with which I have been grown upon me for some years,—indeed, this cure is much more important, from that fact that I have not found any relief from the best Physicians which the section of the country afford, and from any of the numerous remedies I had taken.

"Very respectfully, Yours, &c.

"Such, Doctor, is a providential blessing to our family, and you may well suppose we feel and call it.

LEAVITT THAXTER."

"Scioto Chamber, Ohio, April 24, 1854.

"DR. J. C. AYER.—Honored Sir: I have used in my family and in the CATHARTIC PILLS, left me by your agent, and know them to be the best and most effectual purgative I have ever found nor suffering. The first dose we loved out, and a few subsequent doses have entirely removed the disease. I feel in better health now than for some years before, which I attribute entirely to the effects of your CATHARTIC PILLS. Yours with great respect, LEONIE B. MITCHELL."

The above are all from persons who are publicly known where they reside, and who would not make these statements without a thorough conviction that they were true.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,
TORONTO, 25th July, 1856

To Emigrants & Others Seeking LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands through and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD.

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Pembroke," in Hitle's Allowance, mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Peel's Line," leading to the Lake Muskuke, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 38 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Peel's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Huron, of 180 miles in length, passing through the heart of the Ottawa and Huron Territory, and opening up for settlement a vast extent of rich and valuable land.

This road, and the country through which it passes, now open for settlement, is easily accessible, and the Agent for the granting of Lands in this district is MR. P. PERRY, who resides at Mount St. Patrick, near Renfrew, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country open for the French's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by steamboats twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Nadawaska, a distance of 35 miles, and is to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS, where the Government have numerous very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are called respectively Abinger, Denbigh Ashley, Ellingham, Anglesea, and Barvio.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 71 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and ends its opposite course.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Hastings, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles south of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown under this Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road through this large extent of land is opened for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 20 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty. The land is good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require.—Settlers will find Mr. Hayes ready at the Village of Hastings, where the Government agent resides.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Ontario Weg, thence by Steamboat to the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 56 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the Country, and provide for keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, to the extent of 100 acres each and HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—build a house not less than 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed; after which accomplishment only shall the settler have the right of purchasing the land, and then only a moiety, comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on a single lot, will be exempted from "the obligation of building a house on each settlement lot, upon which they live provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot. The non-accomplishment of these conditions will subject the location to loss of the lands assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to another.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as may be erected in four days by five men. The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge, and when this is done the cost of the whole does not exceed $20. It can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It then becomes a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, are, in sections of Canada West, capable both as to Soil and Climate, of producing abundant crops of winter wheat of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and longest cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land —some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighborhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care of and covered in, will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £6 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settler at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

As regards the cultivated lands, possessing a capital from £25 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for its investment. The active man, who is also willing to work, needs little capital, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in his spare time to getting in his crops, which he can, at other seasons, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labor.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The winter does not fail as a bar to obstruct communication; and it affords material for good roads during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, and get his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this covering to the earth, not only facilitates communication but preserves the settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have already penetrated, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are keeping up active operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ration of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the next ten will probably more than doubles within that period—irrespective of any improvements which may have been made by the Settlers.

With this progression, the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in the period named, but the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the more lapse of time, exclusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish or even continue to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from and beyond the Ottawa to the river, to edge to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa River —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development to come.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of containing a population of eight mill ons of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in the last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this Ottawa country from the Shores of Lake Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Everett.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been undertak and will be completed in the present ye, the principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route into the Great Western Lakes, and the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These projected works are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, and through it the people of Canada, have been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

A DAILY AND A WEEKLY FOR $3,50

Those of our readers of this paper who desire a daily review of the Cleveland, New York and other markets, may be accommodated on the following terms. For $3,50 we will send the Commercial, Chronicle and Marine Record of the Lakes" for one year, and will subscribe for the Daily Clevelander" for one year and send the Publisher's receipt to any friend.

The "Clevelander" is the size of this paper, is printed on minion and agate type, and on heavy white paper. The report of the trade markets will be reported by us, and we need not repeat that neither paper nor skill, will be spared to make it full and correct in every particular. The New York, Buffalo and Oswego reports are furnished by the N. Y. associated press, and will be correctly rendered. As a newspaper the "Clevelander" is perhaps equal to any daily in the State. Recollect, only $3,50 for the "Daily Clevelander" and the "Commercial Gazette" for one year. Parts of a dollar may be sent in postage stamps. For two dollars the two papers will be sent six months.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,

AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the improvement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the rising generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable ground, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of paper, and illustrations manufactured expressly. It is issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, are engaged to conduct the Editorial department: H. T. BOTTAR, JAMES SAWARDS and D. W. RAY.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance; a liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.— Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the Illustrated Horticulturist for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West. Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our first educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of this Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fine view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.
N. B.—For particulars send for Catalogues and Circulars by mail.

Select Poetry.

Neighbor Nelly.

From Household Words.

I'm in love with Neighbor Nelly,
Though I know she's only ten,
While I am eight and forty,
And she married-at of men.
I've a wife that weighs me double;
I've three daughters, all with beaux.
I've a son with noble whiskers,
Who at me turns up his nose.

Though a Squaretoes and a Buffer,
Yet I've sunshine in my heart,
Still I'm fond of cakes and marbles—
Can appreciate a tart.
I can love my Neighbor Nelly
Just as though I were a boy,
And could hand her cakes and apples
From my depths of corduroy.

She is tall and growing taller;
She is vigorous of limb;
(You should see her play at cricket
With her little brother Jim!)
She has eyes as blue as damsons;
She has pounds of auburn curls;
She regrets she gave off leap-frog
Is prohibited to girls.

I adore my neighbor Nelly;
I invite her in to tea,
And I let her nurse the baby,
Her delightful ways to see.
Such a darling bud of woman!
Yet, remember, from any teen—
I have learnt from Neighbor Nelly
What the girl's Doll-instinct means,

O, to see her with the baby,
[He adores her more than I,]
How she choruses his crowing
How she hushes ev'ry cry!
How she loves to pit his dimples,
With her light forefinger deep;
How she boasts, as one in triumph,
When she's got him off to sleep!

We must part with Neighbor Nelly,
For the summers quickly flee,
And thy middle-aged admirer
Must two sons supplanted be.
Yet as jealous as a mother,
A suspicious canker'd churl—
I look vainly for the setting
To be worthy such a pearl.

Andy's Procrastination.

AND HOW MUCH HE MADE BY IT.
BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

Andy Sprowley was like thousands of others in this world of labor and turmoil. He had a habit of procrastination. Not only did he often 'put off' till to-morrow what might be done 'to day,' but he sometimes neglected important things altogether. Yet Andy was a hard working man, and by no means lazy,—and if he had only possessed one-half the amount of promptness that he did of will to work, he might have been well off. He was a farmer, but he owned no farm. He lived in a small hut by the roadside, which he hired of an old money lender, and supported himself by working at 'days work,' for the neighbouring farmers. There was a small garden spot attached to the house, just large enough to swing a hoe about in, and even that more than half rocks. Andy had a wife and four children. His only hope was, that at some time to come he might be able to provide better for them.

'Betsy,' he said, one evening to his wife, 'I wish I owned a little farm. Oh, if I had twenty or thirty acres, how easily we could get along. Here's Tom and Seth, both of 'em big enough to work on it; and then you could help a little havin' and plantin,'—and the like. I have a good many days that I could be workin' on such a place as that are just lost now,"

"It would be a good thing," returned the wife wistfully. She gazed down upon her knitting a few moments, and then she added, "Don't you think, Andy, if you had only kept your plans all straight, and always been up to your promises, you might have got along a little better?"

"Why—what d'ye mean?" said Andy,—looking up in surprise.

"You know, what I mean. But I don't mean to find fault, Andy, for the Lord knows your'e a good, kind, hard-workin' man; but then you know you don't always keep your promises. You don't keep your work planned out clear and straight. Don't you remember how you lost that job for Mr. Drake, just because you failed to be on hand as you promised?"

'Ah—but I didn't know he meant to give me such a job. I only thought he wanted me to do a day's work,'

'That don't make any difference Andy. —You ought to stick to your word, even though you expected no benefit from it.—How often have you read about procrastination—how folks lose by it. Why—you know that even now some of the best of men in town are afraid to trust any important business in your hands for fear you will deceive them."

'What, Betsy!—me deceive anybody!'

'Well—I didn't mean exactly that, Andy. I meant you'd disappoint them. You know you don't always keep your promises. You tell a man you'll certainly go to work for him on such a day, and then, when the day come, just as likely as not you have something else to do."

Andy scratched his head and said something about not being able to keep everything in his mind just like a clock. He knew he was faulty in this respect, and he didn't like to dwell upon it much.

It was early spring now; the snow being most all gone, save where here and there a dingy bank lay hidden from the sun behind some high wall or rocky hill side, and the farmers were preparing for the coming work. One afternoon as Andy was working away at his wood pail, a waggon was driven up to the door, and in it was Mr. Robert Davis.

Davis was one of the wealthiest farmers in the town—a shrewd, calculating exacting man, where duty was concerned, but very benevolent and open hearted. His name very seldom appeared upon subscription papers, and for 'society charities' he gave nothing. A simple instance will at once explain his mode of charity He always made a practice of keeping a full supply of hay and grain over one year. That is, the whole corn and hay crop of one year were stowed away and not touched till the following year. When other farmers commenced to feed from their last crop, Mr. Davis was just opening the garner of his crop of the previous year, thus keeping one annual supply ahead in case of need.

Well—one year a severe drought cut off nearly all the crops in that section, and the poorer farmers were sadly in need. Corn went up from one collar per bushel, to nearly two; wheat and other grain in proportion, while hay and potatoes also nearly doubled in price. Mr. Davis had plenty of these products to sell, and he sent word to several suffering families that they could have corn and hay at the old prices, and that he would take his pay in work at any time when convenient. Many poor men flocked to his garners, and he sent them away rejoicing. At length one of the store-keepers heard that Davis was selling corn at a dollar per bushel, and wheat for a dollar and a quarter, and hay for ten dollars a ton. He posted off to Davis's at once and asked him if what he had heard was correct. The old farmer said it was.

'Then,' said the merchant, 'I'll take all you have to spare, and pay you cash.'

'No, no,' returned Davis, 'you can't have a pint of grain from me. I keep it for those who need it.'

The merchant pleaded, and argued; and finally offered nearly double what the old farmer had been selling for; but he could'nt have a bit.

Shortly afterwards another man called.—He was a farmer, but pretty well off. He wanted to buy some grain for cash,

'No,' said Davis, firmly. 'I have no grain to sell for money. If you have money you can buy at the store.'

'But you have been selling to some of the farmers about me,' urged the applicant.

'Aye,' responded the noble man, 'I know I have; and to such as they shall I continue to sell. They have no money, and must buy at the store. I sell to them at the old prices, and they will pay me in work when they are able and I want it. I have made up my mind not to sell a pint of grain nor a pound of hay to any man who has the money to pay for it, for he can buy elsewhere, while those poor self-reliant men who have no money must suffer severely if they cannot find some one to sell to them as of old—Good morning, sir.'

Such a man was Robert Davis.

He shook hands with Andy, and asked after the health of the family, and then he said,—

'What are you going to do to-morrow forenoon, Andy?'

'Nothing only work on my wood.'

'Then I wish you would call over to my house in the morning. Can you be there by nine o'clock.'

'Yes,' answered Andy.

'Then remember. Come at seven or eight if you can, but be sure that you are no later than nine.'

And Andy promised and Mr. Davis drove off.

On the following morning Andy was up at his usual time, and about eight o'clock a couple of friends came along and stopped to talk. They talked politics and trade, and so on, Andy forgot all about his engagement, or if he thought of it, he thought that half an hour could make no difference. As the clock struck nine Mrs. Sprowle looked out and saw her husband seated on a log, as comfortably as could be. She called to him and he came in.

'O, Andy, look at that clock,' she uttered. 'What do you mean by this? You promised Mr. Davis that you would surely be at his house by nine.'

'Well, well,' said Andy, beseechingly, 'half an hour can't make much difference, I'll be off right away.'

So he started. He reached Mr. Davis's house at just ten minutes before ten, and was informed that Davis had gone away to Boston—that he left about ten minutes before Andy's arrival. The backward man felt sorry, to think that he had been so behind hand; but then it couldn't have been any thing very extra if Davis was going right off.

Andy stopped awhile to look around over the spacious and well arranged premises, and just as he was thinking of turning his footsteps homeward, he met John Davis, the host's oldest boy, a lad of sixteen years of age; and of him he learned he saw old Sam Latham at work in the largest barn.

'What's old Sam doin' here?' he asked after he had shaken hands with the youth.

'Why,' returned John, 'I believe he has taken the spring Farm and house.'

'He—what! bought it,' uttered Andy in complete surprise.

'Not exactly. Father is going to send me off to prepare for college, and as he can't have everything on his hands, he wanted a good faithful man to take the Spring Farm and live on it, and then help him about the place. You see he wants somebody who will be here all the time,'

This Spring Farm was a small homestead, of about forty acres, with a new cottage house and good barn and outbuildings. It had originally been set off from the main farm for a maiden sister of Mr. Davis who wished to live alone with a nephew she had adopted. Her brother gave her the land, and she put up the building. After living there about two years she died, and as her nephew wished to go and live with some friend in another part of the country she willed the whole property back into Robert's hands. The cottage was not far from Davis's great house, and the old farmer had been anxious to give the place to some faithful man, whose wife would help some in his dairy, and whose children, if he had any, would learn to assist him in small matters. —All this John told and then Andy uttered 'Oh, what a chance that would have been for me.'

'I believe father meant to have given it to you,' returned John. 'I know he did for he has said so last night. He said you would be here this morning to see him, and he meant to give you the offer. Sam Latham had been teasing for the place some time, but father preferred you. He waited for you this morning till half past nine, though he ought to have been off before, but as you didn't come he took with Sam's offer.—He had to go to Boston, and must be gone two weeks, and he wanted his man before he went. It'll be a grand thing for Sam, Father lets him have the Spring Farm and Cottage, and at the end of three years, if he is faithful he will give him a deed of it.'

Poor Andy turned away, and when he got out of sight of the house he sat down upon a stone and burst into tears. This was the severest blow he had ever received. When he reached home his wife was frightened at seeing tears still on his cheeks. She sat down by his side and asked him what had happened. He struggled hard with his feelings, and at first meant to swear, that he hurt himself; but finally he thought better of it, and told her the whole story.

His wife did not chide him, nor did she say a word that could wound him further. She only put her arms about his neck, and bade her cheer up.

'We can work along,' she said, 'so don't be down hearted.'

But Andy Sprowle was not so easily made happy. He knew he had lost a noble chance. In fact, he knew of no place in the whole country he would have preferred to the neat little white cottage, and rich smooth land of the little Spring Farm. It was called thus because of a gushing mineral spring upon it.

When Mr. Davis returned he learned how low-spirited and sad poor Andy was, and he tried to cheer him up, but when he knew the good man was in earnest he sank down upon his chair and burst into tears,

'Try me,' he cried. 'Try me for a while, and if I ever fail to meet my promises or if I put off till to-morrow, what ought to have been done to day, you may send me adrift at once.'

And Mr. Davis did try him; and he found in him all he could wish, and even more than he dared expect. Andy had received a good lesson, and he profited by it. At length the cottage and the farm became his own, and he was as happy as an honest man can be. He still works for Mr. Davis when he has spare time, and may be heard very often lecturing on the dangers of Procrastination.

A CRIMEAN HERO.—It is with pleasure that we announce to our readers the fact that one of our fellow citizens, formerly in the army, has just received, though the untiring zeal of our gallant and much respected friend Town Major Macdonald, his Crimean medal, with four clasps. Michael Byrne, the recipient of this distinguished mark of favour from Her Majesty, is now one of our city police force; he was formerly a private in the 20th Regiment, in which corps he served for about seven years. It was with no small degree of pride that the gallant fellow had his medal placed upon his breast by so distinguished a veteran as Town Major Macdonald, to whose recommendation he owes speedy a recognition to his claims. Byrne, although a young man, and also a young soldier, now carries upon his breast a medal which shows that he was present at Alma, Balaclava, Inkermann, and Sebastopol; in the trenches before which latter place he received three wounds after escaping unscratched, the fearful slaughter at the three former engagements. We trust he may long be spared to enjoy his honours, and that he may soon earn his promotion in the force to which he now belongs.—Montreal Transcript.

JOHN FROST.—Douglas Jerrold thus speaks of Mr. Frost, the exiled chartist leader, who has recently received the royal clemency:—

"It is bad enough when, in the very arrogance of health and strength, a man amasses his power to drag the minds of the working classes with false doctrines under the blasphemed name of freedom; but for an old, old man like Frost, with the grave opening for him, to play the political mountebank,—the spectacle is pitiable, contemptible. A pardoned traitor of seventy two, an old man under whose former inspirations much blood has been shed, should think rather of his coffin than the platform. John Frost, a free man ought to be a breathing acknowledgment of mercy. He is a living monument of ingratitude.

PRINCE NAPOLEON IN SEARCH OF A WIFE.—A Paris correspondent of the Independence of Brussels writes:—"There is no foundation in the report of journey of Prince Napoleon to the East. The visit of the prince to the court of Wirtemberg had, it is said, for its principal object a matrimonial alliance, there being some idea of a union between his Imperial Highness and one of the daughters of the Duke of Leuchtenberg, and of the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia. The Carlsruhe Gazette, in alluding to the rumour of this alliance, says:—'If Prince Napoleon marries the Princess Leuchtenberg he will appear in a very large fixed star, of a bright red color, like a hot coal, which changed, first to a purple hue, and next to a deep yellow.—Resuming a bright red color, the star darted in a north-easterly direction, with great velocity, leaving a brilliant train to mark its track, and finally disappeared in the north. The time occupied during its appearance seemed to be about twenty-five seconds.—London Herald.

CLERK OF THE PEACE &c.—Colonel Askin has resigned the office of Clerk of the Peace and Clerk of the County Court of Middlesex, and upon the unanimous recommendation of the bar, his son, Mr. Duncan Askin, has been appointed in his stead.—The colonel has filled the situation for many years with much credit to himself, and we doubt not from the experience and business habits of his son that that young gentleman will give the public every satisfaction in the fulfillment of his duties.—[Prototype.

EMIGRATION TO CANADA.—The Ballinasloe Star states that—"A large number of the peasantry have left the neighbourhood for America during the last week. They are for the most part of the peasant class of both sexes, and from the adjoining district in the county of Roscommon. We have reason to know that still large numbers are preparing to leave the old country, not withthe high rate of wages and prosperity they enjoy.

The emigration from various parts of Ireland still progresses, notwithstanding the many inducements the people now have to remain in their own country.

The Montreal Witness, in its commercial review," of Wednesday, says:—"The tendency of the money market is to ease, both in New York and Montreal, Government debentures, bearing 6 per cent. interest, were sold here last week at 2½ per cent. premium. Consolidated Municipal debentures, bearing the same rate of interest, were sold at equal to 7½ per cent. discount. We also here of a sale of Montreal Harbour debentures, bearing 7½ per cent interest, at one per cent. premium."

REPORTED DEFEAT OF WALKER —SUCCESS OF THE CENTRAL AMERICAN TROOPS

CHARLESTON, Saturday, Dec. 13.

The steamship Isabel, from Havana and Key West, arrived here this morning.

The steamship Tennessee had arrived at Key West from San Juan, on the 4th inst., with 500 passengers and $900,000 in specie (so says our despatch). Thirteen of the passengers of the Tennessee had died of cholera,

The passengers state that the accounts from Nicargua were that General Walker had been driven from every place where he had obtained a footing, with the exception of the Transit route.

The last accounts reported that 400 of his force, after fighting for nine days at Granada, were surrounded by the Costa Rica, San Salvedor and Guatemala forces. General Walker was on board a steamer on the lake, without communication with his army, and his men were suffering for the want of provisions and clothing, and were dying off by disease.

A naval fight had occurred near San Juan del Sur, lasting two hours, between a Costa Rican brig-of-war and the Nicaraguan warschooner Granada. Among the passengers of the Tennessee is Mr. Wheeler, General Walker had burned Granada and Masaya.

(From the Panama Herald, Dec. 4.)

There Americans and one Englishman belonging to Walker's army, came down from La Union, on H. B. M.'s ship Pearl. They had been taken prisoners by the Rivas party in Nicaragua, and effected their escape into San Salvador, where they succeeded in procuring a passage to this place. They represent Walker's army as being in a state of great destitution when they left, and that several were dying daily of the cholera.—The Pearl, Captain Sotheby, arrived here from La Union on Monday morning (Nov. 24,) and sailed again in the afternoon of the same day, to join the Monarch, Admiral Bruce, at Punta Arenas. The West Indian mail steamer Dee arrived at Aspinwall, from San Juan, Nicaragua, on the 29th ult. She brings no important news, beyond the fact that President Walker had a good supply of men and ammunition, and had met with no further attack from the allies since our last accounts. No steamer had arrived either from New York or California.

SICILY.

TURIN, Tuesday, Dec. 2 1856.

Information has been received in official quarters that an insurrectionary movement broke out on the 22nd ult, at several points of the province of Palermo. The government officials had been driven away at every point. A number of the ex deputies of the Sicilian Parliament of 1854 were at the head of the movement. Troops had been sent against the insurgents, and a number of arrests had been made in the capital. At present the precise bearing of the movement is not ascertained.

THE INTRIGUES OF RUSSIA IN MADRID.

A private letter from Madrid, of the 10th mentions the following facts:—

The question of the fusion with the family of Don Carlos is advancing towards a solution. It is the desire of Russia, as clearly manifested by Count Benkendorf. The Queen wishes to treat is as an affair in which her family only, and not the nation is any way concerned. A few of her ministers are opposed to this manner of viewing the question; but the Queen laughs at her ministers, and is determined to settle the matter directly and without any intervention save that of private agents speaking in her own name and on her own behalf.—A person from London who has lately been presented to the Queen, is, it appears, charged by the Infanta Don Juan to act on his behalf at the Palace. The government has tried to intercept the correspondence, but their view of the question from abroad are examined carefully, but none have been found from the person alluded to. Eventually the ministry will be obliged to do all that the Queen, acting under the inspiration of the King, may command them. The ministers who on every occasion are thus obliged to give in, are anxious to restrain her Majesty. They wished the police to get up an emeute, in order to afford a pretext for strong measures of repression. The affair of Malaga has been the result; but the game is a dangerous one and ministers may be the first consumed by the fire they would kindle. The state of the public funds is bad. The government have endeavored to prevent the fall, but they are exhausted—they have not a real of money in the treasury, and they are thinking of a loan. Some days since since a coup d'etat in favour of an absolutist system was prepared. The Court learned that it should go on but it was assured by a certain ex minister that it was better to wait for the meeting of the Cortes and a parliamentary check sustained by General Narvaez. The Court, however, is every day more anxious for it, and the person who now possesses the great influence is said to be the Camarilla of Isabella the 2nd and the King, urged by the clergy agree in opinion with the rest of the Court. It is known that the government is on the best understanding with the King of Naples, who is the channel of communication with the Pope, and that an active correspondence is carried on between Madrid, Naples and St Petersburg.

Trade With the West-Indies--Its former Magnitude--Reciprocity.

From the Montreal. Gazette.

We desire to see trade with the British West Indies extended, and a reciprocity of navigation produced between the Provinces and them. The project deserves the attention of our statesmen. The British West Indies trade largely with the United States. These Islands comprise Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbadoes, the Bahamas, the Bermudas, Antigua, Montserrat, St. Christopher, Nevis, Tortola and the Virgin Isles, Dominica Grenada, St. Vincent, Tobago and St. Lucia,' including Demarara, and to all these Islands we last year exported but $937,511, and imported from them only £3,533 18s. 4d. The mere statement of the fact is sufficient to justify our calling the attention of our merchants and politicians to the matter.

Last year these Islands took the manufactres of the British Islands, amounting in value to nearly two millions—£1,979,959 s.g. From the United States they took, during the U. S. fiscal year ending 30th June, 1854, the products of the States, amounting in value to $4,756,398; and of products of other nations brought through the States (principally Canadian, we suppose,) only $153,277. The United States took from them their products only to the amount of $1,120,417.

Nova Scotia had a large trade in 1854, and still maintains it. In that year, the imports of Nova Scotia from Foreign West Indies employed 179 vessels, and amounted in value to $757,565. and the exports to those countries reached $308,080 in 104 vessels. The exports from Nova Scotia to the British West Indies were $911,355, the ships employed 355, and the imports $40, 590, with 128 vessels inward. Turning to the Island Colony of Newfoundland, we find that in 1851, its imports from the British West Indies were $86,100, and from the Spanish West Indies $192,910, and its exports to the British West Indies $24,863, and to the Spanish West Indies $75,245, and to the Brazils $450,560. The result of the enumeration goes to confirm the impression that Halifax, from its geographical position, is likely to be an entrepot for a considerable portion of the West Indian trade between Canada and these Islands, at least until the measures of reciprocity is conceded. There are then over a dozen British West Indian Colonies of greater or less extent, whose trade is driven to the States, where their products are brought into immediate competition with the highly protected similar products of the States themselves, when their interests and those of Canada might be mutually promoted, if we could effect a direct interchange. These British Colonies export in greater or less quantities, coffee, sugar, molasses, spices, rum, arrowroot, &c. They require flour, wheat, oats, peas, beans, lumber, shooks, staves &c. &c. Why then, should we not be permitted mutually to exchange these articles free of duty; The national principle which sanctioned Reciprocity with the States applies to the West Indies much more strongly. In 1855 a committee of our House of Assembly was appointed, the Hon. Mr. Merrit being chairman, to inquire into the commercial intercourse between Canada and other countries This committee addressed a circular to the governments of the several West Indian Colonies, to ascertain whether in the event of Canada removing its duties on their natural productions, they would reciprocate. Very favourable replies were received from many of them.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, DECEMBER 25, 1856.

Christmas, good old Christmas, attended with so many pleasing reminiscences and happy thoughts, is again upon us. This time-honoured and Christmas holyday, as it again dawns upon the world, is greeted with thousands of merry voices, ringing their happy and joyous notes through many a household.—In the Royal Palace as well as in the humble Cottage, all appear to be moved with the same soul-stirring sensations of pleasure towards this, the greatest of Christian festivals.—

As old friends meet, the "Merry Christmas" is pledged between them—the sire again listens with pleasure to his little ones, each striving to be the first who will greet him with the same "Merry Christmas." And in accordance with this good old custom, we avail ourselves of the opportunity which is now afforded us, in wishing all our friends a "merry Christmas"; and a very merry one in particular to all our Brethren of the quill.

The time is drawing near when the Municipalities will be called upon to chose Councillors for the coming year. It therefore becomes the duty of the electors to weigh, well in their mind, the qualifications required to be possessed by those whom they elect. The duties of Municipal Councils, are becoming more arduous each year, and therefore require men who are qualified, by their business habits and education, to discharge those duties with credit; if men of this class are not chosen, we can hardly expect any great spirit of improvement to be carried out, which in these progressive times, should be so requisite.

We trust that our own Township will make a selection of Councillors, who will be competent, to fulfil the trust that will be placed in their hands. We hope all party feeling will be laid aside, and that the electors will unite, in placing only such men as are fit in office.

We have not as yet, heard who will be likely to offer themselves as Candidates and will therefore not enter fully into the matter until next week.

☞ We learn by the Planet that Dr. Cross has been called upon by a numerously signed requisition, to allow himself to be put in nomination as a candidate for the Representative of the County of Kent, in the next Parliament. Dr Cross is a consistent Conservative and may be relied upon as staunch to his party, if elected.

☞ The Concert to be given in aid of St. John's Church, Sandwich, will come off at the Court House, on Tuesday next the 30th. inst.

☞ We have received the December Number of the Canadian Agriculturist, which contains as usual a plentiful supply of useful and pleasant reading for the farmer.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf.

SIR:

Your readers, doubtless, remember the storm of public opinion by which the clergy reserves were swept away at the period of the last general election. There were, it is true, a few old fashioned and sober minded people, who ventured to doubt the equity of the proceeding, and even hinted that the Church of England, the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, and the Methodist body, who were then participating in the fund, might possibly be able to make a good use of the money, as the municipal councils, among whom it was proposed to divide it. Their feeble remonstrances were unheard amid the uproar of contested elections, and the measure was accomplished.

Well, as the result thereof, a considerable sum of money has been realised, and divided as proposed. To the township of Sandwich has been awarded, I understand, a sum of about twelve hundred pounds. Now the question arises, how this money shall be employed, and this is a question which has excited considerable attention throughout the country If invested at six per cent, it would bring in the magnificent sum of £72. 0. 0 per annum, and reduce my taxes perhaps about 2½d a year. The chief Superintendent of Education has come forward with a proposal, that the money in furnishing apparatus for schools, and in establishing township and village libraries — But lo! the Rev. Mr. Bruyere, a Roman Catholic priest of Toronto steps in, and inveighs with holy indignation against such a proposal. What! he exclaims, buy Protestant books with money which the nation has declared should be the property of all alike? Never; unless you consent that by the side of every copy of Macaulay there shall be placed one of Lingard, beside every D'Anbigne a Balmes, and every reader of the one shall be compelled to wade through the other!

Seriously, however, Mr. Editor, the disposal of this money is a very important subject, and one which at the approaching township elections, ought to engage the attention of the electors That it may be made the means of accomplishing much good, and that it is very likely to be misapplied, are both very obvious conclusions which few men of intelligence will deny. I have indeed been informed, but it seems almost too monstrous to be credited, that a proposal has been made to our Township Council to grant this sum of money as a loan to the Roman Catholic priests of this place, for the purpose of completing their new college. If the money is to be lent at interest, let it be a fair and open transaction; let advertisments be published that the council have £1200 to lend, and will receive tenders for the loan on unexceptionable security of real property. If then the college makes the best offer, let it be accepted; but I can, I repeat, hardly believe that the council, as guardians of the public interests, would have the assurance to favor the Roman Catholic priests, and to lend this money, granted originally for the purpose of maintaining "a Protestant clergy," and taken away from them to be applied for the benefit of all classes alike,—to lend, I say, this money to more favourable terms to the priests than to any one else, for the purpose of building up a Romish College!

Let the electors look to it before the municipal election.

Rector of Sandwich.

Rapid Increase of Canadian Trade with Great Britain.

The extraordinary rapidity with which Canada has advanced during the last few years, and the vast extent of her commercial transactions with this country, prove how important it is to have the means of communication with the colony as good as they can possibly be. We have on former occasions noticed the rapidity with which towns and cities spring up in Canada, how soon broad acres of fertile land are reclaimed from the forest, and how rapidly the emigrant becomes possessed of the means of ensuring an ample maintenance for himself and his dependants. No nation or community, with the solitary exception of the colony of Victoria, can boast of such extensive progress as Canada; but there is the important difference in the two cases, that the sudden rise of the Australian colony was almost solely attributable to the rush which was made for the recently discovered gold. In 1834 Canada imported goods to the amount of only £1,062,000 and exported in return produce and manufactures of her own soil to the amount of £1,018,000, but in 1854 the value of her exports and imports was not less than £13,945,000. If we analyze these figures, it will be found that the mother country supplies Canada with her manufactures to the amount of £4,622,000 the United States sent her £2,945,000, foreign countries, £268,507, and the adjoining British North American colonies, £159 000. Every person in Canada consumed, on an average, the produce of foreign countries to the amount of £3 13s 10d, while in the adjoining states the average consumption reached only £2 7s per head. The nature of the Canadian trade with foreign countries may be judged for by the following facts:—The produce of the forests of the colony—the vast timber trade which was exported, was of the value of £2,355, 000; of vegetable food, principally corn and flour, £1,993,000; animal produce, £342, 631; fish, £85,000; manufactures, £32,106; various agricultural products, £26,618; ship, £620,187. The total exports, if divided among the population, would give an average of 12s 4d to each individual, or 8s more than in the United States in 1854. The entire value of the British exports to the United States was £23,471,000, or about £1 per head of the population, while the consumption of British goods by the Canadians was at the rate of £2 6s 7d per head. —(London) Canadian News.

The Commercial Future of Canada.

The Chicago Tribune has the following, hinted upon the supposition that Mr. Cunard is to run a line of steamers to the St. Lawrence next season:

Canada is all alive. We have mingled with no people and met with no advisers of the people and their advisers over the border. Rival cities may conflict. Upper and Lower Canada may stand seemingly hostile in alluding to each other; but neither this conflict nor this hostility can stop the progress of Canada, or its development socially and commercially—on the contrary, the geographical position of the country over-riding social jealousies and sectional feeling, will lead, ultimately, to a unity of feeling and action, which will end in making Canada one in affection and in interest.

Suppose the Cunardes as regular in arrival and departure to Quebec and Montreal as they are to Boston and New York, and what must follow! That the facilities for transit between Chicago and Liverpool will be increased.—The St. Lawrence and Welland Canals will be enlarged—river difficulties overcome—so that the direct trade between Chicago and the St. Lawrence will become a large and increasing trade. Let us look to this a little. There is now a line of propellers running between Chicago and Ogdensburgh, and we learn, that the company are building some six new propellers for the coming spring. These all will trade more or less with Canada; probably the larger portion of their cargoes go to Canada. Now, if there were a direct line to Montreal and Quebec, transhipments, at points on the line, would be entirely avoided, time be avoided, and much time, as well as expense, saved thereby. To the establishment of this commercial course, it is necessary that the St Clair flats should be deepened, and the St Lawrence and Welland Canals enlarged.—The former will be done by our people, or the Government—the latter accomplished speedily by the Canadian Government.

DISASTERS TO STEAMERS.—The year about to close will present a fearful record of lives lost on steamers, mostly navigating inland waters. Ocean steamers have thus far been more favored than for several years. The list now stands as follows:

	Lives Lost
In March, ferry boat New Jersey,	32
June, steam'r Louisiana, Longueuil,	38
July, steam'r Northern Indiana, L. E.	18
July, propeller Tinto,	18
July, steam'r John Jay, Lake George,	15
July, steamer Empire State, "	14
Aug. steam'r Nautilus, Gulf Mexico,	40
Sep. steam'r Niagara, Lake Mich.,	66
Oct. steam'r Superior, Lake Mich,	35
Oct. propeller Lady Elgin, Lake Mich.,	300
Nov. steamship Le Monnaise,	78
Nov. propeller Toledo,	41
Total.	483

The gales on the lakes during the present season have been almost unprecedented in severity. Forty-nine vessels have been lost including seventeen steam craft and thirty-but two sailing vessels, and the loss of life is estimated at two hundred, at the lowest calculation.

DRUNKENNESS IN NEW YORK CITY.—Capron at the Union Temperance Meeting held in the Tabernacle, on Thursday the 11th inst., said, as the result of his own investigations that in New York City there are 15,000 dram shops, and 400,000 drunkards at the very least calculation, each of these drink two gills of intoxicating liquors every day, being equal to 800,000, or 806 barrels per day; 300,000 barrels in a year. This quantity would make a reservoir 900 feet long, 80 feet wide and 32 feet deep equal to 3,744,000 cubic feet, and could float four large ships in full sail. At $30, per barrel it amounts $9,000,000. 60,000 children never enter the school. During the year 60,000 arrests have been made and 45,000 convictions. At the Court of Special Sessions during the last year, 6,000 cases were tried, of which there were 4,200 convictions. Not more than 94 of the subjects of these trials were sober when arrested. Not more than 194 who were habitually sober persons. Paupers cost the city $300,000 a year. With regard to the number of dram shops and drunkards, the Judge has made a very extraordinary calculation. Dividing his totals by three would come much nearer the fact especially in the number of drunkards. The entire population of the city, over 15 years of age, is hardly 400,000.

A fatal malady has prevailed among hog in the Ohio Valley during the last six months It is computed that between 60,000 and 70, 000 have fallen victims to the destructive distemper within a radius of a hundred miles surrounding Cincinnati. The disease has completely baffled the most critical investigations into its nature, and has steadily resisted all remedial agents. The malady has been vaguely denominated "cholera," from the failure to discover its true character, and probably, also from the fact that it is epidemic.

Special Notices.

To Ladies.

Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are especially efficacious in all the variety of ailments incidental to the fair sex. They mildly and speedily remove all Skin Eruptions, Sallowness of Complexion, Nervous Irritability, Sick Headache, Hysterics, Depression of Spirits, irregularity, or General Derangement of the System and by assisting the Secretions, give such a healthy action to the Organs as to give the Complexion the rose tint, the constitution new tone and vigor to the whole frame. Married Ladies, even of the most delicate constitutions will find them particularly beneficial both previous and after confinement, and for the general use they cannot be too strongly recommended. They possess the eminent advantage over all other apperient medicines in that while they operate gently and without pain, they produce neither debility, costiveness, nor irritation, which is so apt to produce or aggravate the Piles.

No medicine ever introduced to the public has become so universally popular with Ladies as Sir Astley Cooper's Pills. They are of most astonishing efficacy, and they are confidently recommended to the fair sex for general use. A trial of a box of these Pills will at once prove the truth of this assertion.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—It frequently occurs that Druggists impose on their customers a spurious compound called Sir Astley Cooper's Pills generally put up in a red or pink wrapper and labelled prepared, or, as prepared at Apothecaries Hall, London, whereas the fact is, they are prepared by themselves.—Beware of such trash as you would of poison. The Genuine Pills have the likeness of Sir Astley Cooper on the Stamp, and likewise the fac-simile of the signature of the Proprietors, McPhail & Co. London and New York, on the directions.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in Family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom County Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at Apothecaries Hall, London, prices.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD ENANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virtues of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Sore throats, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which it heals, leave properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism Stiffness of the joints, any incorrection of the skin, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the principal hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Throats,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throats,
Lumbago,	Sores of all kinds,
Mercurial Eruptions,	Scalds,
Piles,	Stiff Joints,
Rheumatism,	Tetter,
Ringworm,	Ulcers,

THE NEW ILLUSTRATED

Hydropathic Encyclopedia,

A COMPLETE SYSTEM OF

HYDROPATHY & HYGIENE,

IN ONE LARGE VOLUME.

EMBRACING Outlines of Anatomy, Illustrated; Physiology of the Human Body; Hygienic Agencies and the Preservation of Health; Dietics and Hydropathic Cookery; Theory and Practice of Water Treatment; Special Pathology and Hydro-Therapeutics, including the Nature, Causes, Symptoms and Treatment of all known diseases; Application to Surgical Diseases; Application of Hydropathy to Midwifery and the Nursery; with three hundred engravings and nearly One Thousand Pages, including a Glossary, Table of Contents, and a complete Index. By R. T. TRALL, M. D.

Published by FOWLER and WELLS, New York.

In the plan of the work, the wants and necessities of the People have been steadily in view. While almost every topic of interest in the departments of Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Hygiene, Therapeutics is briefly presented, those of practical utility are always put prominently forward. The prevailing errors, conceits, and whims of the day and age are exposed and refuted; the theories and hypothesis upon which the popular drug practice is predicated are controverted, and the why and wherefore of their fallacy clearly demonstrated. The following is a brief analysis of its contents:

History of Medicine; History of Bathing; History of Medicated Baths.

Anatomy illustrated by One Hundred and Twenty appropriate engravings.

Physiology, illustrated, comprising the Rationale of Muscular Action; the Nervous Influence; Philosophy of Mind; Mesmeric Phenomena; the Special Senses; Functions of Digestion, Circulation, Respiration, Absorption, Nutrition, Secretion, Excretion, Calorification, Temperaments, the Races of Men, and Theory of Population.

Hygiene embracing all the relations of Air, Light, Drink, Food, Temperature, Exercise, Sleep, Clothing, Bathing, and the Passions, to the growth and development of Body and Mind, the Preservation of Health and the attainment of Longevity.

Dietetics, comprising the Bible, Anatomical, Physiological, Chemical and Experimental Evidence concerning the natural Dietetic Character of Man.

Hydropathic Cookery, with Specific Directions for the Preparation of Food for Dictaries, containing the Therapeutic Distinctions of Diet for Invalids.

Philosophy of Water-Cure, with illustrated explanations of all the water-cure appliances, a Philosophical Exposition of the modus operandi of water-treatment, and the true rationale of drug-treatment.

The Nature Symptoms and Treatment of all known Diseases are examined, the ill success of drug practice exposed, and the proper Medication recommended and specified. The Treatment of Special Diseases illustrated and the directions for the minor operations given.

The Management of Lying-in-Women, and the treatment of Children, &c.

The work is intended to be plain, intelligible and sufficient guide for domestic practice, or home treatment, in all ordinary diseases, embracing the whole range of subjects connected with the philosophy of life, the preservation of health, and the treatment of diseases.

This great work may be had in one large volume, bound in library style. Price prepaid by mail to any Post Office in United States or Canada, only THREE DOLLARS.

JOHN HE[illegible]

And no doubt very, draws one [illegible]

The Thriftless Farmer.

A contempory draws the following excellent portrait.

The thriftless farmer provides no shelter for his cattle, during the inclemency of winter but permits them to stand about during by the fence, or lie in the snow as best suits them.

He throws their fodder on the ground or in the mud, or not unfrequently in the high-ways, by which a large portion of it and all manure is wasted.

He grazes his meadows in fall and spring by which they are exhausted, and finally ruined.

His fences are old and poor—just such as to let his neighbor's cattle break into his fields, and teach his own to be unruly.

He neglects to keep the manure from around the sills of his barn, if he has one, by which they are prematurely rotted and destroyed.

He tills or skims over the surface of the land, until it is exhausted; but never thinks it worth while to manure or clover it. For the first he has no time, and for the last "he is not able."

He has more stock than he has means to keep well.

He has a place for nothing and nothing in its place. He consequently wants a hoe or a rake, a hammer or an auger, but knows not where to find it. He sends his whole household are in search of it, much time is lost.

He loiters away stormy days and evenings when he should be repairing utensils or improving his mind reading newspapers.

He spends much time in town at the corner of the street, or in the "snake holes" and goes home in the evening, "pretty well tore."

He plants a few trees, and his cattle forthwith destroys them. He has "no luck in raising fruit."

One half of the little he raises is destroyed by his own, or his neighbor's cattle.

He has no shed for his firewood, consequently his wife is out of humour, and his meals out of season.

His plough, drag and other implements, he leaves all winter as last used, and just as he is getting in a hurry the next season his plough breaks, because it was not properly housed, and cared for.

Somebody's hogs break in and destroys his garden, because he had not stopped a hole in the fence, that he had intended to stop for a week.

He is often in a great hurry, but will stop and talk as long as he can find any one to talk with.

He has, of course, little money; and when he must raise some to pay his taxes, &c., he raises it at a great sacrifice, in some way or other, either by a great "shave," or by selling his scanty crops when prices are low.

AYER'S PILLS

Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.

JULES HAUEL, Esq., the well known perfumer, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, whose choice products are found at almost every toilet, says:

"I am happy to say of your CATHARTIC PILLS, that, having found them a better family medicine, of common use, than any other within my knowledge. Many of my friends have tried and proved them, and all, like myself, are incite with me in believing that they possess extraordinary virtues for driving out diseases and curing the sick. They are not only effectual, but safe and pleasant to be taken—qualities which, to my mind, render them valued by the public when they are known."

The venerable Judge WARDLAW writes from Bellefonte, 15th April, 1854:

"Dr. J. C. AYER—Sir: I have taken your Pills with great benefit, for the listlessness, languor, loss of appetite, and bilious headache, which has of late years overtaken me in the spring. A few doses of your Pills cured me. I have used your Cherry Pectoral many years in my family for coughs and colds with unfailing success. You make medicines which cure: and I feel it a pleasure to commend you for the good you have done and are doing."

JOHN F. BEATTY, Esq., Sec. of the Penn. Railroad Co. says:

"Pa. R. R. Office, Philadelphia, Dec. 12, 1853.

"Sir: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicines, having derived very decided benefit from the use of both your Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. I am never without them—no family, nor child ever consent to be, while my means will procure them."

The widely known Dr. S. S. STEVENS, M. D., of Weathersfield, Vt., writes:

"Having used your CATHARTIC PILLS in my practice, I certify from experience that they are an invaluable purgative. In cases of disordered functions of the liver, stomach, headache, indigestion, costiveness, and the great variety of diseases that follow, they are a surer remedy than any other. In all cases where a purgative remedy is required, I confidently recommend these Pills to the public, as superior to any other I have ever found. They are safe in their operation, and perfectly safe—qualities which make them an invaluable article for public use. I have for many years known your Cherry Pectoral as the best Cough medicine in the world; and your Pills are but little less inferior to that admirable preparation for the treatment of disease."

"Acton, Me., Nov. 25, 1853.

"Dr. J. C. AYER—Dear Sir: I have been afflicted from my birth with scrofula in its worst form, and now, after twenty years of trial, am in the midst of anguish and suffering, have been completely cured in a few weeks by your Pills. With what feelings of rejoicing I write can only be imagined when you realize what I have suffered, and how long.

"Never until now have I been free from this loathsome disease in some shape. At times it attached my eyes, and made me almost blind, besides the inveterate sores on my body. At times it settled in the scalp of my head, and destroyed my hair, and has kept me partly bald all my days; sometimes it came out in my face, and kept it for months a raw sore.

"About one month ago I commenced taking your Cathartic Pills, and now am entirely free from the complaint. My eyes are well, my skin is fair, and my hair has commenced a healthy growth; all of which makes me feel already a new person.

"Hoping the statement may be the means of conveying information that shall lead to good we shall ever feel sentiment of gratitude, Yours, &c.,

MARIA RICKER."

"I have known the above named Maria Ricker from her childhood upwards, and believe her statement to be true.

ANDREW J. MESERVE,
Overseer of the Falmouth Manufacturing Co."

CAPT. JOEL PRATT, of the ship Marion, writes from Boston, 30th April, 1854:

"Your Pills have cured me from a bilious attack which arose from derangement of the Liver, which had become very serious. I had failed of any relief by my Physician, and from every remedy I could try; but a few doses of your Pills have completely restored me to health. I have given them to my children for worms, with the best of effects. They operate admirably. I recommend them often to a friend for costiveness, which had troubled him for months; he took a few days ago my last box, and is cured. You make the best medicine in the world; and I am free to say so."

Read this from the distinguished Solicitor of the Supreme Court, whose brilliant abilities have made him well known, not only in this but the neighboring States.

"New Orleans, 5th April, 1854.

"Sir: I have great satisfaction in assuring you, for myself and family have been very much benefited by your medicines. One of my children was cured, years since, of a severe and dangerous cough, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then we have used it in our family with the same result. I have several times been cured from attacks of the Influenza and Croup by it. It is an invaluable remedy for these complaints. Your CATHARTIC PILLS have also relieved me from a dyspepsia and costiveness, which has grown upon me for some years, and, indeed, this cure is more important, from the fact that I had failed to get relief from the best medical skill that the country afforded, and from any of the numerous remedies I had taken.

"You seem to us, Doctor, like a providential blessing to our family, and we shall ever suppose we are not of mindful of it. Yours respectfully,

LEAVITT THAXTER."

"Dr. J. C. AYER—Honored Sir: I have made a thorough trial of the CATHARTIC PILLS, left me by your agent, and have been cured by them of the dreadful Rheumatism under which he found me prostrate. The first dose he left relieved me, and a few subsequent doses have entirely removed the disease. I feel in better health now than for some years before, which I attribute entirely to the effects of your CATHARTIC PILLS. You may use this as you please.

LUCIUS B. METCALF."

The above are all from persons who are publicly known where they reside, and who would not make these statements without a thorough conviction that they were true.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE & STATISTICS,
TORONTO, 25th July, 1856

To Emigrants & Others Seeking LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

THE Provincial Government have recently opened out three great lines of road, now in course of completion, and have surveyed and laid out for settlement the Lands on each side and in the vicinity of, which those Roads pass.

The Roads, as advertised by the Agents of the Government, appointed to the respective localities to afford information to the Settler, are known as

THE OTTAWA AND OPEONGO ROAD,
THE ADDINGTON ROAD, and
THE HASTINGS ROAD,

The Ottawa and Opeongo Road

Commences at a point on the Ottawa River known as "Fremla," a little above the mouth of the Bonchere River, and runs in a Westerly direction, passing through the northerly part of the County of Renfrew.

It is intended to connect this road with a projected line of road known as "Bell's Line," (leading to the Lake Muskako, and Lake Huron, by a branch which will diverge from the Opeongo Road in the Township of Brudnell, at a distance of about 38 miles from the River Ottawa, forming with "Bell's Line," a great leading road, or base line from the Ottawa to Lake Muskako, 171 miles in length. Should Mount St. Patrick, next described, on the Opeongo Road, a few miles from the Lands which are to be granted.—To reach the section of Country under Dr. Frenell's charge, the Settler must go from MONTREAL up to the Ottawa River to a place called Bonchere Point, and thence by land some twenty-five or thirty miles westward to the Township of Grattan, in which Mount St Patrick is situated.

The Addington Road

Commencing in the Township of Anglesea, in the northern part of the County of Addington, near the Village of Flint's Mills, Kaladar, runs almost due north to the River Ottawa a distance of 85 miles, and is about to be continued thence for the distance of 25 miles till it intersects to Ottawa and Opeongo Road.

The Agent for the granting of the Land in this district is Mr. E. Perry, who, for that purpose, is now resident at FLINT'S MILLS. The outlines of five townships of very superior land are already surveyed and ready for settlement within the limits of the Agency, lying north of Lake Massanoka, and between it and the River Nadawaska. The Townships are named respectively Anslinger, Denbigh Ashley, Effingham, Anglesea, and Barrie.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada Westward, to and to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

Hastings Road!

Almost parallel to the Addington Road, and at a distance West from it of about 36 miles is the HASTINGS ROAD. This road beginning at the northern part of the County of Hastings, and running a distance of 74 miles, almost due north, also intersects the OTTAWA and OPEONGO ROAD and its extensions.

The Government Agent is Mr. M. P. Hayes, who resides at the Village of Madoc, largely called Madoc, about 23 miles north of the Town of Belleville. The Road between these places is in good order. The land to be granted by the Crown and to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

The direct route to this section is by way of Kingston, Canada West, from thence to the Township of Kaladar, and the Village of FLINT'S MILLS, where Mr. Perry resides.

This Agency extends from 15 to 17 miles north of the Village of Hastings. The Road through this large extent of land is passable for 40 miles, and money is now being expended to extend it 30 miles further, so that Settlers can get in and out without difficulty, and find a good market for surplus produce, as well as convenient facilities for bringing in whatever supplies they may require—abundance of which can be had at the Village of Hastings, where goods are constantly kept on hand.

The direct way to reach this Station, which is easily accessible, is by Kingston Canada West, thence by Steamboat up the Bay of Quinte to Belleville 36 miles, and thence by a good Road to Hastings, 28 miles.

In order to facilitate the Settlement of the County, and provide for the keeping in repair the Roads thus opened, the Government authorised Free Grants of Land along these Roads, not to exceed in each case ONE HUNDRED ACRES, upon application to the Local Agents, and upon the following

CONDITIONS

That the Settler be eighteen years of age.

That he take possession of the Land allotted to him within one month, and put in a state of cultivation at least twelve acres of the land in the course of four years—build a house (at least 20 by 18 feet) and reside on the lot until the conditions of settlement are duly performed, after which such completion sent only shall the settler have the right of obtaining a title to the property. Families comprising several settlers entitled to lands, preferring to reside on one lot, will be exempted from the obligation of building and of residence, (except upon the lot on which they live provided that the required clearing of the lands be made on each lot). The non-accomplishment of these conditions will cause the immediate loss of the assigned lot of land, which will be sold or given to other settlers.

The road having been opened by the Government, the settlers are required to keep it in repair.

The Local Agents, whose names and places of abode have already been given, will furnish every information to the intending Settler.

The LOG HOUSE required by the Government to be built, is of such description as can be put up in four days by five men. The neighbours generally help to build the Log Cabin for newly arrived Settlers, without charge; and when this is done the cost of the erection is small; the roof can be covered with bark, and the space between the logs plastered with clay, and white-washed. It will then form a neat dwelling and warm as a stone house.

The lands thus opened up and offered for settlement, are, in sections of Canada West, unsurpassed as to Soil and Climate, producing abundant crops of winter wheat, of excellent quality and full weight, also crops of every other description of farm produce, grown in the best and most cultivated districts of that portion of the Province, and fully as good.

There are, of course, in such a large extent of country as that referred to, great varieties in the character and quality of land —some lots being much superior to others; but there is an abundance of the very best land for farming purposes. The Lands in the neighbourhood of these three roads will be found to be very similar in quality and character, and covered with every variety of Timber—some with hard wood, and some with heavy pine.

Water for domestic use is every where abundant; and there are, throughout, numerous streams and falls of water, capable of being used for Manufacturing purposes.

The heavy timbered land is almost always the best, and of it, the ashes of three acres, well taken care and covered from wet—will produce a barrel of Potash, worth from £5 to £7 currency. The capital required to manufacture Potash is very small, and the process is very simple and easily understood.

The expense of clearing and enclosing heavily Timbered Lands, valuing the labor of the settlers at the highest rate, is about FOUR POUNDS Currency per Acre, which the first wheat crop, if an average one, will nearly repay. The best timber for fencing is to be had in abundance.

A settler on these lands, possessing a capital from £50 to £50, according to the number of his family, will soon make himself comfortable, and obtain a rapid return for his investment. The single man, able and willing to work, will also find it easy, besides his own arm and axe—he can devote a portion of the year to clearing his land, and in the numerous lumbering establishments he has ready employment, obtain a liberal remuneration for his labor.

The climate throughout these Districts is good. The snow does not fall so deep as to hinder communication; and it affords material for good roads during the winter, enabling the farmer to haul in his Firewood for the ensuing year from the woods, to take his produce to market, and to lay in his supplies for the future—and this early in the earth, not only facilitates communication with the more settled parts of the District, but is highly beneficial and fertilizing to the soil.

In all the localities above named, wherever Settlers have surplus produce, there is a good market for it near to them—farm produce of all kinds being in great demand by the Lumber or Timber Merchants, who are carrying on extensive operations throughout these parts of the country.

According to the ratios of progress which Canada West has made during the last ten years, the value of property on an average doubles within that period—irrespective of any increase in value which may have been made by the Settlers.

In many Counties the value of Land, once opened for settlement, has increased FIVE FOLD in a very few years, and the average value of such land, according to the statistics of Canada West, Doubles every ten years in the more lapse of time, excelusive of any expenditure thereon—and it is not too much to expect that this ratio will not diminish for generations to come.

The Sections of Country opened by these roads lie in and to the Southern part of the Great Ottawa Region, stretching from and beyond them to the shores of Lake Huron, to Lake Nipissing, and to the Ottawa "River" —an immense extent of country whose resources are now seeking and will rapidly obtain development.

The Ottawa Country

Lying south of Lake Nipissing and of the great River Ottawa, and embracing a large portion of the land offered for settlement, is capable of sustaining a population of eight mill ons of people, and it is now attracting general attention, as the more western portions of Canada are being rapidly filled up.

The Parliament of Canada in its last Session incorporated a Company for the construction of a Railway to pass through this country from Toronto, by Lake Simcoe, to Huron to the City of the Ottawa, and thence Eastward.

A survey of the River Ottawa and the neighbouring Country has been under taken and will be completed in the present year; its principal object being to ascertain by what means the River Ottawa can be rendered navigable and connected with Lake Huron so as to enable vessels to pass by that route from the most Western Waters into the River St. Lawrence and the Ocean. These are but a few items are alluded to in order to show that the attention of the Government, Parliament and People of Canada, has been fixed upon this important portion of the Province.

T. & J. HARRIS,
Hamilton, Feb. 29th, 1856.

A DAILY AND A WEEKLY FOR $3.50

Those of our readers of this paper who desire a daily review of the doings in New York and other markets, may be accommodated on the following terms. For $3.50 we will send the Commercial Gazette and Marine Record a full year, and we will subscribe for the Daily Clevelander for one year and send the Publisher's receipt in two weeks.

The "Clevelander" is the size of this paper, is printed on minion and agate type, and on heavy white paper. The report of New York markets will be prepared by us, and we need not repeat that neither patience nor skill, will be spared to make it full and correct in every particular. The New York, Buffalo and Oswego reports are furnished by the N. Y. associated press, and will be correctly rendered. As a newspaper the "Clevelander" is perhaps equal to any daily in the State. Recollect, only $3.50 for the "Daily Clevelander" and the "Commercial Gazette" for one year. Parts of a dollar may be sent in postage stamps. For two dollars the two papers will be sent six months.

The Illustrated Horticulturist,
AND JOURNAL OF SUBURBAN ART.

An elegantly illustrated Monthly Journal, containing seventy-two large royal octavo pages, devoted to the Rural Arts and the advancement of the Science of Horticulture in the United States.

The want of such a magazine has long been experienced. The growing interest with which the present generation view the science of Horticulture, renders such a Journal as "The Illustrated Horticulturist" imperatively necessary to the progress of Rural affairs.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features; each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by many talented and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape Gardening, engraved plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the particular circumstances of different orders of architecture, beautifies the work.

To Nurserymen, Amateur Cultivators, and to all who can boast the sovereignty of a square rod of tillable earth, "The Illustrated Horticulturist and Journal of Suburban Art" will prove an invaluable companion. The extraordinary low price at which it is afforded; together with its really superior execution, both in regard to typography and editorial ability, must make it the most popular work of the kind in America.

"The Illustrated Horticulturist" is printed on the finest quality of pearl surfaced paper, manufactured expressly for the issued regularly the first of each month, commencing with July, 1855. The following gentlemen, eminent for their ability in the science of Horticulture, have kindly consented to conduct the Editorial department: H. P. KNIGHT, JAMES SNOWDEN and D. W. RAY.

Terms: Two Dollars per annum, payable invariably in advance. A liberal discount to the Trade, Postmasters, and getters-up of Clubs.

Advertisements inserted at the rate of Ten Dollars per page.

N.B.—Newspapers inserting the above prospectus, and drawing attention editorially to the same, will be forwarded the ILLUSTRATED HORTICULTURIST for one year, a copy containing the advertisement should be sent in all cases to ensure attention.

NEW VOLUME OF THE
AGRICULTURIST
SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

The Canadian Agriculturist

Has now reached the eighth volume, having been established by its present proprietor in 1848, and is too well known to the leading farmers of the British Provinces, to need comment from us. The undersigned have made arrangements with the proprietor to publish the next, and probably succeeding volumes, and have resolved to make important improvements in the work, while at the same time its price will be considerably reduced.

THE AGRICULTURIST

Is published Monthly, on good Paper, each number containing 32 pages making at the end of the year a handsome volume of 384 pages.

EVERY NUMBER WILL BE
Illustrated with Engravings

Such as Farm Buildings, Portraits of Animals, designs of Farm Buildings, New Inventions, &c., &c., interesting to the Farmer, and also portraits of some of the most Distinguished Agriculturists.

The Work will be conducted as usual by WILLIAM MACDOUGALL, Esq., who has resumed the practice of Agriculture near this city. The experience of the country, improvements made in our Agricultural Legislation since 1847, and having also been connected with this Journal from its commencement, he requires no recommendation from us.

PROFESSOR BUCKLAND, of the Toronto University, whose labors and writings in behalf of Canadian Agriculture are known and appreciated throughout the Province, will contribute to its columns as usual.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS

Of known ability have also been engaged. Efforts will be made to extend the correspondence on subjects of practical interest.

THE AGRICULTURIST IS NOT LIABLE TO POSTAGE.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - 32
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.
THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's New Method, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.
THE METHOD OF TEACHING
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mystery, made such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.
THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than mere routine, and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and to guides for such by arbitrary and much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.
THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.
THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that graduately) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.
PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
THE LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new and beautiful rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Canadian Sleigh Song.

BY CHAS. SANGSTER.

Tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
Merrily, merrily, O,
Chime the tuneful sleigh bells,
Singing to the snow;
Tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
Merrily, merrily, O,
Laughs the dimpled maiden,
Chatting to her beau.

Tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
Merrily, merrily, O,
What is glorious winter
Without frost and snow,
Time may cast a shadow
O'er us as we go,
But let us, like the sleigh bells,
Sing, merrily, merrily, O.

Tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
Merrily merrily, O,
Life is but a sleigh drive
Through the frost and snow;
Ever are we learning
This one truth as we go:
All sadness without sunlight
Is like winter without snow.

"Ring—ye happy bells,
Ring your last farewells
To the lying year,
He hath brought us grief:
Ye bring us relief,
For his end is near.

"Yet ring sadly, too,
For some tears are due
To the dying year,
Though mixed with annoy,
He hath brought us joy,
And his end is near!

Mingled tears and sighs—
Blessed memories
Of the dying year!
Who can tell if this
Next New Year may bliss?
Oh, the end is near!

"Thus for the last time
In this simple rhyme—
Dying—dying year,
I address thee. Bells!
Ring your last farewells,
Ring them loud and clear!

"Hark! 'tis their first knell:
Hush! 'tis their farewell
To the dying year.
One from earth hath gone—
This another one.
And the end is here!"

The Pledge Redeemed.

A TRUE TALE.

Towards the close of the reign of Louis XIV. a plant of Mocha coffee was brought to the king's garden, which very soon increased; and the genius of the government of that day thought that, by transplanting into their West India colonies this shrub an immense source of riches might be opened to the country. The carrying out of this idea was entrusted to Chevalier Desclieux, who, provided with a young coffee set out from Nantes, thence to convey it to Martinique. Imbedded in its native mould, the priceless exile was placed in an oak-wood box, impenetrable to cold, and covered with a frame so formed as to catch the least ray of the sun and double in heat; and in case the sun did not shine, a small aperture, hermetically sealed, could admit heated air when it was thought proper to do so. We can imagine all the charges Desclieux received when he entered the ship in which he was to embark; but he did not heed them; he saw at a glance all the distinctions he would gain by the expedition, which would secure to his country inexhaustible sources of riches. It was, then, with a really patriotic feeling, that he took the plant under his care promising to devote himself to it as he would to his country, and to all the duties of his profession. And when the skiff, after having quitted the vessel, returned again to renew the charge, and to remind Desclieux once more that the plant must be watered every day, and that copiously, he pledged his honor that, rather than fail in this, he would himself die of thirst.

The ship sailed, the crew was composed of one hundred men, and of some passengers about to settle in the Antilles, amongst whom was an amiable family, consisting of a father, mother, and their only daughter Louise, a beautiful and accomplished girl of eighteen. In a vessel where people are so much thrown together, meeting constantly for a length of time is required to form an intimacy which often ripens into lasting friendships; and this it proved in the case of the parents of Louise and Desclieux.

Scarcely had they passed the light-house, of Cordouan, glittering in the twilight of a lovely evening, when they were already friends. Already this fresh and delicate plant, interesting as an exile, as a flower transplanted from its own soil, as a child torn from its mother, became a mutual object of attraction. It was thus that Louise pointed it out to her parents as it lay on the deck in its glass case, exposed to the mid-day sun. She charmed the tedium of the voyage in hourly watching the progress which she believed visible in the feeble offset. She had felt interested in it from the moment Desclieux had shown her all the glory he was to gain by it for France, and then she had become attached to it; for it is a beautiful proof of the magnanimity of woman—their love for all that is glorious—Even during the five days they had been at sea, the little coffee plant had evidently increased; two small leaves of a most delicate green had appeared; and every morning Louise's first thought after prayer was the cherished plant; but she could not see it till Desclieux had left his room, for he always kept the sacred deposit with him. Every evening he watered it abundantly, and then let hot air into the frame by means of the tube, as he had been directed; he kept it so close as possible to him at night, that even during sleep he might administer heat to it. Never did a hen brood over its young more fondly, never did mother nurse or cherish more tenderly the new-born babe.

As soon as Desclieux appeared on deck in the morning to lay his precious charge in the sun, Louisa immediately ran. She delighted to point out to her mother its growth imperceptible to indifferent eyes but she had become attached to it; and as the slightest emotions are visible to us in the features of those we love, though unperceived by strangers, so she discovered the least change even in the thickness of the stalk or the length of the leaves; and Desclieux, seeing the young girl thus attaching herself to what had been confided to him, and what he so cherished, felt touched and grateful.

They met with a terrible assault when close to Madeira. It was about the middle of a dark night, though not stormy; the vessel was gliding noiselessly along: and all were asleep except the officer on watch —and indeed he too perhaps slept, or he would have heard the noise of a heel among the waves as a bird's wing cuts the air, and, he would have cried "Ship ahoy!" A ship was indeed quite close to Desclieux's vessel, and the token it gave of its vicinity was a cannonade which awoke every one in a moment, both crew and passengers.

It was a pirate vessel of Tunis, a poor chebeck, but formidable in the night—a time that magnifies every fear—and formidable, too, from the desperate bravery of the banditti who manned her. Believing themselves surprised by superior force, the ship's crew prepared for a resistance as desperate as the attack. Better far to die than to be carried slaves to Africa! All the passengers were at prayer, distracted, trembling, or half dead. Louisa alone remained calm, for she was supported by the thought that her Desclieux had entrusted his precious charge. The fight commenced; the ship fired eight cannon on the chebeck; and it was time, for already the captain had boarded the French ship, but was immediately cut down by her crew. The assault was repulsed, guns on each side, and the firing ceased. The pirate felt its inferiority, and retreated, while the conquerors continued their course.

Two hours of torturing suspense had passed since the terrible awakening, which but served to make the feeling of restored security the more delightful and the remainder of the night was spent in relating the events of the rencontre. Louisa's was not the least interesting; she had been regardless of danger during the combat, while watching over her charge; then she took it to Desclieux, who admired her the more—loved her the more—for courage, always beautiful, has a still greater charm when displayed by a woman.

It was a lovely morning; the sun was unusually bright and warm, and Desclieux left on the deck, the better to watch over it. We admit the fresh air and reviving heat, while, he with Louisa and her parents, sat near and enjoyed seeing it expand its pretty leaves, and, as it were, smiling to greet the sun's rays, which infused into it such genial warmth, and seeming to thank them for their care.

But Desclieux's brow now kindled with higher thoughts. In this feeble offset he saw the little starry flowers, then the perfumed berries, and the negroes gathering it abundantly, and then the ocean, bearing vessels to France laden with its produce.—All this he could see in the few small leaves scarcely above the ground. Enthusiastically did he tell these bright visions to Louisa, and as she kindled in her turn, the coffee plant became dearer to her, and she lavished all the tenderness upon it as she would upon a new-born brother. She seemed to have common sympathies with it, and if she felt that the heat might be too much for its slender stem, she drew over it little curtains of green silk which she had made expressly for it, just as the tender mother curtains the cradle of her infant. And then she read to Desclieux and her parents a long account of the coffee of Mocha, and pictured vividly to their imagination, the tree to grow out of the nursling whose infancy they watched over. Sometimes the conversation took a different turn, and the parents of Louisa spoke, as if to an old familiar friend, of their fortunes, of their views for the establishment of their only daughter; and Desclieux in turn imparted to them his plans. By degrees these communications led to projects of marriage between him and Louisa. It was no unpleasing thought to either, and the very day they crossed the line, a declaration was made, and an engagement formed, and it was agreed that their union should take place immediately on their return to France.

We may well think that Louisa became more attached than ever to the plant, now become a source of distinction in which she would one day share; imagine then, her consternation when one morning, she beheld it languishing. She said nothing, hoping it might revive; but the next morning found its leaves still more withered. She did not trust herself to speak it to Desclieux, who also had but too plainly seen it. At last the thought occurred to him that, while in the intense heat of the tropics, the plant would require more water, he therefore poured on it almost his whole allowance. The effect was immediate in restoring its life and verdure, and Louisa was again happy.—The ship was some hundred leagues from Martinique, when a violent tempest arose, apparently the last of a fearful hurricane which had raged through the Antilles. It was found that the ship had sprung a leak; the pumps were not sufficient; they were in immediate danger, and the necessity of lightening the vessel so urgent that they were forced to throw overboard almost all the merchandise, a part of the ballast, and even several barre's of water. This last sacrifice was an appalling one; it was with a solemn feeling they saw it, similar to that which one hears the earth fall upon a coffin, or gives to the plunged into the ocean for its tomb. Indeed these casks of water carried with them the lives of many individuals, who had now no escape from a cruel death by thirst. Desclieux, impressed like the others, with this idea, only thought of his precious coffee-plant. However they were not far from port, and, with a favorable wind, might get in in a few days; and in effect the tempest being over and the leak closed with great difficulty, a fresh breeze sprang up, and for a day and a night the ship sailed fast, and the stormy state of the atmosphere had produced on the coffee-plant the usual effect. It might almost have said to have flourished the more in the tempest. Louisa and Desclieux contemplated it with a sweet joy, as at once the emblem and omen of domestic happiness, amid the storm of life. But, alas! the wind suddenly lulled—not the least breath to fill the sails, not a wave broke against the motionless vessel; an awful calm succeeded! and what is more terrible upon this scene of continual agitation than a calm, unvoiced and too often fatal! The dead heat of the tropics was felt in all its power by the helpless voyagers; they languished and fainted with continual thirst, and horrible to relate, the water was failing, for they had thrown so much overboard that they were limited to a mere small allowance—a cupful at the very most.

If men, notwithstanding their energies, sunk under the sufferings caused by the intense heat and burning thirst, what must have been the state of the poor little plant, to which fated were Louisa's eyes! It had its allowance also, but it was not enough; and every morning and evening, Desclieux gave it his, only for which it would have died. Louisa was astonished to see the feeble plant yet bearing up; but Desclieux carefully concealed from her that he was using, lest she also would deprive herself of water for it, and that he did not wish; he preferred suffering alone, and long sojourn in the hottest parts of Arabia, had in a great measure inured him to the climate, so that he did not fear it so much as others. The claim was uninterrupted, the remainder of the water was nearly exhausted, their situation was become dreadful, and there was no hope, in their case, of any relief from another vessel, for all were alike becalmed; and it was sad to see the ocean without a sail in the horizon, or if there was one, it too was motionless. Their ration of water was now reduced to one liquor glass. One drop, only to moisten his lips, and Desclieux poured the rest on the plant, now apparently dying.

"Alas! how you are changed!" said Louisa to him one day; "how pale you have become. You are suffering; this heat is killing you."

He knew it; but he had promised to water the plant, even though he himself was to die of thirst; and he was faithful to his word. One evening, when Louisa and her parents were questioning him, he was answered in a feeble voice: "You are right; I die of thirst, that my charge may live. It was my duty. —and saying these words, he laid his parched lips upon its withered leaves, as one would kiss the hand of an expiring friend, and continued: "You have all promised to love me; if I do not live be careful of this coffee-plant, which held out to us such brilliant prospects. I ask it of you as a favor, and bequeath to you the distinction I hoped to have gained by it." At that moment they were distributing the scanty portion of water, and though he was perishing, he threw the whole of it upon the shrub—Louisa did the same. It was, as it were, a sacred bond between them —an indissoluble tie. I am convinced that many of our readers have frequently felt a lively and almost inexplicable pleasure in watering a flower dried up by the scorching sun, and, in seeing it revive, have felt as if benefitted themselves. What pleasure, then, it must have given to Desclieux and Louisa to see their plant raise its sickly leaves once more!

As length the wind began to rise lightly, and the vessel moved, though slowly. Desclieux was ill—in a burning fever—but he continued to share with the plant his allowance of water, and Louisa added hers. It increased their happiness that it owed its life to the most touching self-denial; and it seemed as if their household life had begun in a common endurance of suffering.

The breeze still freshened; and when the vessel anchored in the port of St. Pierre, there was not a single drop of water on board. But the coffee-plant was saved; the colony enriched by it; Desclieux's pledge redeemed; and three months after, Louisa was his wife.

Miscellany.

BREVITY OF ANCIENT SCOTCH LAWS.—Judging from our statute book, our ancestors must have been men of few words—men fond of deeds rather than words. It is refreshing, after reading some of our complex and lengthened modern Acts of Parliament, to turn to a Scotch Act of Parliament, in the reign of James the First, which briefly and pithily enacts that 'nae man should enter any place were there is nay with a candle, unless it be in a lantern. The whole of the Scotch Acts of Parliament passed in the reign of James the First, extending over 13 Parliaments, and amounting to 133 in number, are comprehended in 46 pages of a small duodecimo volume, and that volume contains the whole Scotch Acts of Parliament, from 1426 to 1621, being nearly 200 years. The annual Mutiny Act of Queen Victoria, for the regulation of the army, is many times more bulky than the Acts of the whole thirteen Parliaments of the first royal ancestor in the Stuart line.

AN IRISHMAN'S LOGIC.—'Pat,' said a gentleman, who keeps horses, to his groom, 'when a horse comes home off a long journey, be sure to pull his ears well—it's nearly as good as a feed of corn to him, and refreshes him greatly.' 'Is it to pull his ears, sur? Sure an' divil a ha'porth of good 'ud that do 'im, at all, at all. 'I tell you, you think it would'nt do him good?' 'Sure, sur, by the same token, that last night when I tuk yez home wid the sup of liquor an yees, the misthress thried the same pulling of ears on yersilf, an' ye didn't same a bit refreshed after it.' The gentleman walked into the 'Tunnel' for a 'refresher.'

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS have a cosmopolitan reputation. In every land Christian or savage, to which commerce has carried them, they have become standard remedies for the most painful and dangerous complaints to which humanity is liable. The ointment is an acknowledged specific for all eruptive, tumorous, and ulcerous disorders, and thereis no disease of the stomach, the liver or the bowels, that may not be subdued by a persistent use of the Pills.

THE RECTORY CASE.—Another step, says the Globe, has been taken in this important case, which has for several years been dragging its way through the courts. During the last two days the Court of Appeals have been hearing counsel for and against the appeal from the judgment of the Court of Chancery. Messrs. Mowat, Connor, and Macdonald argued for setting aside the decision of the Court; Messrs Hillyard Cameron, and D. B. Read sustained it. As we reported the proceedings very fully when the case was last heard, we think it unnecessary to repeat them on the present occasion.—Justices Hagarty and Richards having withdrawn from the Bench, as they have both been engaged in the suit, while practising at the Bar, the appeal was heard by Chief Justice Draper, Justices McLean and Burns, and Vice Chancellors Sprague and Easton. Judgment was reserved till a future term.

"BLACK TUBE"—The Colonist states about two miles from the Village of Weston, an engineer discovered that a certain cedar swamp supposed to be at one time overflowed by the Humber, and containing about 150 acres, is the repository of an inexhaustible amount of turf. That some Irish laborers have prepared several waggon loads, which was found to yield a pleasanter fire than wood. It is in every respect the same as the turf found in the bogs at Ould Ireland, and will prove a source of revenue to the fortunate proprietor. As a proof of the close resemblance of this turf to that so generally used in Ireland, a story is told of a piece being shown to an old Irish laborer, who actually burst into tears at the sight of so grateful and unexpected Sovereign of the old sod. One can hardly imagine anything which would so strikingly recall the cherished, though perhaps dim, reminiscences of the joys and cares discussed or mused over by the old fireside at home.

Alexander Smith's humor is peerless. H under the influence of a kiss, is reckless, bloody and dangerous to all monarchial institutions. To do all he says needs only the impulse of a "timid" kiss. Just submit Alexander to a kiss as the second lady speaks about, and he would unseat the Czar and run riot over his throne in a single night. "Choke off" that fellow you who have friends among the ladies:

"My soul leaped up beneath thy timid kiss;
What then to me were groans,
Or pain! or death! Earth was round of bliss,
I seemed to walk on thrones."

A CHILD SAVED BY A DOG.—On Wednesday last, a remarkable instance of the sagacity of a dog took place in this town. A little girl about seven years old, the daughter of Mr. James Gray, was standing in the middle of the road, opposite his residence, when a person came driving along at a rapid rate in a sleigh. A dog belonging to the person in the sleigh was running beside it, and the sagacious animal seeing the child just in the track, jumped forward and in an instant dragged the child out of the way, allowing the team to pass it without injury. The act was witnessed by a number of persons in the neighbourhood; but the owner of the sleigh drove on, and it is not known who he is. There is not the slightest doubt but the sagacious dog saved the life of the child.—Mercury.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.—As man is the only animal who laughs it is hardly fair to presume that the privilege was bestowed upon him for nothing. Let us laugh, then while we may, no matter how broad the laugh may be, short of a lock jaw, and despite of what the poet says of "the long laugh that speaks the vacant mind." Why should'nt the mind be occasionally vacant, as hands are sometimes suffered to lie fallow. Remember the old couplet.

"Care, to our coffin adds a nail no doubt,
But every grin, so merry, draws one out."

Great Britain.

A deputation from the Liverpool and London merchants had waited on Lord Clarendon, to ascertain what is meant by the British demonstration against New Granada.

Father Mathew died at Cork on the 9th.

Felix Orsini, the Italian exile, was lecturing in London, on Italian tyranny.

Mr. Richard Cobden has published another letter on maritime law.

The London Times has an editorial backing out of the Arrowsmith Georgia railroad and revolver hoax. It is reported that Arrowsmith has returned to the United States.

Dr. Livingston, the celebrated African traveller, has reached Marseilles, on his way homeward.

The corporation and citizens of Portsmouth have subscribed £1,000 to give a banquet to the American officers in command of the British ship "Resolute." The naval service at Portsmouth contemplate a similar compliment.

The English papers re-publish the correspondence between Generals Walker and Goicouria, mostly without remark.

Moussoud Bey, on the part of the Pacha of Egypt, had an interview with the Manchester Commercial Association, on the subject of growing cotton in the district watered by the river Tigris.

The British Government is about to lay a telegraph line across the Persian Gulf.

FRANCE.

It is rumoured that Cardinal Morlot's mission to Rome relates to the conversion of Napoleon, which, should peace be consolidated, will probably take place early next year.

A formal announcement had appeared in the Moniteur, that the Congress of Paris will re-assemble this month. It is now reported that the plenipotentiaries will be the same as before. Count Walewski represents France; Lord Clarendon, England; Count Cavour, Sardinia; and Ali Pasha, Turkey.

The Havre Journal has a Cayenne letter of Nov. 5th, stating that gold had been discovered in several parts of the colony.

Many shipping casualties are reported from the Mediterranean.

In anticipation of the forced sales at the end of the year, more activity has been shown in the Parisian factories, but retail trade was not so brisk as usual. Disappointment was felt at the Bank of France not relaxing its security measures. It was considered that ninety days discounts might be granted with safety. Export trade was flat. A few orders had been received from South America and Spain, and but very few from the United States; nevertheless, the position of commercial affairs was regarded as not unfavorable. Corn was falling, though but slowly, in all the markets of France. Letters from Rouen mention that the market for manufactured goods has been quiet, with but little variation in rates.

PRUSSIA.

Prussia has communicated the resolution of the German Diet on the question of the Neufchatel princes to the Court of Berlin, inviting them to join in a collective decision, with a view to secure her recognized rights. It is likely that the Prussians of Neufchatel will have been judged by the time an answer to this circular is received; but the Federal Council of Switzerland is said to have given a formal promise to the Cabinets of London and Paris that an amnesty shall be granted immediately afterward. In the course of the negotiations on this question, France and Austria have advised Prussia to abstain from military measures, but have promised positively to support her views.

ITALY.

The Baltic carried the intelligence that an unsuccessful attempt had been made to assassinate the King of Naples on the 8th inst. The announcements of the affair differ. The first announcement said—"At noon to day there was a review, and while the troops were defiling, a soldier of the third battalion of chasseurs rushed from the ranks and struck the King on the left side, knocking him down, when the soldier was seized by Col. Latour." Another despatch says —"The bayonet of the soldier struck the King on the right side, above the waist."—A third despatch intimated that the King was slightly wounded, and a fourth despatch that the soldier fired his carbine at the King and that the would be assassin was killed on the spot. The telegraphs from Italy are wholly in the power of the governments, and hence the accounts of the affair are not reliable.

The accounts from Palermo says that the insurrection which broke out there on the 22nd ultimo, at the head of which was Baron Benbenda and a number of ex-deputies of the Sicilian Parliament, had been suppressed, and that Baron Benbenda had been taken prisoner. From Messina even worse is reported as being quiet. The police had seized a quantity of muskets which had been landed for the insurgents. Count Lovatelli, an eminent liberal of the Roman States, had been assassinated at Ravenna.

RUSSIA.

The text of the note addressed by Russia, at the end of October last, to the powers that signed the treaty of Paris, has been published. It is accompanied by a circular demanding the re-assembling of the Congress. This circular contains an exposition of the steps taken by the Russian Cabinet with a view to the fulfilment of the Articles 20 and 21 of the treaty of Paris. As regards the Isle of Serpents, the Russian Government says that the island was incontestably in possession of Russia before the rupture with respect to the Bessarabia frontier question. The memorandum mentions two instances of concession by Russia with regard to the course of the Upper Yalpuk and Bolgrad. The memorandum defines the views of Russia, and states that the map from which the frontier line was defined at the Paris conference also states that Count Walewski asked Baron Brunow whether the Court of Russia would abide by the majority of votes at the coming conferences, and that the Russian Cabinet had telegraphed an immediate reply in the affirmative, and that Russia was blameless for the present difficulty.

PERSIA.

The last despatches inform us that the alleged capture of Herat was doubtful. The conferences opened by the English Embassy with Ferouk Khhan appear likely to detain the latter at Constantinople for several months.

The personnel of the English Embassy had left Teheran. The statement that Russia had demanded from the Shah of Persia permission to occupy the territory of Mogania is confirmed. There is also, by way of St. Petersbug, a doubtful report that 50,000 Russian troops, under Gen. Bernloff, are ready to march to the frontier of Persia on the first invitation of the Shah.

The Latest News.

PARIS, Thursday, Dec. 11.

The Debats says, "We believe we are able to state, with some certainty, that England, in entering the Conference, distinctly declared that she would conform to the decision of the majority, whatever it might be. The relative position of the disputants is no secret. On the one side are France, Russia and Prussia, and on the other England, Austria, and Turkey. In the middle is Sardinia, which coincided originally with the opinions expressed by France. It is now stated that she is oscillating between the two.

Arrival of the Europa.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27, 1856

The steamer Europa arrived at her dock at 4 o'clock this day. Her dates from Liverpool are to the 13th—one day later than by the Canada. She passed the Africa on the evening of the 25th.

News unimportant.

The bullion in the Bank of England had increased £75,000.

The specie in the Bank of France had increased.

The fall of Herat was confirmed. It surrendered to the Persians on the 26th October.

The English troops had arrived in the Persian Gulf.

A despatch from Vienna states that France was mediating between the belligerents, and endeavoring to persuade the Persians to yield to England.

Prussia has closed all communication with Switzerland and will make no further propositions.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, JANUARY 1, 1857.

On Monday next it will become necessary, to elect a Council in each municipality. The subject is one of all importance to the public, and deserves more attention than is usually bestowed upon it. It has heretofore been generally the custom in many municipalities to elect councillors irrespective of all considerations as to their fitness for office, and the many and arduous duties which necessarily have to be performed by them, and which are becoming greater each year. Public improvements should be carried out in keeping with the spirit of the age, and only such as are willing to promote them, should be elected.

In the Township of Sandwich it is proposed to re-elect the old set of Councillors, and we have only heard of one other Candidate for the honour of Municipal distinction, and that is Mr. Joseph Mercer of this place. Mr. Woodbridge, the Reeve, has served the Town hip faithfully, and his claims should not be overlooked, Mr. Woodbridge's claims are varied and numerous; in fact, few improvements have been made in the Township, without the assistance and direction of that gentleman. His energy and perseverance as a public man, are too well known to need further praise from us, We hope therefore that so faithful a public servant will not be cast aside, but that his services will again be rewarded, by his re-election.

Mr. Mercer would, beyond doubt, make an excellent Councillor, if elected; his claims are not so great upon the public as those of Mr. Woodbridge, yet we have no fear but that he would exert himself to the utmost in promoting the public good, and with those two gentlemen in the council, we might look forward with some ray of hope, for the future, in this good old Township.

We believe we are safe in saying that the late Councillors, or rather the Councillors that will retire, possess more of the qualifications requisite, than any of the former ones, yet there is room for improvement.

It will not be out of place to say something in relation to the qualification and disqualification of persons wishing to be Councillors, as well as those of the elector. In the first place no person shall be qualified to be elected a Township Councillor who shall not be a Freeholder or House holder of such Township, at the time the assessment was taken, and at the time of such election, seized or possessed of real property held in his own right or that of his wife as proprietor or tenent thereof, which shall be rated in his name on the Collector's Roll; in the case of a Freeholder, to the amount of £100, or upwards, and in case of a Householder, £200. And in incorporated villages, no person shall be qualified to be elected a Village Councillor who shall not be a freeholder or householder of such village, seized or possessed of real property held in his own right, or that of his wife as proprietor or tenant thereof, which shall be rated on such Collector's Roll, in the case of a freeholder, to the amount of £10 per annum or upwards, and in the case of a householder, to the amount of £20; and who shall not be possessed or seized to his own use or that of his wife, of the real property for which he shall be so assessed, either in fee or freehold, or for a term of one year and upwards, situate within such Village.

The persons entitled to vote for Township Councillors are freeholders and householders of such Township or Ward, whose names shall be entered on the said Roll as rated for rateable real property held in their own right or that of their wives respectively, as proprietors or tenants thereof, and who at the time of such election shall be resident in such Township or Ward.—The occupant of any separate portion of a house, having a distinct communication with a public road or street, by an outer door, shall also be considered a Householder, provided he be rated as such upon the Collector's Roll. And when both the owner and occupant of real property shall be rated in respect of such rateable property, the owner and occupant shall both be deemed rated.

The persons entitled to vote at Village Elections, are the Freeholders and Householders of such village, whose names shall be entered in the Collector's Roll as rated for rateable real property, held in their own names or of their wives, respectively, as proprietors or tenants thereof, to the amount of £3 or upwards, and who shall be a resident of such village. It shall not be necessary that the property qualification of Councillors or voters shall consist wholly of freehold or leasehold, provided the aggregate amount at which both shall be assessed shall be sufficient as above. The occupant of any separate portion of a house having a distinct communication with a street by an outer door, will be considered a householder if rated as such. When both the owner and occupant of any such real property shall be so rated in respect of such rateable property, they may both vote. Where real property is owned or occupied jointly by more than one person, and the amount at which the same shall be so rated shall be sufficient, if equally divided between them, to give a qualification to each, they may all vote, if not, no one of them, shall vote.

No judge of any Court of civil jurisdiction, no naval or military officer on full pay, and no person receiving any allowance from the township, county or village, except in the capacity of Town Reeve or Deputy or Councillor, or in capacities incident thereto, and no person having by himself or partner any interest or share in any contract with or on behalf of the township, county or village in which he shall reside shall be qualified to be elected for the same

☞ We are requested to announce that a Tea Meeting in aid of St. John's Church, will take place at Dobson's Hotel, to-morrow, (Friday,) at 7 p. m. Music will be in attendance. Tickets 50 cents. The children will also be entertained the next evening (Saturday,) at 12½ cents each. We bespeak a large attendance.

NEW COMMISSION OF THE PEACE.—The following Gentlemen have been appointed Justices of the Peace for the County of Essex for the ensuing year:—Dennis Ouellette, John McCrea, William B. Hirons, John Watson, Esquires, Windsor. Hugh McFarlain, James Devlin, John O'Connor, Esquires, Maidstone. James Bell, Gilbert Lafferty, Charles G. Fortier, George Wilson, Esquires, Amherstburg. Paul J. Salter, William Scott, Pierre Marentette, James McKee, Joseph Miller, Esquires, Sandwich. Luc Montreul, Luc Ouellette, William Flanigan, Esquires, Rochester. William Mickle, James Lafferty, Samuel Atkins, Robert Anderson John Caldwell, Esquires, Malden. Henry, Cunningham, John N. Peto, Charles Fortier, Esquires, Anderdon. Pierre Desjardins, Eranois Chovin, William Nicholson, Esquires, Tilbury. John Setherington, Francis Awikinson, Jonathan Wigfield, John Lamarsh, Esquires, Mersea. William Malott, Henry Harris, Solomon Wigle, Esquires, Gosfield. Francis Wright, Mathew Ferris, Esquires, Colchester.

In the Gazette it is announced that His Excellency the Governor General has been pleased to order and direct that cloth and other materials required for making up military clothing for the use of the Provincial Militia, be admitted free of duty of customs. Upon the appraiser or other competent person ascertaining the value for duty of cloth or other materials imported and used in regimental uniforms, for private, as well as officer, and that the duty thereon be ascertained and allowed to each company, through the Adjutant General of Militia and Office in charge of the Company, upon the oath of the party, that said cloth and other materials had paid duties of customs on their importation, which had not been refunded.

A notice appears in the Gazette, signed by Mr. Bourchette, Commissioner of Customs, that all railroad companies, having a line or lines of railway crossing the Provincial Boundary, or which have a terminus at or near such boundary, or that have a terminus upon the border of any of the navigable waters of the Province, shall be allowed to transport goods along their respective lines, without such goods being detained at frontier ports, for the purpose of being examined and entered at the Custom House, or without their being detained until frontier bonds are executed, upon such railway companies' complying with and conforming to certain regulations which are given at length. By this arrangement between the Customs Department and railway companies, a great deal of unnecessary delay will be avoided in the transportation of merchandise.

AMATEUR CONCERT.—This concert as announced in our last, came off at the Court House, on Tuesday evening, and gave general satisfaction to a crowded audience, amongst whom we observed many of the fair sex. We have no hesitation in saying, that it was the best concert we have ever had in Sandwich; and the audience, by their continued applause, seemed to entertain the same opinion. The proceeds are to be applied to painting and repairing St. Johns Church, Sandwich. A Tea Meeting, for the same purpose will take place at Dobson's Hotel, to morrow evening, Friday, to which all are invited to attend.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf.

SIR:

My attention has been called by many of the rate-payers of this township to a letter in your last issue from the Rev. E. Denroar, in regard to the application of the money arising from the Clergy Reserves, coming to this township, which we have implicated, as being the instigator of the letter alluded to, which has given offence to many of your readers, and for which I am not answerable. For the information of the parties interested, I will state the facts as they occurred. Soon after we received the money there was an application from the Council by the Building Committee of the new College—built as I am informed for the benefit of the public. They applied for a loan of a large portion of the funds, offering security and interest. On my opinion being asked by the Council, I stated that, however desirous the township may have been to implicate, there was nothing in the municipal statute to warrant us in lending or borrowing, unless we first passed a by-law and took the vote of the people. There was then a resolution drawn up, stating that it was not in the power of the Council to comply with the request, which was carried unanimously by the whole council, and a copy of it handed by me to one of the committee. And there the matter ended, and has not been mentioned in the council since, till the letter alluded to appeared last week. I would also add, that since then I have had a similar application for a Protestant Church. Of course gave the same reason why it could not be done, and that was satisfactory, and it ended there. For my part, I see nowrong in one application or the other,—reading, as we do, from time to time the different views and actions taken by the municipalities throughout the province in reference to the same fund. I will state for the information of the rate-payers, that there is the sum of eleven hundred pounds deposited in the office of the Bank of Upper Canada at Windsor, to the credit of the Township, unlouched, which the Council have agreed to expend during the coming summer in improving the Roads and Bridges, and opening the water courses and clearing out the Concessions, thereby improving the County without being obliged to levy a rate or the people for that purpose. The Council has expended this year nearly £600, and still there is much wanted yet, in this large and wide spread township. If the electors will give us the chance to expend the money we have thus saved, they will see Sandwich township all that can be desired. I must apologize for taking so much space in your columns.

I am, &c.

THE TREATY SETTLING DIFFICULTIES BETWEEN ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES.
